Every official act of the Russian Government up to 1890 was in strict accordance with the promise laid down by Czar Alexander I., but in that year Alexander III., who died a few years later, enacted a series of regulations, which were vigorously carried out, for the avowed purpose of uniting the Finns more closely with Russia. The characteristic features of the coinage, customs and the postal and railway service of the Grand Duchy were done away with, and the Russian language was ordered to be taught in the intermediate schools, in which the study of Russian had before been optional. His pet project, to make the Greek Catholic the state church of Finland, Alexander never carried through, as the promise of receiving "the high privilege to worship in their own (Lutheran) churches" was so obnoxious that an insurrection could not have been avoided had the Czar's officials attempted to grant as a privilege that which every Finlander considers an inalienable, God-given right.

When the present Czar, Nicholas II., ascended the throne, he recognized and confirmed the fundamental laws and liberty of the ancient Grand Duchy, and would probably have continued to do so had he not fallen under the influence of the Slavophile leaders who induced him to issue the tyrannical edict which is at the present time on the point of being enforced. Hitherto the young Finlanders subject to military duty formed regiments of their own, stationed in their own country or at St. Petersburg, but now it is proposed to assign Finnish recruits to Russian regiments in distant parts of the empire so that "they may imbibe the Russian national spirit and lose their local characteristics."

The general diet and state council of Finland, two bodies which have existed from time immemorial, are about to request the nations of the earth to protest to the Czar against the meditated attacks upon the vested rights of the Grand Duchy. It is doubtful, however, whether such an appeal would have good results, even if seconded by all the powers. Evidently the Czar is determined to Russianize Finland, the only province of his vast empire wherein liberty and personal rights find recognition. An insurrection could be easily suppressed by the Russian troops, and unless the orthodox priesthood insists upon the establishment of the Greek Church none is to be feared. The Finlanders are, without exception, old-fashioned Lutherans who would prefer death to giving up their faith. In this respect they are very much like the Scotch Presbyterians.

Half of the population of the duchy speaks the Finnish tongue, one of the chief branches of the Uralo-Altaic family of languages; the other half Swedish. While this diversity has seriously interfered with the progress of the country along commercial lines, it has not divided the people. Intermarriages, centuries of common government, but more especially perfect community of religious interests and endeavor, have united the two ethnically different elements into a homogeneous nationality. Both the Finnish and Swedish literature of the country are remarkable for their strength and marvelous beauty. The national music, too, is grand in conception, although somewhat sad and heavy.

Among the Russians the Finlanders enjoy a high reputation for honesty. In the rural districts crime is unknown, and in commercial dealings the utmost integrity prevails. Education has for a long time been compulsory, and but a fraction of one per cent. of the population is illiterate. This circumstance, taken in connection with the fact that 87 per cent. of the people of Russia can neither read nor write, explains why the Finlanders object to being governed from St. Petersburg.

The capital of Finland is Helsingfors, a city of some 50,000 people, equipped with all modern conveniences, such as telephones, electric cars, race courses, skating rinks and snowshoe courses. Two other progressive cities are Wyborg and Abo.

Commerce and mining are held in high esteem by the Finlanders, but the tillers of the soil are the real aristocrats, even ordinary peasants ranking high in popular esteem. The ruralists are great readers, and every father of a family is expected to be well versed in the Bible, certain religious books and in the traditions of his native land.

That a country inhabited by such progressive people—and where women have for a long time enjoyed almost equal rights with men—should have produced a long line of talented writers is not surprising, the only wonder being that the ubiquitous translator has not given more of them to the outside world.

Russia may crush the people of Finland, but she cannot subdue them. Rugged as the coast along which they were reared, they prefer death to slavery and liberty to gold. The Finnish genius is essentially domestic; in no country has the spirit of family life more influence. Finnish literature centers and culminates in the praise of home. The epic poetry of the Finns (if it can be so called) is simply an epic of home life; and their popular lyrics sound the same dominant note with a sweet intensity. The Finns have lived in Finland about 1,600 years, and their attachment to home is deepened by a passionate love of their country. The sweetest and saddest of their songs have for their burden the misery of exile. For these reasons they take the edict that will send 35 per cent. of their sons to mingle with the ignorant soldiers of the Czar all over the empire as a thing of life and death.

Their Favorite Dishes.

George III. loved boiled mutton and turnips.

The famous Dr. Johnson liked overdone boiled pork, veal pie, with raisins and sugar, and plum pudding, covered with lobster sauce.

There was nothing Napoleon was so fond of as boiled mutton and onion sauce, and he frequently indulged his taste to such an extent as to make himself ill.

Queen Elizabeth made her breakfasts and suppers off of salt beef and ale. In contrast, Mary Queen of Scots, whose tastes were French, had a most dainty table and was luxurious in the extreme.

James I. liked a Scottish dish, cockieleekie. Charles, his son, entertained lavishly. He kept two dozen castles always open and ready for him, and would have hundreds of guests to dinner. Five hundred dishes were always served.

A Remarkable Flower.

A remarkable flower has just been discovered in Siberia. It will grow, it seems, in the coldest climate from frozen earth, and bear fruitful blossoms in the month of January. In the duration of its bloom the flower resembles somewhat our convolvulus, each blossom lasting but a day. The flower is star-shaped when it opens, its petals of the same length as the leaves, and about half an inch wide. The anthers, which are five in number, at the third or fourth day show at their extremities minute glistening specks, which shine like diamonds. They are about a sixteenth of an inch in diameter. These are the seeds. The name is an unpronounceable Russian word.

No Limit to Happiness.

There is no limit to earthly happiness after a rheumatic sufferer has once used Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. Mr. John Clarke, Pittsburgh, Ont., suffered with Muscular Rheumatism in his legs for ten months. He tried doctors and numerous patent medicines without relief. One bottle of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure cured him completely. He has not suffered with the disease since. This preparation is used internally. One bottle contains ten days' treatment, price 50 cents. For sale at all drug stores.

WOMAN'S TROUBLES.

Are usually the result of an exhausted nervous system which can be fully restored by the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. Women made nervous and irritable by the wasting diseases which drain their system find new life, new vigor, new energy, in Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, the world's greatest blood and nerve builder.

He Fooled the Surgeons.

All doctors told Renick Hamilton, of West Jefferson, O., after suffering 18 months from Rectal Fistula, he would die unless a costly operation was performed; but he cured himself with five boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the surest Pile cure on earth, and the best Salve cure in the world. 25 cents a box. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough.

New formed lakes, canals, etc., often become mysteriously populated with fish. This is believed to be effected by birds which, having been feeding on fish spawn elsewhere, alight in the new waters and drop some of the spawn from their bills.

Every penny that is saved from any source is a penny saved for you—if you trade here. All these things in a credit business help to make up "expenses." They are always added to the cost of goods. THE GREAT MOGUL.

The New Fifteen Ton Steam Road Roller in Full Blast.

The new fifteen ton steam road roller from Harrisburg, with all parts adjusted and everything neatly polished and looking spic and span, was taken out of the C. P. R. station yard with a fair head of steam and under two engineers from the foundry was run up to Hunter-st. to start work rolling the stone on the block between Water-st. and the Otonabee bridge. A herald with a red flag was sent on before to keep the road clear. The progres of the great mogul was watched with interest by a big crowd. The rain had made the ground very slippy but the machine went ahead without a hitch. An attempt was made to roll the raise on Simcoe-st. between George and Water-sts., made by the laying of a gas main but the ground seemed too slippery for the somewhat steep angle. Otherwise everything went lovely and the machine gives every promise of good work.

Will Enforce the Law.

As Chief Roszel was taking a prisoner to the gaol to-day he came around a corner, where a young lady was starting up town on her bicycle on the sidewalk. "Hello, young lady, don't you know there is a by-law against that?" said the Chief. The young woman had dismounted by this time and put in the objection that the road was too muddy for riding. The policeman suggested walking as good exercise and the fair one acted on the suggestion. Ladies are warned that they are not exempt under the by-law and will be made to suffer if they break it.

LAKE AND RIVER.

An Addition to the River Fleet of Steamers—Canoes for the Northwest.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. are starting work on a fine steam launch for Mr. C. B. McAllister, building to a fine model. When completed the craft will measure 32 ft. long by 7 ft. beam. She will be equipped with a 6 h. p. gasoline engine, and the interior of the boat will be handsomely fitted up both for comfort, appearance and convenience. The Canoe Co. are to finish and deliver the boat as soon as possible, when she will be put into commission.

The Peterborough Canoe Co. are forwarding to Sudbury four fine cedar rib canoes built expressly for the Northwest service. These boats are excessive in size—for canoes—but that is what the customer ordered. They are built to stand hard work and to carry a large burden. They have been named after clouds, Cirrus, Stratus, Nimbus, and Culumbus, a rather nice idea.

In the finishing room of the Canoe company are two handsome cedar rib canoes built to order for Mr. Dunnel, ex-commodore of the A. C. A. and Mr. Percy Hogan, both of the New York Canoe club. The canoes are beautifully finished with mahogany decks and copper air tanks. Mr. Hogan is one of the firm of Hogan & Son, coal and produce merchants of New York, and who purchased and equipped the steamer "Merrimac," which they presented to the United States Government, and was the vessel that Lieut. Hobson sank across the entrance to the Harbor of Santiago, Cuba.

A Successful Student

Peterborough friends will read with pleasure the following reference to a former Peterborough boy taken from the West to Regina:—"The Methodists of Wascana have certainly every reason to be proud of their pastor, the Rev. R. E. Spence, who adds to his qualifications as a minister of the Gospel those of a student and a scholar. During the year 1897 he was stationed on the Wascana circuit, and although pressed with the duties of an extensive field, he found time to continue his studies in connection with the B. D. course, which consists of thirty-five subjects; and the degree cannot be taken until two years after graduation. Last year he succeeded in capturing the Ryerson prize on New Testament history and took his M. A. degree. This spring he completed the B. D. work, attained that degree and won the Sanford gold medal. This medal is awarded to the person who takes the highest aggregate marks on the entire course and on an original thesis. When it is taken into consideration that Mr. Spence conducted his studies during the brief intervals which he could snatch from arduous mission work in the Northwest, his record is one of which he may well be proud."

COURT UNSEATS HON MR DRYDEN

HOW THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE WON HIS SEAT.

Evidence at the Trial Shows Bribery by Agents and the Election is Declared Void.

Special to the Review.

Whitby, Ont., May 26.—The South Ontario election trial was brought to a conclusion this morning. Several cases of bribery were proved, and respondent's counsel admitting agency. The election of Hon John Dryden was declared void with costs for the petitioner.

The trial opened at Whitby yesterday morning. Owing to the defective memories of some of the witnesses progress was slow, but there seemed to be lots of material out of which to make a good case. It was necessary, however, for the court to order some of the witnesses not to trifle with their oath or they might get into trouble, and after this the damaging evidence was brought out. Divers kinds of crookedness were shown up. As an evidence of the amount of money spent the evidence of L V Richardson, familiarly known as "The Village Lawyer," was interesting. He knew Tim Hewit and they had talked over the question of who had been bought at the last election, and could likely be bought this time. Upon being asked if he had given a a cheque for $150 on election day, witness denied all knowledge of the fact, Mr Nesbit warned him that he would produce the books of the bank and asked him to take back what he had said. Finally witness admitted that he might have done so, but he did not remember.

The ledger of the Pickering Bank was produced and it was found that Richardson had made a cheque payable to his own order, endorsed by him, and the money paid out of his savings bank account, on November 1st, the date that the cheque was issued. This information produced a sensation in court, but the witness positively denied that the money was used for election purposes.

"What did you do with it?" asked Mr Nesbitt.

"I cannot tell," said the witness.

CHRISTIAN AND SCIENTIFIC

THE DOCTRINE OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ABLY AND ELOQUENTLY EXPOUNDED.

Carol Norton, C. S. D., of New York City, Explains the Tenets and Practices of Christian Science to a Deeply Interested Audience at the S. O. E. Hall.

The doctrine of the Christian Scientists was clearly, forcefully and eloquently expounded in a lecture delivered last evening in the Sons of England hall, Hunter-st., by Mr Carol Norton, C S D, of New York city, member of the International Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church in Boston, Mass. The address was given under the auspices of the First Church of Christ Scientist, 414½ George-st. J C Parker, reader, presided. The audience was fairly large, the rain doubtless deterring many from attendance, and all present were deeply interested. Mr Norton lectures at Massey Hall, Toronto, to-night, and at the Metropolitan opera house, New York, on Sunday afternoon.

Mr J C Parker introduced Mr Norton to the audience. He spoke a few words. Christian Science inspires us, elevates us to the Temple built without hands. It helps us to look into the realm of spirit, raising humanity above self into purer and holy desires. It gave Mr Parker great pleasure to introduce a member of the Board of Lectureship, Mr Carol Norton, C S D.

The subject taken for Mr Norton's address was "The Religion and Healing of Christian Science." As great oaks from little acorns grow, said the speaker, and the great truths of life during the early stages of discernment are received and accepted by very few people, all things must seem to have a small beginning. Once the Christian religion was believed by but a few simple men and women. Once it was the unrealized career of a Baby. Even before that it was but the hope of the prophets. Back of that, in the early stages of the Old Testament, came the first faint recognition of one King in Israel, one God of Gods. Therefore, we can trace the Christian religion down to a very small beginning. Yet it is now becoming steadily universal, and, while not yet superior numerically, the best civilization and the greatest works for the uplifting of the race follow the advance of the teachings of Christ as made known by His writers, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. To-day upwards of 2,000,000 believers in Christendom accept the tenets of Christian Science. Over that number have been healed by Christian Science of all manner of diseases during the last eighteen years. The doctrine of Christian Science as now preached took its rise, continued Mr Norton, thirty-four years ago from its discoverer, our beloved leader and friend, Mary Baker Eddy. Thirty-four years ago the principles of Christendom

HAS A RECORD.

Ten Year Old Alfred Kearns in Police Court for Theft.

Alfred Kearns, a freckle faced, sandy haired boy of ten years of age, sat in the prisoners' box at the Police Court this morning and stretched his neck to look over the edge at the Magistrate and officials. He was charged with attempting to rob the till at Mr Jas Long's store the other evening. He pleaded not guilty and seemed to think he was through with the affair. But evidence was taken. Among the witnesses was Chief Rozzel, who stated that Kearns had admitted to him that he had robbed Mr Watt's till twice, Mr Jas Lynch's till and a till in a fruit store near the Carew House. The lad was also concerned in the robbery at Mr Rundle's store a few weeks ago and was out on suspended sentence when he made his raid on Long's. He is a juvenile Jesse James. The Magistrate was inclined to send him to the reformatory for a term of five years, but at the mother's request reserved sentence for a week until the boy's father arrives home.

MEETING CONCLUDED.

Final Proceedings at the Annual Meeting of Methodist Churches.

At the Wednesday session of the annual meeting of the Methodist churches of Peterborough district the reports were read.

It was found that there is an increase of 61 members and an increase in missionary money of $90. Thousands had been raised for the missionary, superannuation, educational, contingent, sustentation, church relief, Sunday school, Aid and Epworth League funds during the year. Some very important elections took place Wednesday afternoon. Rev T J Edmison, B D, of Lakefield, was elected to the Stationing committee, Rev J E Moore, Ph.B, to the Sunday School committee, Rev C H Coon to the Epworth League committee, and Rev D O Crossley to the Sustentation committee, and Mr R W Clarke, of Millbrook, was chosen lay representative on the Conference Missionary committee. The laymen were elected by the Laymen's College to attend Conference, but we cannot furnish the list, the secretary having taken the official record away with him.

At the close of the meeting Rev Dr Cade moved, and it was carried unanimously, that the district express its appreciation of the efficient and cordial manner in which the chairman, Rev S J Shorey, has conducted the business during the year and at this meeting, which was carried by a standing vote. Few men enjoy the esteem of his brethren to a greater degree than Rev Mr. Shorey.

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

Football.

The Y M C A footballers will practice to-night. They expect to meet Norwood High School on their own grounds next week and will make an effort to get in all the work they can before the match.

Wheeling.

Mr. Fred Davidson was down to Kingston for the 24th and competed in the bicycle races, riding a Brantford wheel. He met the cracks from Kingston, Montreal and Rochester and took third place in the mile novice, finishing strong after pacing the whole mile.

Lacrosse.

The Lindsay Post gives the following account of the game in Lindsay on the 24th, but gives the credit of the victory to the Peterborough team and not the Peterborough Juniors, "Peterborough" being engaged at home with Hastings:

"Peterborough and Lindsay teams crossed sticks for the first time yesterday, 24th, and the best team won. Our boys are not at all discouraged over the result, and expect with hard practice to retrieve the lost laurels when they play the return match in Peterborough. The game itself, while not being first class in every respect was a fairly good exhibition considering that over half of our boys had not handled sticks before. Peterborough plays a more open game, and if our boys had checked closer and played more to one another, the score might have been different.

The game started a little rough, but towards the end the boys began to play better lacrosse, and it was more interesting to the 150 spectators from that point out. Peterborough started in to score, and soon had three goals to their credit while Lindsay had done nothing, but with determination they checked closely, and Peterborough had to work for the next two goals, which they scored within three minutes of time. At the next face-off our boys got together for a rush, and with a little combination Dusty secured the ball, shot and scored, thus leaving the score Peterborough 5, Lindsay 1.

THE CITY OF THE SUN GOD.

A Syrian Relic of Pagan Worship and Human Sacrifices.

Baal 'Bek, the city of the sun god, lies at the foot of Anti-Lebanon, in Syria. In order to reach it you must ride many miles over bare brown plain, across ridges hoary with olive and green with mulberry, between massive hills streaked like the zebra. Suddenly out of the silent fields spring mighty walls and pillars—giants who lift their heads into the amber sky. The sight of these superhuman columns, beside which the tallest trees look like blades of grass, fills one with amazement. It is not alone their size and strength and beauty that inspire wonder, but their very existence in such a solitude, far from the track of mankind. We of the nineteenth century—meek dependents on rail and steam—are so in the habit of associating cities with modern means of communication that we are astonished at the presence of massive ruins in the heart of a valley remote from river and sea.

As we draw near our wonder grows, for out of the thick grove, whose dark branches sweep and moan like a troubled sea around the foot of imperishable cliffs, there rise new walls and new columns, massive, ornate, stately even in their heaped confusion. This is the Temple of the Sun, a relic of pagan worship that has looked unmoved on the birth and death of dynasties and faiths. Led as by some strong enchantment, we pass through the grove, whose dark avenues, overgrown with weeds, have echoed with the shrieks of the victims of Baal, lord of the heavens.

There, in the shadow of that poplar, may have stood the molten image, the human figure with a bull's head and outstretched arms, from which children dropped into the fiery lap. "They caused their sons and daughters to pass through the fire." "They made themselves molten images, even two calves, and made a grove and worshiped all the hosts of heaven and served Baal." It is not easy to associate these bloody rites with such splendor of design and colossal workmanship, yet it is beyond dispute that these walls have seen the worship of Baal; that here incense has been consumed in his honor; that his priests, clothed in rich vestments, have trodden these paths; that here mothers have looked on dry eyed at the sacrifice of their children, while the screams of the burning victims were deadened with flute and drum.

Hotel Life in Washington.

At breakfast the other morning a Washington young woman found a little note at her plate saying that her aunt had arrived from the east the night before and was at a well known hotel. About 9 o'clock she went to the hotel indicated and asked the clerk whether the newcomer had been down to breakfast yet. The clerk informed her that he did not believe she had been down and offered to send up a card.

"Oh, never mind doing that!" she replied. "You just tell me the number of her room, and I will go up."

"No. —," promptly replied the clerk, and the young woman took the elevator.

Upon arriving at the door of No. —, instead of rapping, she softly put her ear to the door and listened in order that she might not disturb her aunt if she were asleep. She heard no noise and so took out one of her cards, and after writing, "Will come again at 10—Jane," she tied a little bunch of flowers to it and left it on the knob, where it would fall into the doorway when the door was opened.

At 10 o'clock she came again. The clerk had not seen her aunt and did not believe that she had left her room. So, after looking about the parlors in vain, she went to the door of No. — and softly tapped.

"Who is it?" came a gruff voice, and at the same time a man opened the door and stepped out into the hall.

"Oh, you are the party who was coming again at 10, are you?" continued the man smilingly. "Well, what can I do for you?"

"Nothing, thank you," she replied, "unless you come down stairs and help me thrash that hotel clerk."—Washington Post.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

"Good-heavens!" he cried; "what have I done?"

She heard him, and turned to greet him, the smile lingering on her lips, and the love-light in her eyes.

But the squire brushed hastily past her, bewildered by what he had seen in his daughter's face.

He shut himself up in his own room to think, then said to himself that he must have been mistaken. Sybil was going to be Rupert's wife, and would never look with a thought of love after any other man. Then he remembered all that he had heard against the man. Had he been sleeping or blind to let his child be brought into continual contact with such a man? He, who had guarded her so carefully, who kept her from the society of young girls, fearing they were frivolous; who had dreaded to see her leave for an hour the shelter of her own home! He, by some strange oversight, had allowed her to form the acquaintance of a young man, seductive and handsome, yet spoken badly of, even by his own sex.

Then a terrible fear came to him that chilled his heart, and struck him like a sword—a terrible fear—for he remembered the old proverb:

"Those whom the gods will destroy
They first blind."

He tried to forget the words, but they haunted him; he tried to laugh off his fear, to throw it behind him, to believe that he was nervous, growing old and fanciful, growing weak and wandering—but when he had said all that, the fear was there still.

But time brought comfort. There could not be much harm done, after all. He had been too frightened. A little good amusement, he said to himself, and it would all pass. He might sooner have tried to stop the rolling of the seas or the shining of the sun. But, in his honest simplicity, the squire set to work "to manage" so that no further mischief could be done. Of one thing he was quite certain—not a word must be said to Sybil. The good squire shook his head sagely, thinking himself a great philosopher and a clever diplomatist. No, not a word to Sybil—because women, you see, are so obstinate. To tell her she must not think of the young man was the very way to keep him in her mind. Ah! yes, he knew that. He would not talk to Sybil; he would talk at her, and see what that would do.

He arranged the plan of the whole campaign, and longed for the time of action, which was to be breakfast-time on the following day.

Violet and Irene were there; Sybil came in late, looking fresh and fair as the morning itself. She kissed her father, then began to prepare his tea.

Very cautiously did the squire open fire, going gradually round the neighborhood, finally resting at Ling. He spoke kindly of Lady Marche.

"A pleasant woman," he said, "but without much judgment. She does not choose her friends well," he continued. "That young fellow who lunched with us yesterday, for instance; what induced Lady Marche to ask him to Ling?"

Irene asked why; and, glad of the chance, he replied:

"Because he is not a man of good principle. I am sorry we have made his acquaintance. I neither approve of him nor like him. Of course, being here yesterday, I could not turn him away without luncheon; but I shall never repeat the invitation."

Sybil spoke no word, but he could see a great stillness come over her. The busy little hands stopped. He went on:

"If he calls again, Irene, let the message be that we are not at home. I don't want a man of that kind hanging about the house. We are not at home for the future, mind, when Captain Ayrton calls."

"It will seem strange, papa, will it not?" asked Miss Jocelyn, doubtfully.

"Never mind that," replied the squire. "I have done wrong in allowing him to come at all. I will do wrong no more. Remember my orders, Irene, and obey them."

He never looked into Sybil's face, but he saw the great stillness that came over her; the busy hands ceased to move, and the squire, unable to bear his daughter's pain, rose hastily and quitted the room.

CHAPTER X.

"I WILL BE TRUE UNTIL DEATH."

"I am not surprised," said Violet, as the door closed after the squire. "Captain Ayrton is not quite the kind of man I should care to have always at my house."

Sybil had been silent under the squire's strictures; she was too much surprised for words, but she turned round now with the courage of a young lioness brought to bay.

"Why not?" she asked, with flashing eyes. "Captain Ayrton is a soldier and a hero. Lady Marche invites him to her house; why should he not visit ours?"

"He is a soldier, I grant it," replied Violet, and poor Sybil hated her for her smile; "but I never heard of his being a hero. Lady Marche is not too particular whom she asks to Ling. Captain Ayrton is a great flirt; that is the real reason no men like him and no women trust his word."

"I do not believe it," she cried; "you are unjust, Violet, as papa is. Captain Ayrton is no more a flirt than you are."

"There is no need to defend him so warmly," said Miss Ruthers, with exasperating coldness. "He is very well able to take care of himself—no one more so."

"If I answer we shall quarrel, Violet," cried Sybil. "I will leave you. It is very easy to speak ill of one who is not here to defend himself."

Then she walked out of the room, with the air and carriage of an injured queen.

Violet Ruthers turned to Irene, and the two ladies looked anxiously at each other.

"You will have trouble there," said Violet. "Captain Ayrton generally leaves some such sign of his presence behind him."

"I think we have all been blinded," said the elder sister, with a deep sigh. She, too, had a foreboding of coming sorrow upon her.

Meanwhile Sybil had gone out into the garden, her heart hot and heavy with anger, a dull, wandering pain throbbing in her bosom.

She hardly realized, even to herself, what had happened. She had risen that morning, the music in her heart rising to her lips; the happiness that filled her whole soul shining in her countenance; she had risen to find the world fair and bright. Suddenly all was changed; a dark, heavy cloud had fallen on all around her, the music had changed to discord, the happiness to sharpest pain.

He a flirt? Could they say it? Had those beseeching eyes ever looked into another woman's face as they had done into hers? A thousand times no! How could they misjudge him—who could help it? Was any other man one half so graceful, so gay or so gallant? No one could listen to his voice unmoved; and was he to blame because nature had so richly dowered him, and women loved him for it?

Did they—did any one think he had ever clasped another hand as he had held hers? She longed to do battle against the whole world for him—she longed to proclaim that she believed him the truest and noblest of men.

She could not forgive her father. For the first time in her life her heart was heavy against him. That he should forbid the young soldier his house—that yesterday he shook his hand, invited him to his table and to-day closed his doors against him, seemed to her monstrous.

She did not know what the squire had seen; and the seeming glaring injustice struck her forcibly.

She wandered through the gardens, out to the pretty little shrubbery, on to the Glynn Woods—not weeping, she was too proudly indignant—too angry for tears; her heart was on fire with love and the sense of injustice.

The cool summer air calmed her. She sat down under the shade of the great trees, and while the birds sung thought of all over again—of all that had passed since she had met him over the roses. Great heavens! it was not a month yet she seemed to have lived a long and unutterably happy life since then. Every word, every gleam of his dreamy blue eyes, every look of his face was burned in on her heart, never to be forgotten until her idol was broken, and her love betrayed.

"Oh, my love, my love!" cried the infatuated Sybil; "do they think I could live without you?"

She stretched out her fair arms as though she would hold him against the whole world; then dropped them with a startled cry, as she saw him coming through the woods to her.

She had been thinking of him, and the two whole hours had passed like two minutes. Now he stood before her, with a disturbed, angry expression on his handsome features.

"Good-morning, Miss Sybil," he said. "Pray pardon me if I intrude; one of the gardeners told me he had seen you go into the wood. I have ventured to follow you."

She had risen as he spoke, and he stood erect and bareheaded before her.

"Sybil," he cried, and the tone of his voice changed to one of unutterable reproach—"what does it mean? I went to Glynn this morning to see you, and I was not even asked into the house. What does it mean?"

"It means that they are unjust and unkind," she said. "I have nothing to do with it, Captain Ayrton."

"I knew it," he said. "My own heart told me so. Oh, Sybil, Sybil! my darling, do they want to part us? It is too late!"

Ah! it was too late; before she had time to answer him he had clasped her in his arms—he had kissed her fair brow and her sweet lips until they burned again.

"My own," he whispered, "nothing can part us. Mine in life, mine in death, mine through all eternity! Say you love me, Sybil."

She did not shrink from his passionate caresses as she had done from Sir Rupert's; there was something of the sublime abandonment of love in her pure young face, as she raised it to his.

"You know I love you," she said, simply; "but you will never know how much."

"I can guess," he said, proudly. "What have I done, Sybil, that I should win such a priceless treasure? I have only lived since I knew you, my darling. I should have died if I had been obliged to leave you. You see what the bright sun there is to the flowers? You are that to me. I thirst for your love. I hunger for it. I must have it, or must die."

"You have it," she said, quietly.

"You will be my wife, Sybil?"

"I will!" she replied.

"Even if the whole world is against us—if they try to part us—if they calumniate me, and try to vilify me in your eyes—you will be true to me through evil and good, through trial and sorrow—true to me, if we lose all the world beside?"

She clasped her tender arms round his neck, and laid her golden head on his breast; her great love mastered all reserve—all fear.

NO DODGING HIS ARROW.

No matter how much of a business woman a woman may be, when the little love-god makes up his mind to shoot, there is no protection against his arrow. Yet many a young woman whose affections are already engaged, hesitates to assume the obligations of wifehood and motherhood, because she feels unfitted for them by some physical weakness or disease.

The special ailments to which the feminine organism is liable, not only unfit a woman for happy wifehood and motherhood, but incapacitate her for any sphere of action. No woman can discharge the daily duties of any position with comfort or satisfaction who is constantly weighed down by headaches, backaches and dragging, weakening drains.

Troubles of this nature are not by any means a necessity of womanhood. They are positively and completely cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It imparts genuine health and strength to the womanly organs. It was devised for this one purpose by an eminent specialist in this particular field of practice.

Over 30 years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., saw the need of some simple, effective, and certain cure for so called "female complaint." He was then, as now, a specialist in the diseases of women, and the result of his study and experiments was the marvelously effective remedy known all over the civilized world as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures where doctors have failed. It cures where medicines have been useless. It cures in a perfectly natural way by purifying and strengthening the organs involved. Its cure is permanent. It leaves the whole body in better condition than it ever was. It cures without the local examinations and treatment so abhorrent to every modest woman.

"I suffered for two years with female weakness," writes Mrs. Effie Gillmore, of 1036 So. 18th St., Omaha, Neb. "I had bearing down sensations, headaches, severe pains and general weakness. My friends advised me to take Dr. Pierce's medicines and I have taken nine bottles of his 'Favorite Prescription' and four vials of 'Pellets.' I could notice a change after I had taken the first bottle and now am well and never see a sick day. I had eight doctors and they all said I would have to have an operation performed, but, thank God I did not, and Dr. Pierce's medicines have restored me to perfect health."

"I was run-down with nervous prostration and female weakness, and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Maranda Ramsey, of Smartt, Warren Co., Tenn. "Bowels constipated. My whole system was wrecked. My friends thought I would die. I had read of your medicines so I sent and got the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pellets.' In one week's time I could begin to sit up. In two weeks I could sit up all day, after being so bad that I had to be helped in and out of bed. I have taken four bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two of 'Favorite Prescription.' I took the medicine last winter and have been in better health than I have been for years."

"I wish to express my thanks to you for the good I have received from Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. E. Scovill, of Bolton, Stephenson Co., Ills. "I have used it at different times for the last eight years, but the greatest good received by it was last winter. I think it is the best medicine in the world for expectant mothers. I never tried it for that until with my last baby. I had seen what it had done for other women. I have been so very bad, almost helpless, could not get out of bed alone, or even turn over. Last December I commenced taking your 'Favorite Prescription,' and could get in and out of bed as well as at any time, and on March 20th I gave birth to an eleven pound boy without pain, and have since been as well and healthy as I ever was. I wish every mother could try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at such times. I think it is a splendid medicine for female complaints. I feel that I can not praise Dr. Pierce and his medicine enough."

PECULIAR SENTENCE.

Magistrate Gives Boy Choice of Sunday School or Gaol.

Toledo, O., May 26.—Perhaps the most peculiar sentence ever passed upon a person in the courts of Ohio was passed upon James Firsden in Bowling Green by Mayor A. R. Campbell, who once made himself widely known by fining himself for a misdemeanor. Young Firsden, although 18 years old, has just finished a 30-days' sentence in gaol. When arraigned before Mayor Campbell he was sentenced to attend Sunday school and church for eight weeks every Sunday or go to gaol for 20 days. Upon presenting a certificate from his Sunday school teacher at the close of the time he is further to be paid $1 by Mayor Campbell for his good conduct. On refusal to attend church the boy is to be locked up and the sentence carried out.

San Francisco, May 26.—The American Baptist Educational Society opened its eleventh annual session last night, Rev. T. G. Brownson, president of California College, presiding. The report of the executive board showed that in ten years $1,100,000 had been granted to about 40 institutions in 29 States and the Maritime Provinces of Canada. Kerr B. Tupper of Philadelphia stated in an address that the total endowment of Baptist institutions of learning was over $36,000,000.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters have cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough; every bottle guaranteed.

"IMPERIAL LIMITED."

This Is the C.P.R. Fast Train Which Will Run From Montreal to Vancouver in Four Days—Daily Service.

Montreal, Que., May 26.—The new fast service on the Canadian Pacific Railway will be inaugurated about the middle of June, practically the 18th or 19th. The flyer across the continent will be called the "Imperial Limited," and will reduce the time between Montreal and Vancouver to about 100 hours.

It will also be a daily trans-continental service, instituted owing to the vast increase of travel, and trains will leave on Sundays as well as on week days, this being absolutely necessary to relieve the present heavy traffic on Monday trains with travellers from Europe. The hour of departure from Montreal will be 9.30 a.m. and Toronto four hours later, and Winnipeg and many parts of Manitoba will be brought within 48 hours of this city, local trains in that province making close connection with the "Imperial Limited." Vancouver and Victoria will be reached on the fourth day out from Montreal.

MAKING CHATTELS OF GIRLS.

A B.C. Chinaman Reported to Have Sold Two of His Daughters.

Vancouver, May 26.—R. Odlum writes from Cariboo to The World as follows: "It is said that a Chinaman north of Quesnelle has daughters whom he is desirous of turning into cash. Some little time ago he is said to have sold one of these little girls to a well-known Chinaman at Quesnelle Forks for $250, and within a week or two another was sold to a Mongolian at Soda Creek. In both cases the girls were put into wooden boxes, holes being bored to admit air and delivered like any other goods, or small animals, such as swine. It is also said that white men gave aid to the vendor, both in preparing documents and in delivering the goods. Suppose the above to be true, then it is time the strong arm of the law should reach all parties interested."

JAMAICA AND THE TARIFF.

The Whole Matter Is to Be Talked Over in Washington.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 26.—The Governor of Jamaica, Sir Augustus W. L. Hemming, has received instructions from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, to send two delegates from the Legislature to Washington, there to meet a delegate from London, for the purpose of conferring with the State Department on the whole subject of Jamaica's tariff and reciprocity with the United States. This announcement has considerably allayed public anxiety on the subject of the recent tariff trouble.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY ANVIL CANNON.

Fatality in Connection With That Mode of Celebrating the Day.

St. Thomas, Ont., May 26.—Richard McPharlin, a young man living at Harrietsville, a small village about 15 miles from here on the Credit Valley Railway, was instantly killed Wednesday evening by the bursting of a washer used in shooting two anvils in connection with the Queen's birthday celebration. Another young man named Ward was seriously injured by being hit with a piece of the washer.

had triumphed over slavery, and just at the close of the great civil struggle the voice of this one devoted woman gave the proclamation of the world's salvation. The religion and healing that we call Christian Science is but the scientific, or exact, or demonstrable examination and practice of Christianity. What is Christian living but the principles of Christ applied to the world as to the home, and Christian Science is but its exact understanding, an understanding of the truths of revelation, inspiration, spiritual domination over all things. Such knowledge must give us power over all evil and discord. We are therefore teaching nothing new, but getting at the full truth of the Bible. We are trying to find whether Christian healing is really a lost art. In Christian Science we believe in Christianity according to the Founder. We believe less in the devil than in God, that good is more potent than evil, that truth and righteousness are strongest. We believe in the Bible and from it in the conquest of mind over matter, truth over error, of life over death; that the God of the Bible is one God of Israel, that the God of the New Testament is Christ. We believe that Christ came to fulfil the teaching of the prophets—mercy, judgment and faith. He was loyal to the spiritual traditions of the Hebrews, and yet He was crucified as a blasphemer and a friend of the impure. He was condemned by the materialistic and political thought of the hour. And yet His career was self evidently a career of righteous works, of humane labor, of spiritual and bodily help and He established the practice of Christian religion, which means, in full, spiritual salvation to the soul, bodily healing to the body. Christ healed the lepers without medical means as readily as he cleansed the sinners. The scourage of the world to-day is consumption, "the white plague." In one capital of Europe sits a conference to-day to consider ways and means to stamp out this scourge. Another conference is meeting for the maintainence of the peace of the nations. For both results they must go back to the tenets of Jesus Christ. Christian Scientists are proving Christian Science both religious and scientific by curing millions of people in the world and the process is open to all medical critics.

CHRIST ON EARTH.

Christ never claimed miraculous power. He never worked a miracle. Of thirty-six or seven such supernatural events twenty-six were of physical healing. We know also that Christ cleaned sinners morally. He worked naturally, seeming to breathe the power of spiritual perfection. There is no authority in the Testament for medical practice, and St. Luke, a physician, gave up his drugs and began to work by spiritual influence. The power and influence of good is always a miracle in one sense. The transformation of the savage, the making of the desert to bloom, etc., are all miracles but they are divinely natural. Christ did not come on earth to set aside the laws of Nature and let poor suffering humanity go on with disease and sorrow and loss and poverty and disappointment. Christ said "The works that I do shall ye do and far greater works." "Ye shall know the truth about everything, and that truth shall make you free." To His Christian followers in all time to come He said, "In My name ye shall cast out devils." "They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover."

LOSS OF HEALING.

This healing came down from Heaven after Jesus for three hundred years, proving that it was not supernatural or the possession of His immediate followers, but that it should be for all Christians. It remained till the union of Church and State under Constantine about the end of the third century. The Christians of those days feared no disease. They were persecuted by the Jews and by the Roman power and in all wise were subjected to rejection and persecution. Why? Because they showed a peculiar loyalty to the spiritual teachings of the Master. Christianity had the stamp of Divine origin and it spread under all this persecution.

It is said that persecution is always healthier for a cause than popularity. While the just are made to suffer for the unjust and are persecuted in any way the people are brought closer to God. But when recognized by the State Christianity took on the form of outward pomp and dogmatic disputes. Everyone knows the divisions that have taken place ever since. All know the confusion of the people in so called Pagan lands when they decide to become Christians at the many forms shown them. But really the spirit of Christianity is one.

SIN AND DISEASE.

There should be no incurable diseases as there are no incurable sins. Jesus believed that as sin was a moral error, disease was a physical error and one is as easy to God to cure as the other. Christianity was once but a healing. Christ taught not that sickness was sent as a moral discipline. He said and proved that He not only bore our infirmities but our sickness and taught us to believe that we should as well be healed from the ailments of the body as freed from our sins. The whole basis of Christian work is in the words, "Go forth and preach the Gospel." And the very next sentence reads, "Heal the Sick." Is this not as pertinent as the other? Why should the Christian who goes farther than the other be condemned for believing more thoroughly? But it is not only a belief and hope but its efficacy has been proved. The Christian Scientists have established five hundred churches in the last eighteen years and nine tenths of the people of these have been cured of diseases.

POWER OF FAITH.

We are told that the efficacy of prayer lies in faith. "According to the faith that is in thee be it unto thee." Everybody has to have faith of some kind. Christian Science represents faith in the eternal power of God, faith in the spiritual means above the physical means, and if prayer is spiritual communion with God, then Christian Science healing is wrought through prayer, scientifically applied to the recognition of the power of God. This healing of the sick, being a vital part of the Christian religion and a matter of individual rights, cannot be illegal. The death rate in the city of Chicago has decreased one half during the past twelve months and it is an interesting coincidence that there are five thousand cases of Christian Science treatment given in that city each day.

PHYSICAL HEALING.

Christian Scientists believe more in the Bible than most Christians. They have more faith in the divine means of Christ than in quinine and oil. Why? Because almost all have felt the cure. When bound on a bed of disease and to be lifted out of the open grave by the power of some earnest Christian healer then we can say, "Whereas I was blind now I can see." The speaker himself was healed by Christian Science when he was a great opponent of it. This was after the very best doctors had failed on him and since 1890, and after fifteen years illness, he is now strong and hearty. This physical healing, while really the minor part of Christian Science, is perhaps that part which most appeals because to many there is nothing so convincing as an ocular proof. The three steps in materia medica are allopathy, homoeopathy and metaphysical practice. Homoeopathy represents the gradual elimination of the drug element and the introduction of the mental (as similar cures similar.) Metaphysical practice eliminates in its entirety the drug element and is operative on mental and psychical lines. The operative power of Christian Science is not hypnotic or along the lines of mental therapeutics but through the operation of the Divine mind, alias God.

IT IS CHRISTIAN.

Christian Science is Christian because it is seeking to re-establish the whole of Christianity. It affirms that Christians need in this age the undivided garment of Christ, the physical healing of His religion as well as its power for moral regeneration. Christian Science accepts the truth of the immaculate conception of Jesus Christ, His divine incarnation, Messiahship, the genuineness of the recorded, but miscalled miracles, His resurrection and ascension, but at all times and under all circumstances antagonizes the idea that the works and demonstrations of Jesus Christ's miraculous power were suspensions of law. Jesus promised that the works which He performed should be repeated by his followers in all ages. It claims a gospel of good cheer, freedom, progress, liberty, liberalism, optimism, courage, hope, faith. It elevates the great cardinal virtues of character, honesty, purity, unselfishness, love, patience, philanthropy, and selfless service to a suffering world. Christian Science is Christian because it makes the imitation of Christ practical to every sincere religionist.

IT IS SCIENTIFIC.

Christian Science is scientific for two simple reasons. First, because it is a rational understanding of the mental laws through which the divine Omniscience, alias God, governs the universe including man. Second. Because it gives ocular or physical evidences of certain well-developed spiritual laws heretofore considered unprovable and purely speculative. Christian Science is scientific because it starts with a reasonable premise, rears a consistent superstructure, and proves the actuality of its conclusions. Because good is positive evil is negative, and because mind is causation what is called matter must be effect.

CONTAGION OF HEALTH.

Mr. Norton gave many instances of cures of various kinds from Christian Science treatment, which are open to public investigation.

Christian Science teaches the radical idea of universal mental causation and contends for the contagion of health and righteousness rather than the continued spread of disease and depravity as the only contagious elements of existence. By reducing what we call matter to its lowest denominator, especially through the operation of the ex-rays, we find that it is but an externalization of the human mind and can be governed by mind. By resolving what we call matter and structural life into its primary mortal mind elements, then by bringing the human mind under the spiritualizing control of the divine mind, Christian Science scientifically dissolves a cancer and restores the waste substance of diseased lungs.

CONCLUSION.

Christian Science is simple Bible Christianity. It proves itself right and catholic in its practice. The lectures on it are given in the hope if the understanding of the power of the mind over the body (not hypnotism nor mental therapeutics), the efficacy of spiritual processes, that the struggle of the world is not hopeless. Christian Science teaches that Christianity as taught by Christ is physical healing as well as spiritual salvation. It is a religion of love. It teaches the great drama of atonement. It does not stand for anything denominational. It stands for temperance, righteousness, good government, freedom, liberty, optimism, hope, faith, purity of literature, sanitary reform and progress and for all that purifies the body and transforms the soul until the ideals of Christ are realized. To Mary Baker Eddy as the torch-bearer of these good new days in which we live, to her as a scriptural teacher, reformer, and religious founder, not only the world of Christian Science, but universal Christendom is deeply, yea profoundly indebted. Thirty-three years ago as a religious devotee, as an aspiring woman and a studious and humanitarian medical practioner, the higher aspects of the religion of Jesus dawned upon her consciousness and she has generously shared the great gift with her fellow-beings. If human experience, loss and the continuation of earthly strife has made distant the simplicity of the religion of our Saviour, let the truths of Christian Science lead to a sober investigation of its tenets.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hemnick & Co., of Shelby, N.C. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, at 50 cents and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

FLOWER AND TREE.

The clove pink, that spicy, cheerful, single hearted flower, was the ancestor of all the carnations.

The largest flower in existence grows in Mindanao, one of the Philippines. It is three feet in diameter and is called "the man of the lake."

The smallest flower known to the botanist is said to be that of the yeast plant. It is microscopic in size and is said to be only one-hundredth of a millimeter in diameter.

Curiously enough, the apple belongs to the rose family, and how it was transformed into a stout tree is a mystery. It is supposed to have been indigenous to northern Russia in remote times and to have spread from there.

Overwatering is a prolific source of rust in begonias, a disease which soon destroys their beauty. They do not like drought, but a sodden soil, badly drained, quickly affects the beauty of their foliage. Water should not be put on the leaves.

A WONDERFUL MULE.

Why General Meigs Wanted a Thousand More Like It.

"It is mighty difficult," said an old fashioned sergeant, "to keep the accounts of an army post exactly straight, particularly those of the western posts. Hundreds of things are bound to turn up missing and simply can't be traced, yet the government requires an elaborate accounting for each particular article, and until its forthcoming the quarterly report isn't approved. So it became a favorite custom out west to carry such shortages on the books until we had a small fire.

"It didn't make any difference how small it was or how quickly it was put out; it was sure to burn up all the trouble, some odds and ends that nobody had been able to find, and they were set down in the reports as 'lost in fire.' Sometimes there was an opportune Indian uprising, in which case 'lost in raid' answered equally well for clearance purposes. There was no fraud about it. It was simply a handy way of getting around a piece of preposterous red tape, and that reminds me, by the way, of a comical little story.

"In 1878 Lieutenant Wheeler was sent down to New Mexico to make a geological survey, and when he came back to his post he reported among other details that one of his pack mules had tumbled over a precipice in the mountains. There had been no fire or raid for a long time, and the entry 'lost on mule falling over precipice' immediately became frequent on the quartermaster's books. Later on the regular report went in and came back duly approved, but across the face of the document was a singular indorsement, written by General Meigs, quartermaster general of the United States army.

"'You are hereby directed,' it ran in substance, 'to purchase 1,000 mules of the same breed and carrying capacity as the one lost by Lieutenant Wheeler, it appearing from the within report that the said mule at the time of its decease by falling over a precipice was engaged in transporting 88,500 pounds of miscellaneous supplies.'

"After that epistle Wheeler's mule became famous as the champion of the department of the west."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Put Your Finger on Your Pulse

You feel the blood rushing along.
But what kind of blood? That is the question.
Is it pure blood or impure blood?
If the blood is impure then you are weak and languid; your appetite is poor and your digestion is weak. You cannot sleep well and the morning finds you unprepared for the work of the day. Your cheeks are pale and your complexion is sallow. You are troubled with pimples, boils, or some eruption of the skin. Why not purify your blood?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

will do it. Take it a few days and then put your finger on your pulse again. You can feel the difference. It is stronger and your circulation better. Send for our book on Impure Blood.
If you are bilious, take Ayer's Pills. They greatly aid the Sarsaparilla, They cure constipation also.

Write to our Doctors.
Write them freely all the particulars in your case. You will receive a prompt reply, without cost.

ROSA BONHEUR IS DEAD.

Death of the Celebrated Painter of Animal Pictures.

London, May 27.—A special despatch from Paris yesterday says that Rosa Bonheur, the famous animal painter, is dead at Fontainebleau.

Rosa Bonheur earned her first money in copying the paintings of old masters, working early and late helping to support her family. Her first animal picture was a goat, which pleased her so much that she gave up copying and took up animal painting. Models being too expensive for the slender purse of the young artist, she would tramp miles to a farm, carrying a meagre lunch in her pocket, to sketch an animal. When only 19 years old she sent her first picture to an art exhibition, and at once was pronounced a genius.

The gifted artist was born at Bordeaux, France, March 22, 1822, and was the daughter of a French artist of some note in his own country. In her childhood the family removed to Paris, where, in 1848, she established her reputation by two fine pictures, "Chevres et Moutons," and "Les Deux Lapins." These were followed by other striking works, until, in 1855, she exhibited in London, England, the "Horse Fair," the most widely known of her works. Other important pictures by her bear the titles "A Foraging Party," "On the Alert," and "The Lion at Home." She was decorated with the Legion of Honor on June 10, 1865. In January, 1880, the Leopold Cross was conferred upon her by the King of the Belgians. This was the first time a woman had received the honor. She was also the recipient of medals of honor from the King of Spain and other rulers, and from most of the art academies of Europe and Great Britain.

The Baptist convention in Toronto on Friday discussed "The State of Religion." Defects and blemishes were unsparingly indicated with a view to their remedy, and in the afternoon Rev. Dr. Thomas poured the vials of his ire on the higher critics.

Careful estimates show that each year there are interred within the limits of the city of London about 180,000 human bodies.

The effort to make sugar from beets dates back as far as the year 1747.

China Preparing to Fight.

London, May 27.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail says: "Orders have been issued from Pekin directing the Viceroys and Governors of the neighboring provinces to put all their forces on a war footing, owing to the arrival of six Italian warships in Sanmun harbor. It is thought also that the Chinese propose to drive the Germans from Shantung peninsula."

TO CURE TOOTHACHE IN A MINUTE

A LACK OF PREPARATION.

The Peace Conference Is Not Making Much Headway.

The Absence of Details Hampers the Clear-Cutness of the Discussions—Russia Trying to Get on Top—British and American Proposals Are Definite, But the Others Are Behind—Sir Julian Plays His Trump Card.

London, May 27.—All the despatches to the morning papers from The Hague show that the peace conference is suffering from lack of preparation. The Muravieff circular contains heads and chapters, but no details. Its author emphasized disarmament, but slighted arbitration. M. de Staal, in opening the conference, absolutely reversed this order. What is wanted is something for daily wear and tear.

The Daily News says: "The British and American proposals, though simple, are more practicable than the scheme of M. de Maartens of the Russian delegation, and it is likely that France and Russia, and even Germany, will ultimately agree with them."

Serious Differences.

The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at The Hague says: "Serious differences of opinion have been manifested between the United States representatives and those of certain powers on the subject of discussing the seizure of private property at sea. The Americans insist upon the discussion, agreeing to abide by the voice of a majority in the decision, but they will not have the matter ruled out of court. They say: 'We, a sovereign power, came here to discuss matters not in Count Muravieff's circular, but in that of the Dutch Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. de Beaufort. We were not invited by Russia, but by the Dutch. M. de Beaufort's circular asks us to deliberate upon the points mentioned in Muravieff's circular, and also upon certain other issues, of which this is one. Therefore, we must thresh it out.' I heard last night that, in order to prevent a misunderstanding, the Americans will be allowed their way."

Sir Julian Played Trump Card.

London, May 27.—The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at The Hague says: Peace prospects touched highwater mark to-day, when the conference found itself face to face with arbitration in a practicable and acceptable form, and as a permanent international achievement. This honor is mainly due to Sir Julian Pauncefote. When the members of the arbitration section had finished reading the Russian proposals on this subject Sir Julian expressed his complete approval of them, but said it would be a great pity if the conference failed to embody the principle of arbitration in some permanent shape.

"I now beg to propose," he said, "the formal establishment of a permanent arbitration tribunal, empowered to deal with all matters in dispute capable of reference to the judgment of an umpire. I do not intend to trouble you with details as to its mechanicism to-day, nor until you accept the principle of my proposal. Therefore I ask you to accept the principle now."

M. de Staal at once declared: "Sir Julian Pauncefote, having presented his proposals, we are prepared to supplement and to complete the printed suggestions just distributed by others, dealing with a permanent arbitration board."

Thereupon the Russian President of the Conference drew a paper from a pocket and laid it on the table then and there. The paper contained the foundation of a permanent tribunal suggesting the substitution of a new clause, and referring to an appendix not yet drawn up.

The amazed delegates crowded around Sir Julian, congratulating him upon having played the winning card, which had so quickly precipitated the Russian alternative scheme. Some stood aghast, as the matter was not contemplated in their instructions.

Finally it was decided to refer the matter to a sub-committee.

MUST HAVE A LARGER ARMY.

Americans Cannot Hold the Territory They Win From the Filipinos.

Manila, May 27.—The events of the past week have emphasized the need of a much larger army here, without which, according to the best authorities in Manila, it would be attempting the impossible to attempt to establish American supremacy in the Philippine Islands. The inadequacy of the American forces is said to be responsible for the large total loss in the number of small encounters, without material results as compensation. Most of the fighting has been in territory which the Americans had swept, but have been compelled to abandon because they could not spare troops to hold it. The insurgent generals take the loss of arms more to heart than they do the loss of men. Foreigners who have arrived here from the insurgent country, under the recent order of expulsion, say the cemeteries in all the towns are filled with fresh graves. A majority of the Filipino wounded die, because the insurgent hospitals are inadequate, medicines are scarce, and they have few surgeons, except Spanish captives who have been impressed.

Zamboanga Evacuated.

Madrid, May 27.—The Minister of War, General Polavieja, has received a despatch announcing the evacuation of Zamboanga, Island of Mindanao, by the Spanish garrison. The despatch further said that, as the Spanish had declined to assent to the Filipino demands that the arms and munitions of war should be surrendered with the city, fighting ensued, the Spaniards suffering some loss. The despatch adds that the natives continue bitterly opposed to the idea of American annexation, and that the conquest of Mindanao will prove to be a tough task.

A Hot Little Skirmish.

Manila, May 27.—A scouting party of American troops encountered a body of insurgents at Santa Rita, and the Americans being reinforced by Brigadier-General Funston, with the South Dakota Regiment, a warm fight ensued. A lieutenant and five men of the American force were

MR. COSTIGAN'S TROUBLES.

Ex-Colleague of Sir Charles Tupper Finds His Voice.

Now Warned by Cartoons—He Says He Changed His Politics the Day One-Half of the Bowell Cabinet Resigned—Sir Charles Replies Warmly—John Ross Robertson Prepares an Epitaph for the Ex-Conservative Member.

Ottawa, May 27.—Yesterday afternoon Hon. John Costigan gave his reasons for leaving Sir Charles Tupper and the Conservative party, replies being made to him by Sir Charles and Mr. John Ross Robertson.

Mr. Costigan's Statement.

On the orders of the day being called, Hon. John Costigan (Victoria, N.B.) said he felt compelled in justice to himself and friends to make a statement rendered necessary by certain newspaper articles which attributed to him improper motives for his change of seat and change of attitude towards the present leaders of the Conservative party. He then replied to the attack of The Evening Telegram (the paper of the hon. member for East Toronto, Mr. John Ross Robertson), and said that the only time the old Conservative party was in opposition was when Sir John Macdonald resigned in 1873 up to the time he resumed power in 1878. During that time he had given proof of his fidelity to the Conservative party beyond the possibility of cavil of The Evening Telegram of Toronto. He asked if it was fair that the hon. member (Mr. John Ross Robertson) should attack him in his paper when he had the opportunity of doing so in the House of Commons. Speaking of the cartoons of that paper, he remarked that "the great advantage that man has is, that it is out of my power to retaliate, for there is no artist in Canada or on this continent who can make a cartoon of that gentleman's countenance that will not be flattering to him." (Great laughter.) He then replied to The Mail and Empire's remarks upon his course by reading what Sir John Macdonald said of his having "ratted" in 1884 in reply to the inquiries made by Mr. Blake on the subject. The interview in The Mail and Empire with Sir Charles Tupper next claimed his attention. He charged that Sir Charles had ruined the Conservative party, and said: "The day he sailed from England, and especially from the day he landed in Canada, the doom of an honest Government and the leadership of an honest man was sealed. The fate of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's Government was sealed. A great deal has been said about the manner of his connection with this transaction, a history that will be written and a history that will form one of the darkest pages that can be written, so far as all those who were intimately connected with it at the time are concerned."

He said that he changed his politics the day one-half of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's Cabinet resigned, and that, although he was a member of Sir Charles Tupper's Cabinet, he only entered it on the written condition that the remedial bill would be re-introduced if the Conservative party was successful. He felt aggrieved at the attitude taken by the leader of the Opposition and some of his old friends, and said that, although a man of peace, he gave notice that from this day forward he would defend himself. "I am a man of peace," he said. "I never was a quarrelsome man, but I am not a peace-at-any-price man, and the man that follows this up and strikes me, if he does not get blow for blow it is because old Costigan is getting too old." (Laughter and applause.)

He defended his votes on the Yukon and Drummond County Railway questions and on the question of the charges against Major Walsh, which he characterized as a piece of "political bungling," which had lost Brockville to the Conservative party by the policy of Sir Charles Tupper, whom he described as being "cheered by a strong contingent of his own supporters to-day, who have no more confidence in him than I have." He claimed that he had worked hard and long for the Conservative party, and had given hard, honest work for every dollar he had received, and in concluding a speech of over three-quarters of an hour, said: "I have not fired my last shot nor struck my last blow."

Sir Charles Tupper.

Sir Charles Tupper, in reply, said he regretted the course taken by the hon. gentleman who had just taken his seat, not personally, not for the Conservative party, but for his (Mr. Costigan's) own sake in the position he had attained in this country. He thought the member for Victoria should have made the statement long ago, when, in fact, he stood up and voted against his old Ministerial colleagues and party. He had not broken the peace until the hon. gentleman had gone to the head of this country with his story, and then he was bound to indicate the causes of his defection. The speech of the hon. gentleman in the House on the 2nd April, 1897, in which he said he owed nothing to the Conservative party, could not be otherwise regarded than as an intimation that he was open to suggestions from hon. gentlemen opposite. He made the break on an occasion that bound him as a Conservative to stand

THE REVIEW

A Subtle Plea.

While Sir M. E. Grant-Duff was governor general of Madras a judge imposed a fine on a native Christian. The latter had no lawyer to defend him, but he put forthe following remarkable plea: "Your honor may be right, I may be wrong; I may be right, honor wrong. Let honor give me back the fine, and then at day of resurrection, when all hearts will be open, if I am wrong I will most gladly, sir, return your honor the money."

A TRIP TO THE ETERNAL CITY

here is unique. The galleries of Zoology are arranged in an handsome new building and the specimens are very interesting to look at.

The readers of Carlyle's French Revolution will visit with special interest the Place de la Bastile, the site of the Bastile St. Antoine. This stronghold built in the 14th century was used as a state prison chiefly for the confinement of persons of rank who had fallen victims to the intrigues of the court or the caprice of the government and attained a world-wide celebrity in consequence of its destruction on 14th July, 1789, at the beginning of the French Revolution. The Place is also a noted spot in the annals of two subsequent revolutions. The site is now marked by the handsome Colonne de Juillet erected in honor of the heroes who fell in the revolution of July, 1830. After taking a snap shot of the Column I laid my kodak down somewhere and forgot it. I reported the loss to the police, however, and have entertained a very high opinion of Parisian police force ever since, for on the third day afterwards the camera was left at the Hotel Americain.

Space will allow us to mention but one of the many Parisian theatres The claque or paid applauders form an annoying although characteristic feature in most of them They generally occupy the centre seats in the pit, under the chandelier or "lustre," and are easily recognized by the obtrusive and simultaneous vigor of their exertions There are even 'entrepreneurs de succes dramatiques,' a class of merchantile adventurers who furnish theatres with claques at stated terms. The Opera House is now the largest theatre in the world covering an area of nearly three acres. The site alone cost £420,000, and the cost of the building amounted to £1,460,000, There is hardly a variety of marble or costly stone that has not been used in its construction. Sweden and Scotland have yielded a supply of green and red granite, from Italy have been brought the yellow and white marbles, from Finland red porphyry, from Spain brocatello, and from different parts of France other marbles of various colors. The grand staircase may be inspected in the "entr' actes." The steps are of white marble, and the balustrades of rosso antico, with a hand-rail of Algerian onyx. Thirty colored monolithic marble columns rise to the height of the third floor. The Salle or theatre itself is fitted up in the most elaborate style. The boxes, of which there are four tiers, are decorated in red, while gilding prevails nearly everywhere else. The gallery forms a fifth story. The magnificent and curious shaped lustre contains 340 burners. The ceiling paintings are very fine. The stage is 196 ft. in height, 178 ft. in width and 74 ft. in depth. The opera stands at the end of a very handsome street, the Avenue de l' Opera.

Paris has a very fine omnibus and tramway system. The busses are generally drawn by three horses abreast. There are both horse-trams and steam-trams but no electric trams. They are very generous in giving transfers. One of the best features is the absence of over-crowding. As soon as every seat is taken the sign complet' is put out and none is allowed to get on for love or money. Contrary to the London custom the seats inside cost more than those on top. The former cost 30 centimes or 6 cents, and the latter 15 centimes or 3 cents.

The French are very fond of flowers and there are some magnificent flower markets in the city. The one at the Madeleine is very fine. The women are very industrious; they wait on their customers and when not thus engaged, are busy with their knitting and of course gossiping at the same time. The French roses are especially fine, and are even better than English roses.

Paris has the name of being a very wicked city. Vice there may be, and no doubt is, but it must be said that it certainly does not flaunt itself on the highway as it does in London. Nowhere have I seen public order or decorum better observed. The public dancing establishments such as the Moulin Rouge, the Jardin de Paris, and the Bal Bullier would no doubt cause a lot of talk in say Toronto the good, but they cause no comment in Paris. Eat, drink and be merry for to-morrow ye die and let others do the same, seems to be the motto of the gay, pleasure loving hysetical Frenchmen. The lic building at Paris, both architecturally and on account of its priceless treasures of art I have left until the last. It is well worth the time and expense of a visit to Paris, if one only sees the Louvre. For an artist or sculptor, a walk through its galleries, must be a source of the greatest pleasure and a realization of his fondest dreams. It is a palace of vast extent and is divided into two parts the old and the new. The older has been the scene of many memorable historical events. The Louvre was connected with the Palais des Tuileries but the latter was burned down by the Communists in 1871, and the former was much damaged by fire, the imperial library of 90,000 vols. and many precious Mss. being destroyed.

The history of the Louvre collections dates from the time of the French monarchs of the Renaissance of the 16th century, who paid enthusiastic homage to Italian culture. To the Revolution however, the collections of the Louvre are chiefly indebted for their great extent of magnificence. The principle of centralization was then for the first time applied to art collections and various treasures distributed throughout the royal palaces, in churches and the suppressed monasteries were united here in 1793. When the French armies returned to Paris from Italy, the Netherlands and Germany, laden with treasures of art the Louvre collections became par excellence the museum of Europe. In 1815 some were restored to their owners but many fine paintings and statues still remained and the collection can still boast of being the most extensive and valuable on the continent.

There is too much in the Louvre for a tourist to see. It takes two hours to walk through the rooms without stopping. Too many pictures produce the same satiety as the too many tombs in Westminster Abbey. There can be no profit and there is less pleasure in filling the mind with a hopeless jumble of pictures. It is advisable to spend a short time each day and not try to see it all.

I was much amused at a party of American young ladies 'doing' the Louvre. They carried their heads rather high and had a what-did-Dewey-do-to-them expression in their faces. If they had not raved so much about Raphael and Titian, Rubens and Rembrandt, they might have passed for art critics; and if they had been content to use their mother tongue, they might have passed for French scholars. They would look at the number of the pictures and find the corresponding number in their catalogues, mark it so as to remember they had seen it, pronounce it to be perfectly lovely, or very sublime and walk on and at the present time no doubt are at home ranting about the glorious pictures they saw in the Louvre. The reader has no doubt seen this class at home trying to look wise and pleased at a concert where classical music is being given.

The collection of ancient sculpture, though inferior to the great Italian collections, boasts of a number of works of the highest rank. We will mention one, the most celebrated of the treasures of the Louvre the Venus de Milo. Of this statue Lubke says: "This is the only statue of Aphrodite handed down to us which represents her not merely as a beautiful woman, but as a goddess. The form is powerful and majestic, and yet instinct with an indescribable charm of youth and beauty, while the pure and noble expression of the head denotes the goddess's independence of all human requirements and the calm self-sufficieney of her divine character. The fact that this beautiful work, notwithstanding its great excellence, is not one of those which have been specially extolled by ancient authors, affords us an approximate idea of the beauty of those lost masterpieces which formed the great marvel of antiquity.

The statue was found in 1820 by a peasant in the island of Melos now Milo and sold for 6000 francs.

The Egyptian Museum, the most important collection of its kind in Europe, affords, as far as is possible, an almost complete survey of the religion, the customs, and the art-life of the most ancient of civilized nations.

The Asiatic Museum contains one-half of the yield of the excavations made on the site of the ancient Assur and Nineveh. Most of the sculptures belonged to the palace of King Sennacherib.

The picture gallery of the Louvre, the saloons of which have an aggregate length of five furlongs, comprises about 2500 select works, almost every school being represented by numerous masterpieces.

The great masters of the Italian School Leonards da Vinci Titian and Raphael are well represented. No gallery in Europe is so amply supplied with works of Raphael as the Louvre. With specimens of Titian's works in all his various styles the gallery is amply provided.

The late Flemish school is magnificently represented by Rubens, by whose brush the gallery possesses 21 large scenes from the life of Marie de Medicis.

The Dutch masters of the 17th century have some good specimens especially Rembrandt. There are numerous excellent landscapes in this collection. The Spanish and French schools are also represented.

Room IV. like the Tribuna in the Uffizi gallery at Florence contains the gems of the collection. The ceiling is richly sculptured. This room should by no means be missed, as the masterpieces of all the great masters are to be seen here.

There is to be seen a fine collection of drawing, numbering 37,000 in all by the great masters. There is likewise a most complete collection of antique pottery. The Musee de Marine contains a very valuable collection of various objects connected with shipbuilding and navigation. There is a host of other things in the Louvre which it would take years to look at properly.

From the Louvre west to the Arc de Triomphe is the finest part of Paris. Among the objects of interest are the gardens of the Louvre. Then the monument of Gambetta, a lofty stone pyramid with a group in high relief representing Gambetta as organizer of the national defence. Farther west is the Place du Carrousel with its Arc de Triomphe du Carrousel in imitation of the Arch of Severus at Rome, to commemorate Napoleon's victories of 1805 and 1806. The arch was originally crowned with the celebrated Quadriga from the portals of St. Mark's at Venice, brought thence as a trophy but restored to Venice in 1814. Then we come to the site of the Palais des Tuileries burned by the Communists in 1871. The ancient palace was rich in historical associations, especially those connected with the overthrow of the French monarchy in 1791—92. The Swiss Guard lost their lives here in defence of the King on Aug. 10th, and from here the King three days later was conveyed as a prisoner to the Temple Tower whence he was only released to be led to the scaffold.

The Jardin des Tuileries is the most popular promenade in Paris and the especial paradise of nursemaids and children. To the west of the Jardin lies the Place de la Concorde and west of that the Champs Elysees leading to the Arc de Triomphe.

Space will not permit us to mention the Hotel de Ville, the city hall of Paris, a building which is very rich in historical associations and constantly mentioned by Carlyle. We have also omitted mention of the Palais du Luxembourg now the seat of the French Senate and surrounded by the beautiful Garden of the Luxembourg. The Musee du Luxembourg is also worth seeing as is also the Musee de Cluny.

We spent more than two weeks in Paris and enjoyed the sights very much. Before leaving the gay French capital the reader will pardon me for saying a few words about France as a nation. The great curse of France and obstacle to her progress is her crushing armament. Her population is 38,517,975 and her army on what is somewhat ironically called the peace footing is 615,413 or one soldier for every 63 inhabitants. In proportion to its population the French army far surpasses any in Europe. Russia with the largest army in Europe has only one soldier to every 150 of the population. How heavily, therefore, is France handicapped by every group of 12 or 15 families maintaining in idleness an able-bodied professional soldier and supplying him with the most costly appliances! Out of the life of very Frenchman the government takes three years for compulsory military service. Again France spends $4 per capita annually for the army and only 70 cents per capita for education. On a war footing the army numbers 2 1-2 millions or 1 soldier to every 15 inhabitants.

The Gallic mind with all its brilliance, keenness and finesse has little firmness and continuity of purposes.

A Paris statistician announces that there have been 39 changes of cabinet during the 28 years of the French Republic involving 530 ministers. This is at once a cause and effect of much of the hysterical vacillation of the French people. There can be no settled policy in such a constantly changing government. It is like a rope of sand without unity or strength. The only fixed idea of the French people is antipathy to Germany and to "perfidious Albion." If she would drop these antipathies and cultivate friendly relations with these countries she might reduce her crushing armament and become a humming hive of industry.

Too much power is wielded by the boulevardiers of Paris, the sensation-mongering press, and the Jew baiting legislators. The ultimate appeal must be made to the honest bourgeoisie and peasant proprietors who are kind and generous at heart, industrious and frugal, and possess many domestic and social virtues.

Recent events in the history of France cannot fail to call forth sympathy and regret in every friend of that once noble and chivalric nation. The civil and military corruption and fraud exhibited from the Panama scandal to the Dreyfus trial are omens of ill for the future of that land. If the fountains of justice be assailed the fate of the nation will be seriously imperilled.

Whilst the chief peril is from the military classes, the great army bureaucracy, which seeks promotion and wealth or perchance to conceal its frauds or regild its tarnished honor by precipitating a revolution at home or war abroad there are other elements of weakness. One of the chief of these is the relative decay of its population. At the time of the Franco-Prussian war the German Confederacy and the French Empire were not unequally matched in numbers. At the present rate of progress the German population will soon outnumber two to one that of France. Compared to the brawny German soldiers the French are undersized and look like inferior fighting material. The more rapid and sturdier growth of the Teuton as compared with the Gaul is only the natural result of the superior social rivals. The increasing use of absinthe is sapping the strength of the entire population.

Another cause of the decadence of France is the fact that religion has not regained control over the French people since the time of the Revolution. At that time the Christian Sabbath was abolished, the name of our Lord was obliterated from the calendar. A "Goddess of Reason" was enthroned in Notre Dame, on the tombs was written "Death is an eternal sleep." At present the Sabbath is the fete day for army reviews, races, and regattas, as it is in Spain for bull fights. Few men are found in the churches and Sunday is a gala day at the theatres.

If we cannot yet say of France that she is visibly retrograding, it can, at any rate, be said that she has become stationary in a world where not to advance is almost the same thing as to recede. Neither in population, nor in social development, nor in political growth is the French nation holding its own among the progressive people of the earth. We can hardly help tracing the influence of those deep-rooted characteristics of that Latin temperament which France inherits in common with Italy and Spain—its levity and impulsiveness, its lack of balance and measure, its intolerance of discipline and authority, its deficiency in the homely qualities of patience and prudence, of perservnace and self-control. Far be it from us to say that the allotted part of these three nations is already played out, that we may close the book of their history, as Spain, in directing the removal of the remains of Christopher Columbus from the cathedral of Havana, is with pathetic symbolism closing hers. Yet we cannot but fear, though years may have still to pass before it is executed, their doom is written, and that the Latin race, considered as an actor and factor in the human drama, is destined to disappear as completely from the stage of history as the August mother who gave it birth.

Overworking the Telescope.

Lady Theodore Guest, in giving an account of her crossing the Rocky mountains, tells how hard her aneroid barometer was worked in showing the heights to which she climbed. This reminds her of the story of a telescope once owned by a Somersetshire farmer.

The old man, remarking to a friend at a local race meeting that the gentry nowadays had glasses for both eyes, he added that he "had had one once for one eye, a right good one it was, but now it was no use at all—no, not to nobody."

"Why not?" asked the friend.

"Well," he said, "it were a good one—I could see miles wi' 'en—I could see plain the steeple of the church five miles off. But missus' son John, he borrowed 'en, and he tried to see the steeple of t'other church, ten miles off—and tried and tried and couldn't. And that strained it, and it were never of no use any more—no, not to nobody."

"O. K."

For the origin of "O. K." James Parton, the historian, is authority. While at Nashville in search of material for his history, Mr. Parton found among the records of the court of which General Jackson had been judge, a great many legal documents indorsed "O. R.," which meant "order recorded," but often so scrawlingly written that one could easily read it as "O. K." If "Major Downing" noticed a bundle of papers thus marked upon President's Jackson's table, documents perhaps from this former court, in which he still had interest, it is very easy to see how a punster could imagine it to be "O. K.," or "oll korrect."

She Costs Money.

"Dear girl," he said rapturously.

"If it's just the same to you, George, I would prefer not to have you use that adjective," she returned.

"Why not?" he demanded.

"It reminds me too much of what papa sometimes says to me."

The human voice may be heard at a distance of 150 yards, a military band 2,500 yards, a rifle 5,300 yards, and a cannon 35,000 yards.

THE LIGHT THAT SAVES.

One dark night during the siege of Santiago Harbor a Spanish Torpedo boat darted out under cover of darkness to launch its deadly missile against an American war vessel. If she had been struck she would have gone to the bottom. What saved her? Was it her big 13-inch guns? No, it was her search-light: the dazzling white beam of light that shot straight out like a sword-thrust through the darkness, revealed the approaching danger.

What is it that saves thousands of men from death every day in the year when the deadly foe of disease is creeping unsuspected upon them? It is the white light of science; the educated understanding that reveals the source of danger and indicates the exact point of attack.

While the ordinary doctor gropes around, with the feeble tallow-candle light of stereotyped, conventional, routine treatment, a physician like Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., instantly illuminates the subject with the clear day-light ray of practical knowledge; the irresistible search-light of advanced and life-sustaining science.

"I was afflicted for four years," says John F. Zingsheim, Esq., of No. 9 Lark St., Amsterdam, N. Y., in an earnest letter to Dr. Pierce. "My suffering was extreme and the trouble gradually increased notwithstanding the fact that I tried many different kinds of treatment. After becoming physically inexpressible and unable to work at all, and after much hesitation, I wrote you. I am very happy to state that your advice has done me great good. You advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and also his 'Pleasant Pellets.' I must here state that they have cured me. I wish to thank you most heartily for what you did for me. All suffering has vanished and I have gained about twenty-five pounds in weight. I used only one bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and one vial of the 'Pellets.'"

NEWS of MR. WIDEMAN

One of the Most Remarkable Cases on Record.

Mr. Wideman's Health has Shown no Disposition to Break Down—All Further Anxiety Relieved—Dodd's Kidney Pills Insure His Life.

DUNTROON, Ont., May 26.—Some time ago we published an account of Mr. A N Wideman, of Nottawasga Township, and of his rescue from a painful death. It will be remembered that Mr Wideman was crippled, both legs being paralyzed. His body was swollen and sores had developed from continual lying in bed. One of these was poulticed 500 times before it healed. His condition was so distressing that he could not change his position. His legs were twisted out of shape, his toes pointing inwards. His weight decreased by forty pounds. This state continued for five months.

The doctors treated him for inflammatory rheumatism but failed to improve his condition. Indeed, to the contrary, their medicine made his teeth break off. He was finally given up by the doctors and all but one of his friends to die. That friend was the friend indeed.

Mrs John Boyer induced him to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. From the first he improved. He simply had to improve. Rheumatism is caused by impure blood. Impure blood is caused by defective kidneys failing to strain it. Dodd's Kidney Pills get at the root of the disease by making the kidneys healthy.

Well, this was some months ago. Mr. Wideman is still in good health. A great deal of anxiety was felt by his friends as to whether the cure would be permanent. The diseases as shown no inclination to return so far, and we may add the impression is that as long as Mr Wideman keeps his kidneys working properly it will not reoccur. This case has caused wide-spread comment in and about Duntroom, and has made Dodd's Kidney Pills a household word.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are for sale by all druggists, at fifty cents a box, six boxes $2.50, or sent, on receipt of price, by The Dodd's Medicine Co, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Masses of tulle in one, two or three colors are piled on countless new hat shapes.

Royal, Roman, iris, morning glory, silver, marine, army, cornflower and lobelia are among the varied shades in blue that are popular this season.

New trimming laces in ficelle, ecru and cream white, both in edging and insertion patterns, have the designs outlined and bordered with a hair line in black chenille.

A very old fashion is revived in making the overskirt and portions of the bodice of one material and the underdress and additional parts of the waist and sleeves of another.

On many of the new gowns the blouse effect still appears, but only on the front of the waist and with little or no droop above the belt. The back in every instance is close and trim.

The crape effects are to have another season of favor in the gauzes, grenadines, silk- and wool semitransparent materials used for waists, guimpes, yokes, fichus, entire toilets and sleeves.

All sorts of fanciful open fronted jackets and basque bodices are to prevail this summer, and the dainty, sleeveless blouse vests, tucked and lace edged pinafores and shirt waists provided to wear with them cannot be counted.

French tailors are making some pretty little coats much after the old styles called "spencers." They are formed of black satin lined with thin but firm surah. The jacket fits as snugly as a dress bodice at the back and is open fronted and shaped by single, very deep darts.

The round waist in many very pretty styles remains one of the leading models for the summer, but the bodice, with small points slightly rounded, is likewise fashionable, and as a rule is preferred by those who wish to look as slender and long waisted as possible.

It Never Disappoints.

People who are troubled with any disease caused or promoted by impure blood or a low state of the system may take Hood's Sarsaparilla with the utmost confidence that its faithful use will effect a cure. Millions take it as a spring medicine, because they know by experience it is just what the system needs.

Hood's Pills are the best family cathartic and liver tonic. Gentle, reliable, sure.

THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY.

The London-Washington Negotiations Seem Also to Have Reached the Joint High Commission Stage.

London, May 27.—The Foreign Office officials confirm the statement made by the New York correspondent of The London Times to the effect that the negotiations with the Canadian Government on the subject of Alaska have reached an almost hopeless stage, owing to the insistence of the Canadians that they receive a slice of Alaska, which apparently precludes any agreement being reached on the subject between the American and Canadian high commissioners. The evening newspapers have reproduced the New York despatch with comment, generally regretting the situation, but objecting to the conclusion that Canada is blamable.

Canadians Should Not Yield.

The Globe says: "The Canadians would be far less patriotic than they are if they yielded to what they consider to be an unjust and undefensible demand for the sake of the establishment of more friendly relations with their big neighbor." Continuing, The Globe remarks that The Times, "by publishing its correspondent's unjudicial summing up, has adopted the surest way to inflame public opinion on both sides of the Atlantic."

The Westminster Gazette says: "We certainly hope a better face can be put on things, so far as we are concerned. But the deadlock seems very serious."

American Politics in It.

The St. James' Gazette thinks American politics are playing an important part in the situation, and says: "The Republicans are disposed to a friendly arrangement with England, but it must be on terms so favorable to America that the Democrats will have no excuse to say they yielded their interests to Great Britain."

A Denial From Washington.

London, May 27.—The Washington correspondent of The Morning Post says: "I am informed that the statement representing that State Departmens officials have reported the Alaskan boundary dispute as hopeless are absolutely untrue. The Administration has been exceedingly annoyed by the attempts made to obstruct an agreement, and hope that no credence will be given to newspaper articles circulating such rumors."

INCLINED TO RETALIATE.

United States Government Is Inclined to Be Ugly Towards Canada.

Washington, May 27.—There is little doubt that the United States Government is inclined to retaliatory consideration against Canada by the discouraging results of the negotiations in London, looking to the clearing of the field for the reassembling of the joint Canadian commission. It is gathered that the British Foreign Office, which had seemed desirous to meet Mr. Choate's advances in the spirit of compromise that promised well, has been again influenced by Canada's refusal to agree to anything less than a concession of all of their demands, which has stopped all progress.

The Department of State has referred to the Treasury Department the arrangement of a plan to protect the interests of the United States, and a decision from Secretary Gage is expected very soon.

The Treasury Department has now two courses open, both being retaliatory. The first is the preparation of an amendment to the Tariff Act, largely increasing the duties on lumber and forest products imported into the United States from Canada.

Possibly Another Course.

There is possibly another course. A section of the Dingley Act authorizes the United States Government, in cases where the countries impose an export duty, to add the equivalent of such export duty to the import on such goods coming to the United States. The Ontario Government is not imposing, in so many words, an export duty on logs, but it has prohibited their exportation. The question before Secretary Gage is whether this prohibition may not be regarded as in principle the same thing as an excessive and therefore prohibitive export tax. If this view is sound, the Treasury has already at hand the measure of retaliation it seeks, in the shape of an order prohibiting the importation of Canadian logs into the United States, which would bear very heavily upon other provinces in Canada outside of Ontario.

Both President McKinley and Secretary Day hope that Sir Julian Pauncefote will return to Washington with such instructions from Lord Salisbury as will insure the speedy settlement from there.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Over one-third of the business portion of Staples, Minn., was burned on Friday night, over 25 buildings being destroyed.

With the return of spring to Dawson City come renewed fears of pestilence and death. Stringent sanitary measures are being adopted.

The attempt to float the Paris on Friday resulted in another failure. The Paris is in the same position, which is now regarded as very critical.

The Ohio Sash & Door Company's big factory was destroyed at Cleveland on Friday. The total loss is about $100,000, partly covered by insurance.

E. C. Shorey, a graduate of Queen's, Kingston, has been appointed food commissioner and analyst to the Board of Health of the Hawaiian Islands.

Rev. John Munroe, B.A., a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, has received and accepted a unanimous call to the Presbyterian Church, Trail, B.C.

Former U.S. President Benjamin Harrison, who is acting as the legal representative of Venezuela on the boundary commission, which meets in Paris on June 15, has arrived in that city.

Three Cambria workmen were literally cooked to death by an explosion at the blast furnaces of the Cambria Steel Company's plant in Johnstown, Pa., on Friday and three other workmen were badly injured.

Jim Humphreys and his two sons have been found hanging to a limb of a tree near Bassette, Texas. The Humphreyses lived two miles west of Athens. Details of the triple lynching cannot be obtained at present.

One man was instantly killed and another so badly injured that he died in a hospital on Friday morning by the explosion of a steam cylinder in the dye-[illegible] & Co., Philadelphia.

Fire started early Friday morning in Buschman's Pavilion, Coney Island, New York, and spread rapidly until seven blocks of frame buildings, 20 in all, had been destroyed. A conservative estimate of the loss places it at $750,000.

Mrs. Frank Glass and her 4-year-old son lost their lives on Thursday in a well. The child accidentally fell in and was drowned. Mrs. Glass jumped into the well in an effort to save her boy. The child was dead in the mother's arms.

Despite the set-back given them by the defeat of the good roads bylaw on Thursday, the members of the Hamilton Board of Works have determined to spend all the available money for putting down tar-macadam pavements. The amount available is $39,000.

"The battle of the Jordan" was fought on Friday by Canadian troops divided for the purpose into "Red" and "Blue," on the march from Hamilton to Camp Niagara. Major-General Hutton, as umpire-in-chief, expressed his approval of the work of the "citizen soldiery" on this occasion.

The Grand Trunk trackmen's strike shows really no change in situation, beyond a strong hope on the part of the men that the matter may be submitted to arbitration. The officials of the road at Montreal will not make a statement beyond saying that they are filling the places of the strikers with other men.

Mrs. Mary Harrison, a widow, who resided with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Sharp, Toronto, was run down and instantly killed by a G T R freight train near the Don Station on Friday afternoon. The victim was crushed and mangled in a dreadful manner. Eyewitnesses say that the woman deliberately threw herself in front of the locomotive and thus ended her life.

Rioting in the Leewards.

London, May 27.—Advices received here from Guadeloupe, the French West Indian island of the Leeward group, report a recurrence of serious rioting between the native population and British contract labor immigrants, which culminated in the recent fire. Continuous fierce fighting is said to have taken place on the plantations, and the police and military, it appears, cannot suppress the disturbance. Several fatalities are reported. As a result the British consul there has appealed to Great Britain for that protection for British subjects which the local Government is seemingly unable to afford.

Pleasure's Penalty.

When the doctor gives one up, most people lose heart, but it was not this way with the young society woman in a western Ontario city who had contracted kidney trouble through lack of care in "wrapping up" after an evening's round of pleasure. She heard of South American Kidney Cure and pinned her faith to it to cure her and in an incredibly short time felt her health returning. Her suffering abated, and three months from the day her physician hinted her case was hopeless she presented herself to him a cured woman. Sold by H S. Macdonald and Ormond & Walsh.

Was It Sensibility?

Now, for my part, I do believe that the worst tempered persons in the world are less [illegible]gh sensibility than selfishness. They spare nobody's heart on the ground of being themselves pricked by a straw. Now, see if it isn't so. What, after all, is a good temper but generosity in trifles, and what, without it, is the happiness of life? We have only to look round us. I saw a woman once burst into tears because her husband cut the bread and butter too thick. I saw that with my own eyes. Was it sensibility, I wonder? They were at least real tears and ran down her cheeks. "You always do it," she said.—Browning Letters.

Queer Language.

"You beat a man when he gets the worst of it," says the New York Commercial Advertiser. "You worst him when you get the best of it. That is to say, 'to beat' and 'to worst' mean exactly the same thing. Curious is language and its de-[illegible]"

"The Commodore."

Toronto Telegram:—Walter J English, business manager of the English Canoe Company, Peterborough, and member of the Executive of the Northern Division of the American Canoe Association, has been in the city for several days, and was greeted by his many friends, and returned to the town in the east last night with a nice bunch of orders in his pocket. Mr English, as might be expected, is an enthusiastic canoeist, and his Toronto friends expect to see him gain the highest position in the Northern Division very soon. Already his admirers have begun to call him "Commodore," in order to be able to use the word with freedom at the proper time.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters have cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough; every bottle guaranteed.

"PIMPLY" FACES.

What a Bane—But Dr. Agnew's Ointment is a Sure Cure.

Chas. H. Lilly, 413 Lazerne-ave., W Pittston, Pa., writes: "I am a barber and meet many people troubled with pimples. I have tried many preparations claiming to cure such, and without success, until I used Dr. Agnew's Ointment. Within the last few weeks I have used it on three very stubborn cases, and in each case it has made a cure; has cleaned off all the pimples and blotches, and left the skin clear and soft. It's the greatest skin remedy I've heard of and a boon to 'pimply' faces. Sold by H. S. Macdonald and Ormond & Walsh.

Of Course It Seems Strange

The way we are doing business here—Cash Only, is strange, but think how much better prices it lets us make for you. It brings us goods at the best possible cost. It wipes out everything in the way of bad debts. It saves almost all the expense of book-keeping. If simplifies the store management. Every penny that is saved from any source is a penny saved for you—if you trade here. All these things in a credit business help to make up "expenses." They are always added to the cost of goods. If the store gets along those who buy its goods must share in all these extra burdens. They do not know when they pay them as they are hidden in the prices put on goods. You save money by buying of a Cash Store.

REMINISCENCES OF A PIONEER

Mr Patrick Leahy Recalls Some Interesting Facts in Connection With the Early Settlement of This District.

If long continued residence in one locality entitle the individual to be known and referred to as an old citizen, then certainly Mr Patrick Leahy, of Douro, is deservedly accorded the title and honors. Mr Leahy is one of the original settlers in the township of Douro at a time when the forest primeval covered the land and only the surveyor's pathway and the aboriginal trails gave access to the district.

Mr Leahy was in town on Friday and gave the Review some interesting particulars, the more valuable and reliable in that they come from an eye witness and participant in the events and privations incidental to the early settlement of the town and county. Mr Leahy is still hale and hearty and lives on the land where his father located nearly seventy-five years ago. He has been township treasurer of Douro since 1859, a period of forty-one years, very much longer than the average office holder retains office. But then the stuff that Mr Leahy is made of is above the average.

Mr Leahy came out to Canada as one of the Robinson emigrants, leaving Ireland from the Cove of Cork, with his father and two sisters in the year 1825. The party of emigrants, a very large number for those days, sailed to the new land in nine ships. Of these Mr Leahy remembers the "Fortitude," of Scarboro (in which he had passage) the "Resolution," of London; the "Alvin," a brig with two masts, and the "John Barry," of Cork. The other five vessels were an assorted lot of three and two masters, fitted out for the purpose in view. They did not all sail at once, but were despatched two ships together with an interval of a day between the sailings. Leaving Cork on May 10 they reached Quebec on June 27, the voyage, a long and tedious one, occupying forty-nine days.

From Quebec they reached Montreal by steamer, and were sent on to and housed for some time at Lachine, just above Montreal. The distance to Kingston was made in open boats, batteaus, they were called. A steamer brought them on as far as Cobourg, and a few days after, in rough wagons, they reached the shores of Rice lake, somewhere about where the village of Harwood now stands.

The trip across Rice lake and up the Otonabee was made in open boats, such as could be made available, including punts, log canoes and scows. Scott's Plains, now Peterborough, consisted of one small log house and a saw mill, both of which stood where the factory of the Peterborough Canoe Co. now stands. Presently a dash was made for the locality where they were to take up land, and of the privations and hardships involved Mr Leahy gives a vivid description.

Each settler of 21 years of age and over was allotted 100 acres of land. Mr Leahy, being at that time only 11 years old, did not share in the distribution. The land secured by his father was lot 6, in the 7th concession of Douro, and in this neighborhood a great many farms were located. Seven of the Leahys in one group drew land to the extent of 700 acres. This was held by Mr M Leahy and four of his sons—100 acres each, Mr Leahy's father 100 acres and another M Leahy 100 acres.

Mr Leahy's recollection is that about one hundred people, all told, settled in Douro that year. Of these there are now nine living, seven men and two women. All of course were children at the time of the settlement, several of them being very young. The men surviving are Messrs Thomas Sullivan, David Quinn, John Torpey, William O'Brien, John O'Brien, John Crandley and Patrick Leahy. The women surviving are Mrs John Torpey and Mrs Patrick Leahy. It is interesting to note the ages at which these survivors were deposited in the wilderness, to grow up and work out a future, and they are as follows:—Thomas Sullivan, 2 years; David Quinn, 3 years; John Torpey, 11 years; W O'Brien, 7 years; John O'Brien, 11 years; John Crandley, 2 years, and Patrick Leahy 11 years. It would be a breach of confidence to state the ages of the ladies.

HARDLY PROPER

To Offer a Boy a Medal for Attempting to Save His Own Brother.

The gentleman who has been corresponding with the Royal Canadian Humane Association regarding the case of Eddie Wall, who so bravely attempted to rescue his little brother at the Rogers dam' has received the following reply from Mr H P Dwight, chairman of the investigating governors of the association:—

DEAR SIR,—Yours of 19th inst is received No doubt the elder Wall boy showed a good deal of bravery in attempting to rescue his younger brother, but I doubt if any award of the R C H A would be in order or advisable. It seems hardly a proper instance to offer a man a medal for attempting to save the life of his wife. Such an offer might be considered almost an insult. Medals of the R C H A are awarded for bravery and presence of mind more especially when shown in a disinterested manner. Although in some cases it is difficult to draw the line I fancy that it would not be with the most perfect satisfaction that Eddie Wall would in after years exhibit any award made him for attempting to save the life of his little brother. While fully recognizing his brave and brotherly action, I hardly think it would be advisable for us to take any action in the matter.

Yours, etc.,
H P DWIGHT.

Some East Durham Liberals with a Good Job in View.

The Liberals of East Durham have a plum to pick, the possession which is causing a hard fight. It is the position of Registrar made vacant by the death of the late G C Ward. The applicants are numerous, but it is said the choice lies between W H McCallum, formerly reeve of Hope, now clerk of that township, and one of the staunch Reformers of the riding; Major William McLean, of Port Hope, once a staunch Tory, then a McCarthyite and now a Reformer, and a candidate for the Commons against T Dixon Craig, in 1896, and W S Pickup, a former reeve of Millbrook. Samuel Grandy, of Cavan, has the patronage, by right of his being the Liberal candidate at the last provincial election, and the general opinion is that he will name W H McCallum.

He was Given an Ovation.

Belleville Sun, May 25th.—Conductor William H. Morris, of Lindsay, is the general favorite of all the youngsters about the station, and yesterday they decided to give him an ovation on his arrival. When the train came in he was met by about 100 boys fantastically attired, led by Master Tom Gorman, who was a fierce representative of a wild scalp hunter. A chariot gorgeously decorated was in waiting, and to this the amazed conductor was escorted and seated in it. He was then presented with a Union Jack and a bouquet and was drawn in state to a nearby vacant lot, where a boxing tournament was given for his amusement. To say that the genial "Billy" was surprised is putting the matter very mildly, but he managed to find words to make a very neat speech to the boys.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles, has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hemnick & Co., of Shelby, N.C. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, at 50 cents and $1.00.

WEARY OF EXPERIMENTING.

With salves, suppositories and ointments and dreading a surgical operation, scores and hundreds have turned to Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment and found in it an absolute cure for piles. The first application brings relief from the terrible itching, and it is very seldom that more than one box is re-

G. T. R. STRIKE.

Strikers Think Officials are Trying to Tire Them Out.

There is nothing new, so far as can be learned, in the strike of the Grand Trunk trackmen, either on the Midland division or on the main or other lines. All who quit work are still out. A number of Italians, who are working at York yards, are guarded by policemen.

The strikers are receiving assistance from the engineers and firemen, who have sent word to the company that the lives of the travelling public are in danger by allowing the tracks to go without proper and prompt inspection daily. The danger from broken rails and washouts in rainy weather is also pointed out, and the engineers don't feel disposed to run any risk going over the road at the speeds the rules compel them to travel at the present time. In reply to the engineers' statement the company say that the road is being looked after by competent men and that the men are always paid for over time.

The executive of the Trackmen's Brotherhood issued a circular last night to the men all over the system, in which they express themselves as confident that they will win.

BAND NOTES,

The Battalion Band will run an Excursion to Niagara.

A preliminary announcement is made that the 57th battalion band has decided to run an excursion to the brigade camp at Niagara, which will be held about June 20th, and where about 10,000 or 12,000 soldiers are expected to be present. Particulars will be forthcoming later and the date should be reserved.

Bandmaster Gliddon expects to hold the first concert in Victoria Park next Friday evening if the deluge is over by that time.

It will be learned with pleasure that the band will be considerably strengthened shortly, bringing it about to thirty-five men. A number of new instruments will be added including an oboe, which Mr E Hodgson will play, and an alto clarinet, which will be of great value in the soft and delicate parts. Mr Gliddon has also had in training a clarinet class which will be added to the band.

The band stand in the park is badly built and situated acoustically and if something could be done to improve this the change in the music would be such as to amply repay the trouble and expense.

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

Cricket.

The Lakefield cricket club have organized for the coming season with the following officers:—

President—R C Strickland.
Captain—Geo B Hilliard.
Vice-Captain—John Cooper.
Secretary-Treasurer—E R Tate.
Managing Committe—Messrs M L Strickland, T Ridpath, J W Ridpath, G B Hilliard and John Cooper.

The club have organized under very favorable auspices, and it is expected that the season will be a very successful one.

Tennis.

The grouping of the Provincial Tennis League has been arranged, Lindsay is in District No. 12, with the following clubs:—Uxbridge, Peterborough, Port Perry, Sunderland and Cannington. There are 14 groupings altogether, and the winners of each group will play off the finals in Toronto. The teams will consist of four players each, and will play home and home matches, 6 events being a match. This competition will be very interesting, and should rank this excellent game among the leading sports.

Lacrosse.

In speaking of the game at Orillia on the 24th the Markham Sun says—Orillia then resorted to their old tactics of rough play and Barlow and Doyle received nasty cuts on the head. The boys deserve great credit for the game they put up and if it had not been for rough play would have won. Churchill of the Orillia team refereed the game and gave Markham a good deal the worst of it.

The touring Toronto team with which Lionel King is playing, defeated Cornell University yesterday by 7 goals to 4. The Americans played good lacrosse.

Brevities.

—The Central Charity Board will meet on Monday evening at 7.30.

—Rev. H. Symonds will preach in St. John's church to-morrow evening at 7 p.m.

—The continued rains are greatly delaying the seeding operations in the country.

—A local clergyman this week married a widow of seventy-four and a spinster of fifty-nine.

—There was a good market this morning considering the nature of the weather and the state of the roads.

—It is expected that the planking of Capt. Reynold's new steel hull steamer at Lakefield will be done next week.

—Chief Roszel has in his possession a lap duster found on the street on Thursday last. The owner can secure it at the police station.

—The Committee on Supervision of Police was called to meet this afternoon. The matter of summer clothing for the police was to be the topic.

—The wet weather is greatly injuring the excursion business and business at the summer resorts is dull to what it should be at this time of year.

—A great crowd of sightseers surrounded the steam roller at the market for good and ill with much enthusiasm. It was quite an attraction.

—Thoughtless people (and they have a vast membership) often get substitute packets palmed off upon them simply because they are careless to watch carefully for the name "SALADA" on every genuine sealed packet. Then they suffer for this by getting poor results in the cup.

—The Ministerial Association of Owen Sound has asked the Town Council to forbid Sunday funerals to the municipal cemetery, except in the case of contagious diseases. They advanced the argument that funerals were often a form of unnecessary Sunday labor, and were a growing evil.

—J. J. Turner & Sons have just made a sail for their schooner "Wave Crest" and anyone that has not seen a sail schooner on Lake Ontario it is worth their while to walk down to J. J. Turner & Sons' factory and see this sail as it is only one of the smallest sails on the vessel and there is nearly two hundred yards in it.

Charged With Theft.

County Constable Cochrane made an arrest this morning on the market. Geo Valois, of Ashburnham, has been wanted for about a year on a charge of stealing a watch. The warrant has been in various hands but it came lately into the possesion of Mr. Cochrane. He was on the lookout for this man and recognized him this morning. The prisoner was remanded by Magistrate Edmison till Monday.

Kerosene on the Carpet.

If you spill kerosene on the carpet, don't leave it to "evaporate." Cover the place an inch deep with bran or cornmeal and set enough hot irons to cover the spot. Let stand until the irons are cool, then sweep off the meal, and usually there is no trace of the spot. If there is, repeat the operation. Unless the oil is removed the dust settles into it and makes a bad looking place in the carpet.

THE ODORLESS

CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1898.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddon, February 28th, 1898.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

MR. COSTIGAN'S TROUBLES

with his party, when three continents were ringing with charges of the gravest character affecting the Government of this country.

Some hon. members—Oh!

Sir Charles Tupper—Yes.

Some hon. members—Oh!

Sir Charles Tupper—Yes, three continents ringing with charges of the gravest character that affected the Government of this country, charges more grave than these hon. gentleman opposite appreciate, but which at no distant date they will appreciate. At that hour the hon. gentleman (Mr. Costigan) voted against a motion to appoint a royal commission into these charges, and, sir, when the Government opposite were convicted of nepotism, he came to the front to protect them from a most scandalous dereliction of duty. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Costigan) on that occasion for the first time allied himself openly in this House with the men who said "We will not permit an investigation into the conduct of officials, charged with the gravest official misconduct. We will not do that unless you will allow us to select the wife's uncle of the man held responsible by this House."

Some hon. members—Oh!

Sir Charles Tupper—Yes, it was a shame. (Laughter and applause.) Was there ever a greater scandal than for a Minister of the Crown, charged with a gross dereliction of duty, to select a person so closely identified with him and his family that he could not, unless he were more than human, discharge his duty? It was a shame and it was a scandal that is clinging to the skirts of this Government.

Sir Charles then devoted some time to the claim that before he entered the Cabinet of the speaker he (Mr. Costigan) had received a stipulation of justice to the Catholics of this country, and he claimed that he had always given them, as all other people where he could, fair play and justice. Mr. Costigan was ungrateful in leaving the Conservative party led by him on this issue, for it had fought the battle of the Roman Catholics of this country. Sir Charles continued at some length defending his course since he returned to Canada in 1896, claiming that he had acted according to the traditions and in the best interests of the Conservative party, and speaking "More in sorrow than in anger," of Mr. Costigan's defection, for which, he said that gentleman had entirely failed to give any good and sufficient reason.

Mr. John Ross Robertson also replied, and after a tribute to the Irish race, he closed by saying: "I hope the time is long distant before he is gathered to his fathers, when his monument should bear this epitaph, 'Here lies an Irishman who was faithful to the Conservative party so long as the Conservative party was on a dividend-paying basis.'"

In response to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's request, Mr. Costigan withdrew his motion to adjourn, but not before Sir Henri Joly had assured Sir Charles Tupper that there was no shadow of reason whatever to suspect either him or Mr. Costigan of having been guilty of a dishonorable bargain.

The Drummond Railway Bill.

Dr. Russell then resumed the debate on the Drummond County Railway, speaking for an hour in support of the same, and was followed by Mr. R. R. McLennan, who spoke in general condemnation of the bargain.

Sir Charles Tupper spoke at great length, saying that the Government had made a very bad bargain, which would have been worse but for the Senate, and severely criticizing Mr. Blair.

Hon. Mr. Fielding followed and the debate was continued by Messrs. A. C. Bell (Pictou), Morin and Borden (Halifax), after which the resolution passed through committee and was reported.

After some routine matters had been attended to, the House adjourned.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

"I will be true to you until death," she said.

And she kept her word.

She never remembered how long they sat there; this world was never to be the same to her again. She had gone into fairy-land, a world of glamour, love and romance. She sat with him under the trees, listening to his passionate love-words. So happy—so unutterably happy—the pity was she did not die then and there, with her joy fresh upon her.

"We shall have trouble," said Lyster Ayrton, at last. "I am sure they will try to part us. Your father does not like me, Sybil—how is it?"

She looked up to him with a passion of blind idolatry.

"I think he will like you now," she said. 'He thought you were a flirt—some one positively said so!"

"And he thought I was flirting with you?" he cried, with sorrow in his voice and laughter in the eyes she could not see.

"That was it, I suppose," she said, gently. "It will be all right now."

"I will go and ask him this very day," he cried. "But, oh, Sybil! will he give you to me? I am so unworthy—I am a poor man, darling, and you will be rich."

She laughed with the glee of a child, looking at him and wondering was ever king as he.

"It does not matter much," she said, "which of us has money—it is the same thing. But, Captain Ayrton, do not come to my father to-day. Let me have this one day to be quite happy in—to dream of my love."

He bent over her and kissed her again; even his cold heart and false nature was touched by her trust and love.

"It shall be just as you like," he said. "I will come at noon to-morrow. Watch for me, Sybil. If all goes well, you will soon be my own. We must go now, my darling. We must leave our paradise and go out into the world again."

She rose and stood by his side, as she was to stand through many long years. And he, looking down on her, knew there would be some one to fight for him, to trust him, and to love him, long as both lived.

"It is very hard to leave you," he said, as they walked through the glades of Glynn Woods. "You are my first love, dearest Sybil. Tell me, have you ever cared for any one else?"

Then, trusting him in all things, she told him of Sir Rupert's love, and how she had promised to like him, but could not.

"That would have pleased the squire, I suppose," he said, thoughtfully.

"Anything pleases him that I like," she replied. "He has never refused me anything in his life. When he knows I love you, Lyster, he will love you too."

The captain felt some considerable doubt over it, but she had none. They had come to the little shrubbery, then, and it was time to part.

"Good-bye, my own!" he said. "Turn your face to me, Sybil, while I whisper just once, 'My darling wife!'"

Ah! that the pure, tender love there did not strike him blind—that the touch of those tender lips did not burn into his false heart!

"Not another word after that!" she whispered "Oh, Lyster, do you think the angels in Heaven are more happy than I?"

The gallant captain had thought very little of either Heaven or its angels; but the fervent, tender voice touched him.

"I wish my mother knew," continued the girl; "she would understand it. Before I go home I shall go round to the church-yard and tell her. I am sure she will hear me."

It must have moved the angels to pity to have seen her, when he had left her, walk rapidly down the high-road to the little town of Hillgate, where all the Jocelyns lay—to see her go to the little church-yard and kneel by her mother's grave, then droop her head on the long, thick grass, and whisper to the dead mother sleeping there how Lyster Ayrton loved her, and she was going to be his wife.

CHAPTER XI.

A BAD MAN—A GAMBLER, A LIAR.

It was late when Sybil reached home. Fortunately the squire had been away, so that her absence during luncheon had been unknown to him. Irene was easily satisfied, merely saying Sir Rupert was coming to dinner and she must not be late.

It was not until then—not until she stood alone in her own room, face to face with the happiness that blinded her—that Sybil remembered Sir Rupert's sorrow when he should know what she had done. She was not selfish or ordinarily neglectful of other people's feelings, but she had been completely carried away. The glamour of love was so strong upon her, no other thought entered her mind.

How should she tell him? She remembered so well what he had said. He would wait until of her own free will she placed her dear hands in his and said she loved him. He would wait twenty years for the hope, and then not complain if she sent him away. She remembered a thousand proofs of his most delicate and tender love; how generous, how unselfish, how devoted he was, and now she must go to him and tell him that she could never care for him, and had learned to love another!

How the grave, kindly face would look down upon her, unutterable pain in the true eyes, with a wistful trembling of the lids that she had often seen in them before.

How Sybil trusted him, yet did not appreciate the trust, for she knew that even should her father oppose her, Rupert would take her part; she knew instinctively that if all the world were against her, he would be for her. Her faith in him never wavered—yet she flung his love far from her, and mistook—ah! too fatally!—tinsel for gold.

True, she was doing him no wrong. She promised to try—she had tried and failed. She had done her best. Was it her fault, she asked herself, that the fair-haired young soldier had come to Ling? Being there, and knowing him, could she help loving him? She had broken no promise, betrayed no trust, done no wrong. Yet she dreaded seeing pain in the face that had ever looked so kindly on her.

He was to be there at dinner—he would not be angry. Sir Rupert Dacre, who was ever gentle to all women—he would not be angry with her.

Squire Jocelyn looked considerably relieved when he saw Sybil's blooming countenance. He said to himself it must have been all nonsense, and he had made a great mistake. He had positively forbidden the man to be admitted into the house. Sybil knew it; yet here she was, bright and beautiful, as ever; her face joyous and sweet, without a shadow or cloud. How prettily she was dressed, too, in a summer robe of light blue silk, with a few pale lilies in her hair. Talk of her being unhappy—why, the squire laughed at his own folly.

Violet Ruthers was the only one who looked suspicious; she evidently had keener sight than the others, and discerned the cause of Sybil's gayety.

After dinner the squire sat over his wine, and the young people left the warm dining-room and went out into the garden. It was a warm August evening; the air was faint with the rich perfume of lilies and roses. Violet took her book and went down to the lake. Irene followed her, and the two whose fate was to be so cruelly strange were left alone in the midst of the white, gleaming lilies, and the rich drooping fragrance of the night.

He prayed in after years to forget it—to forget the child-like face, and how tender it looked under the light of the evening sky—to forget the shy, graceful way in which she came to his side and said: "Rupert, I want to tell you something."

For one-half moment his heart leaped with a great joy. Had the time come when the dear hands were to be laid in his, when he might lay the golden head on his breast, and know her for his own? Was it that? He stepped back among the lilies, and caught his breath with something like a sob.

"I want to speak to you," continued the sweet, girlish voice; "and you must promise me not to be angry."

"No need for the promise," he said, quietly; "I could not be angry with you."

They were standing together in the midst of a narrow path that divided the two beds of lilies, she so near him that her blue dress touched him, and the south wind blew her lace shawl half over him.

He wondered why she did not speak; it was some little trouble, no doubt—some girlish request—some favor, for which he must tease the squire. He looked at her and saw that she had grown pale and there was a strange shadow of trouble in her eyes.

"What is it, my darling?" he asked, gently drawing the little hands in his own.

"Hush!" she said; "you must not call me that again. I want to tell you, Sir Rupert. I have tried—and I can not."

"Can not what?" he asked, without the least idea of what she meant.

"I can not love you," she continued. "I tried, Rupert—I did, indeed, but it was all in vain."

The shock was so great that it would have killed a weaker man. He never flinched, he never lost his clasp of the trembling hands. Even in that hour of supreme agony his first thought was for her. Oh! blind and foolish, would the world ever again give her love like this?

Cured Him.

An intimate friend of Rear Admiral John W. Philip tells the following anecdote of the gallant naval officer: Though Philip's religious side has been much emphasized and commented on, he is a determined man and will brook no opposition. Once when he was in charge of the Pacific Mail steamer China he carried two passengers of foreign nationality who persisted in smoking in their staterooms during the hours when smoking was prohibited. Philip, then captain, called their attention to the fact, but instead of heeding his warning one answered him impudently. Nothing further was said at the time, but the next morning the offensive passenger was handcuffed to the upper deck for three hours, and for the remainder of the trip that particular person seemed to have lost all desire to indulge in back talk to the captain.

They Were Both Right.

Hicks—I saw Gabbie and Maunder a little while ago. I was quite delighted.

Wicks—Delighted to see a couple of such outrageous bores?

Hicks—They had just separated as I came within earshot. Gabbie soliloquized, "What fellow makes me so weary!" and Maunder said to himself, "I'll bet I've lost a pound of flesh."—Boston Transcript.

TWO YEARS ABED.

Eight Years of Rheumatic Torment—South American Rheumatic Cure Drives Out the Torment in a Day.

Mrs. John Cook, of 287 Clinton-st, Toronto, says: "For eight years I suffered as no one ever did with rheumatism. For two years I lay on my bed and could not so much as feed myself—I was so helpless. The torture was indescribable. I doctored and tried every remedy I could hear of but received no lasting benefit. I am grateful for the day when a lady friend recommended South American Rheumatic Cure. After three doses I was able to sit up in bed. I continued its use and to-day—look at me—I am as strong and active as ever in my life." For sale by H. S. Macdonald and Ormond & Walsh.

The Poverty of Rome.

There is a terrible poverty in Rome, of which the beggars who await you at every street corner are but too genuine a sign. The first gesture learned by the children of poor people in Rome is to hold out their hands for alms. They begin when they are so young that they can only totter, and they are still holding out their hands for alms when they can only totter because they are so old.

Yet another sign of it I find in the 3,000 cabmen of Rome, sitting hungrily on their boxes, in their worm eaten fur coats, too lazy to do anything but sit there holding out their whips to solicit every passer and unable to make a decent living even in a place so frequented by strangers and a place where every one drives. But even here, in these beggars and cabmen, is there not a certain participation, at all events, in that open air life which is the felicity of Rome? "Abbiamo pazienza," say the poor people, and sit in the sun.—Arthur Symons in Harper's Magazine For April.

Do Not Believe It.

Do not believe that Nerviline will cure neuralgia almost instantly. If your teeth ache console yourself with the reflection that pain can't last for ever. Don't use Nerviline; it might stop the pain. Rheumatism is often difficult to cure. Keep on rubbing the old fashioned liniments as a matter of respect to your grandfather's aunt. Nerviline is a new discovery; that in itself ought to condemn it. Therefore cling to the old; suffer pain; avoid the use of Nerviline, the most powerful, and certain pain remedy in the world.

The Italian Boy's New World.

The writer knows a little Italian lad of 6 to whom the problems of food, clothing and shelter have become so immediate and pressing that, although an imaginative child, he is unable to see life from any other standpoint. In his mind the goblin or bugaboo of the more fortunate child has come to be the need of coal, which caused his father hysterical and demonstrative grief when it carried off his mother's inherited linen, the mosaic of St. Joseph and, worst of all, his own rubber boots.

He once came to a party at Hull House and was interested in nothing save a gas stove in the kitchen. He became excited over the discovery that fire could be produced without fuel. "I will tell my father of this stove. You buy no coal. You need only a match. Anybody will give you a match."

He was taken to visit at a country house and at once inquired how much rent was paid for it. On being told carelessly by his hostess that they paid no rent for that house he came back wild with interest that the problem was solved. "Me and my father will go to the country. You get a big house, all warm, without rent." Nothing else in the country interested him but the subject of rent, and he talked of that with an exclusiveness worthy of a Single Taxer.—Exchange.

PIE VS. WHISKEY--WHICH IS THE WORST?

A Debate Which Gives Pie the Worst of It.

Dyspepsia is a Greater Curse than Intemperance Because Wider Spread—Pie the Greater Cause—Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets the Greatest Cure.

"Pie," said an eminent public man recently, "is a greater curse to this country than whiskey."

"Pie doesn't break up a man's home," said the temperance man.

"Wait a moment," said the first man. "How many drunkards are there in this country?"

"I don't know," said the temperance man.

"I don't know either," said the other, "but in proportion to population there are but few. Now let me ask you in how many homes in Canada is pie excluded?"

"Not many," admitted the temperance man.

"Pie," said the other earnestly, "is the greatest cause of Dyspepsia in this country. Ask physicians if this is not true. And further, Dyspepsia, with its various symptoms of Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Foul Breath, Wind on the Stomach, Biliousness, Waterbrash and Catarrh of the Stomach, causes more bodily pain and discomfort to the sufferer than do the effects of alcohol. Talk of the unhappiness of families! What could be worse than a whole pie-eating family with Chronic Dyspepsia? I know of lots of them—in fact my own was the same way."

"What did you do about it?" asked the temperance man, "Taboo pie?"

"Not quite so far as that," said the prominent public man smiling. "No, we use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal. We can eat anything we like now."

"How much are they?" asked his friend.

"Fifty cents a box at all drug stores."

DRYDEN IS AGAIN SEATLESS

Bribery Was Proved and Defendant Threw Up the Sponge.

Farmer Gilmore Wanted $30, But Finally Accepted $15 From the "Man Upstairs" in the Gordon House, Pickering—Hon. John Dryden Testified That He Had Never Heard of the Men Who Did the Bribery.

Whitby, Ont., May 27.—The South Ontario election was voided by Justices Osler and Rose and the trial brought to a conclusion yesterday morning. Several cases of personal bribery by Hewitt, Morrish and Capt. Sullivan in Pickering township were proven, and the respondent's counsel admitted agency.

A sample of the evidence is that of William Gilmore, a farmer in Pickering, who swore he saw Hewitt on Thursday before the election, "coming out to the field where I was working." Said Gilmore: "He asked 'If I wouldn't vote for Mr. Dryden.' I said 'I hadn't for some time.' He said he would give me a decent day's pay for me and my two boys. He told me to come to the Gordon House in Pickering village, where there was a man upstairs who would pay me. He showed me a man in the first room to the right hand as you go up. The man said he wasn't paying such money, as I asked him for $30, but he would give me $15. I took it. We voted. I didn't see Hewitt again till to-day."

Hon. S. H. Blake, Q.C., then cross-examined witness as follows:

"Did you get any money from the other side?"

"I ain't supposed to tell."

Justice Osler—Witness, answer the question.

Witness—I got $5.

Hon. John Dryden, the respondent, at the end of the several cases which were proven, was examined by Mr. Blake as follows:

"I never heard of these men except Mr. Titus until their names were mentioned in the examination for discovery. I know of no improper expenditure of money in the election."

Their lordships thereupon declared the election void, with costs to the petitioner, and reported the following names: William Gilmore, Captain John Sullivan, William Stewart, Pat Sullivan, William McCormack, Byron Linton, Simon Hewitt, William Morrish and Ben Palmer.

THE CALDER CLOTHING STRIKE.

Mayor of Hamilton Writes Minister of Justice re Alien Labor Law.

Hamilton, May 27.—The carload of Hebrews who arrived on Thursday from New York to go to work for J. Calder & Co., clothing manufacturers, caused trouble, and as a result about 500 men, women and girls, who are pressers, operators and handsewers, are out of work, the result of a strike of the pressers. The pressers quit work because some of the aliens were put to work with them yesterday morning. A number of the strikers called on Mayor Teetzel and laid their case before him, asking him to use his influence to have the contract labor act enforced. The Mayor wrote to the Minister of Justice, asking that an inspector be sent here immediately to enforce the alien labor law. He stated the men's grievances and asked for a telegraph reply to-day.

THE WILSON CHAIN

With which Red Birds are fitted

When bicycle manufacturers and riders the world over were having trouble with their bicycle chains, which, in spite of all they could do, would wear and stretch, it was a Canadian who found a way out of the difficulty.

This Canadian was Mr. W. Wilson, one of the experts paid by this company to bring the Red Bird nearer a state of absolute perfection.

This invention consisted of a patent, whereby the centre part of the pin was hardened, giving the hardened steel pin. So well was this received that the largest chain manufacturing establishment in the world purchased the American right to produce it. Since then there have been many imitations, but, as is always the case with imitations, none are so good as the genuine article, such as Red Birds are fitted with to-day.

TAILOR MADE GOWNS.

Materials, Styles and Trimmings For Such Costumes.

Tailor made gowns have lost no portion of their prestige and are seen in greater variety than usual because of the wide range of color and trimming allowed them this season. There are many blues besides navy blue—old blue, blue and a soft of purplish blue both deep and medium—a series of faint tints just off white, grays and pale beiges, as well as the usual deep colors and red. Then for materials there are numerous sorts of thin cloth with a velvet, silk, kid or satin finish, thin serges and cheviots of a hairy surface and both coarse and fine venetian cloth. The simplest style of making shows a plain, straight skirt, touching the ground all around, very tight around the hips and with an invisible fastening, and a short jacket or a bolero with open or closed fronts, plain stitching being the only decoration. For more elaborate gowns there is the tunic skirt or the skirt with several circular flounces and the bodice with a pelerine or double revers. As for trimming, there are folds and stitched straps of cloth or satin, scallops, vandykes, circular ruffles, applications of cloth and embroideries made directly upon the goods, not to mention braiding, either plain or fanciful. Attractive costumes of black venetian cloth show applique decorations of black silk or satin outlined with braid or cord, the same adornment covering the revers, which are, however, of white silk or cloth instead of black. The lining of skirts and boleros is usually of silk of a light or bright color—rose, mauve, cherry or pea green.

The illustration shows a jacket of mastic cloth. It has a tight fitting back, without seams, and the basque is shorter on the hips than elsewhere. The front is straight and crosses over to the left, closing with two rows of pearl buttons. The large collar is faced with white cloth, and the jacket is finished with lines of stitching. This little coat may be worn as a separate jacket or may be accompanied by a skirt to match. JUDGE CHOLLET.

A TRIP TO THE ETERNAL CITY

(Written for the "Review.")

LETTER NO. SEVEN.

PARIS—Odds and Ends.

One bright sunny day we visited the celebrated cemetery of Pere Lachaise, so named after Lachaise the Jesuit confessor of Louis XIV. The number of monuments in this vast necropolis of 110 acres amounts to 20,000, many of which are deeply interesting as memorials of illustrious persons, while others are noteworthy on account of their artistic excellence. Well-shaded walks and avenues intersect each other in every direction, and many of them afford an admirable view of the city. We saw the tomb of Abelard and Heloise whose tale of love and sorrow, after the lapse of seven long centuries still touches the heart of the world with perennial power. Their effigies lie, with hands clasped in prayer, side by side, and the simple inscription reads "Les restes d' Heloise et d' Abelard sont reunis dans ce tombeau." Dissevered in their lives, their dust mingles together with its kindred clay. Garlands of fresh and fragrant flowers, placed by loving hands upon their tomb, attested the living sympathy which is still felt for their sorrow. In the Jewish quarter we saw the narrow house of the money-king, Rothchild, and the grave of that queen of tragedy, Rachel.

Among the other distinguished persons, interred in this populous city of the dead are Michelet, Chopin, Berenger, La Fontaine, Moliere, Laplace and many another whose name and fame have filled the world.

The French exhibit much kindly sentiment in decorating the graves of their departed with wreaths of flowers and immortelles; and over many of these are constructed glass pent-houses for their protection.

An object of interest was the Crematorium a large building with two lofty chimneys. It has been in use since 1889. The process of cremation, which occupies about one hour, is accomplished by means of refracted heat from a fire heated up to 800 degrees; the flames do not touch the body. The ashes left weigh about one twelfth of the original weight of the body. The price of cremation is 50-250 francs, including a right to a niche in the columbarium for 5 years. The columbarium is a large plain building the lateral walls of which contain niches for receiving the ashes of cremated bodies. The walls resemble in appearance the boxes in our post offices, but of course the niches are larger. These are sealed up and the name of the person so stored away is engraved on the wall.

The Pere Lachaise was one of the last strongholds of the Commune, and amid the funeral cypress and marble monuments of the dead was waged one of the most desperate conflicts of the living.

Paris possesses 22 burial-grounds. These, however, would hardly suffice for the 80-100 graves required daily, were it not that the poor who are buried gratuitously, forming nearly 2-3 of the community, are committed to the Fosses Communes, or large pits, each containing 40-50 coffins. A Concession Trentenaire, providing that the grave shall remain undisturbed for 30 years, costs 300 francs or $60. A concession, a perpetuite or private burial place, may be secured for 1000 francs. These spaces are very limited, being about 22 1-2 sq. ft. only. The charge for a larger space is augmented in an increasing ratio, the price of each square metre (about 11 1-3 sq. ft) beyond 6 being 3000 francs. This has been one of the many reasons why the people of Paris have during the last 10 years become advocates of cremation. When leaving the cemetery we saw a funeral procession approaching. We noticed that it is the invariable custom for Frenchmen to take off their hats on meeting a funeral procession, whether in the cemetery or in the public streets. The hearse was very handsome and the funeral trappings of the horses were very elaborate. Hired mourners followed the hearse. Half an hour afterwards we saw these same mourners with their faces all wreathed in smiles, regaling themselves with wine at a neighboring cafe.

Paris is indisputably the cradle of high culinary art. As the ordinary tables d' hote convey but a slender idea of the perfection to which the art is carried, the "chefs d' oeuvre," must be sought for in the first class restaurants, where, however, the connoisseur must be prepared to pay 10-15 fr. for his dinner, exclusive of wine.

The Paridan's breakfast usually consists of a cup of coffee and a roll. The second breakfast, or Dejeuner a la Fourchette is a substantial meal, resembling dinner, and is served at the restaurants between 11 and 1 o'clock. The Parisian dinner hour is 6—8. Most of the restaurants on the Grands Boulevards are kept open almost the whole night. After you have finished eating you say 'Garcon!' addition s' il vous plait!' 'Waiter the bill!' The waiter then brings the account from "dame de comptoir" and on receiving payment expects a "pourboire" of 25—30 centimes. None of the waiters receives any wages, nor do the barbers and they make their living solely by the tips they receive. Even the cab drivers after they have been paid their fare for the ride, expect 25 centimes as a gratuity. When hiring a cab, by the way, select one whose driver wears a white hat. They are usually the most comfortable and the quickest. One should always be supplied with lots of small change, for it is a case of tip, tip, ad nauseam from morn to eve.

One morning after we had partaken of an American breakfast—we found the Parisian breakfast too light for sight seeing—and had read the New York Herald, an edition of which is printed in English in Paris daily, we decided to take a spin on our wheels to see the tomb of Napoleon. There was a guide at our hotel, an Austrian by birth, who looked after our wheels and accompanied us on our wheeling some Canadian dental comfort one morning, which the latter pronounced to be very, very good and the two became close friends. As the manufacture and sale of tobacco is a monopoly of the Government in France, it is not of the best quality. As the streets are well paved we found the cycling good but we had some narrow escapes keeping out of the way of the cabs the drivers of which take no heed of pedestrians or wheelmen. In fact if a collision takes place you are apt to be fined for being in the road. We met a large number of automobiles which go spinning along at a terrible rate. We soon arrived at the Hotel des Invalides, a vast establishment occupying an area of about 30 acres and is a sort of military hospital. It was built to accommodate 5,000 inmates but there are now less than 200, and the number is decreasing, as only soldiers absolutely incapacitated for work are now admitted. The handsome Esplanade des Invalides, embellished with several rows of trees, lies between the Seine and the hotel. The Musee d' Artillerie contains an interesting collection of 10,000 specimens of weapons of all kinds, both ancient and modern. Here are to be seen memorials of Napoleon I; his hat, grey coat, general's uniform, weapons, etc. On March 30th, 1814, the evening before the entry of the Allies into Paris about 1500 flags, the victorious trophies of Napoleon I, were burned in the court of the Invalides to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy. The sword brought by Napoleon from the tomb of Frederick the Great at Potsdam in 1760, was destroyed on the same occasion.

The tomb of Napoleon, beneath the vast dome of the church des Invalides is a grand mausoleum. In the centre of a large circular crypt sunk in the marble floor lies the huge sarcophagus hewn out of a single block of Finland granite, weighing 67 tons. Twelve colossal marble victories, with wreath and palm, guard the bust of that stormy heart, now still forever, which shook all Europe with its throbs. The six trophies consist of 00 flags captured in battle by Napoleon. A faint bluish light streams down from the lofty dome, and the sombre aspect of the crypt and its surroundings contributes greatly to the solemn grandeur of the scene. Above the entrance to the crypt are these words from the emperor's will: "Je desire que mes cendres reposent sur les bords de la Seine, au milieu de ce peuple francais que j' ai tant aime."

A little to the west of the Invalides lies the Champ-de-Mars, which, until the exhibition of 1889, was a large sandy space used for military manoeuvres. Down to 1855 it was enclosed by embankments, 15—20 ft. in height, which were planted with trees, and in the formation of which no fewer than 60,000 Parisians of both sexes and all classes participated in the year 1790. Carlyle in his French Revolution gives a very vivid account of this. These banks were then furnished with tiers of seats, which enabled hundreds of thousands of people to witness the Fete de la Federation which took place on July 14th, of the same year. The Champ-de-Mars was the site of the "Expositions Universelles of 1867, 1878, 1889 and will be occupied by that of 1900. Most of the buildings of the World's Fair of 1889 had been removed when we visited Paris and others were being erected in their stead.

We viewed with special interest the Eiffel Tower, the great centre of attraction at the World's Fair of 1889. It is close to the Seine and opposite the Trocadero. This enormous structure is the loftiest monument in the world attaining a height of 984 feet or not far short of twice the height (555 ft.), of the Washington column at Washington. Other high buildings such as the tower of Ulm Cathedral 528 ft., Cologne 511 ft., Rouen 492 ft., Great Pyramid 449 ft., St. Paul's in London 401 ft. are insignificant compared to this great tower. At the same time it is an interesting specimen of bold and accurate skill in design and of the marvellous scientific precision of modern engineering. The base upon which rises the extraordinary yet graceful structure of interlaced iron work covers about 2 1-2 acres of ground. The four uprights have an initial inclination of 54°, and beneath the first platform are united with each other by round spans, forming a kind of huge triumphal archway, higher than the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square. At a height of 580 ft. the four uprights coalesce into a single shaft. The successive platforms may be reached either by means of the staircase (1792 steps) or by hydraulic lifts.

Eugene Melchoir de Vogue in an interesting article on the Eiffel tower says: The work of its construction largely escaped public view. The autumn mists often entirely concealed the aerial work-yard; in the twilight of the winter afternoons might be seen reddening against the sky the fire of the forge; one could scarcely hear the hammers which riveted the iron-work. There was this peculiarity about it, one seldom saw any workmen on the tower; it rose apparently alone, as if by the incantations of genii. The great works of other ages, the Pyramids for example, are associated in our minds with the idea of a multitude of human beings bending over handspikes and groaning under chains. The modern pyramid arose by the power of calculation, which made it require only a small number of workers. Each part of the great structure, each one of its bones of iron—to the number of 12,000—arrived perfect from the manufactory, and had only to be adjusted to its proper place in the gigantic skeleton. The structure presented an example of what mathematicians call "an elegant demonstration."

On our way back we stopped at the sees to see the Arc de Triomphe, the largest triumphal arch in existence, and visible from almost every part of the environs of Paris. The structure is 160 ft. in height, 146 ft. in width and 72 ft. in depth. It was begun by Napoleon I. in 1806 and completed by Louis Philippe in 1836. The arch is adorned with colossal trophies. Twelve avenues radiate from this point, the two most important being the Avenues des Champs-Elysees and the Avenue du Bois-de-Boulogne which leads to the great park of Paris.

We had a delightful coast down the former to the Place de la Concorde. It is slightly down grade for over a mile and as two in our party had patent coasters we made the Parisians stare, especially the wheelmen and the bloomer girls.

The wheels in Paris are more up to date than those we saw in England. In the latter country most of the wheels are what the small boy in this country would call ice-waggons. They weigh 35 lbs. and over and are fitted with steel rims and mud-guards and are anything but neat. Everything is sacrificed to strength. They are beginning to use imported wheels. Wherever we went on the continent we were sure to see two Canadian manufactured articles, viz., Cleveland wheels, and Walker's Club, (the latter has been known to cause "wheels.")

The roads in both countries are perfect for wheeling. They are hard and smooth, and not a rut or stone is to be seen anywhere.

We saw no watering carts in Paris; the streets are watered by hose. This gives employment to a large number of men and for that reason this method is used. The streets are kept scrupulously clean. They slope to the sides along which small streams of water constantly flow and the refuse is swept into the water and finds its way to the sewers.

We generally took our lunch at one of the numerous Bouillons. These are restaurants a la carte where the prices are quite moderate. They are very popular with the middle and even upper classes. The guests are waited on by women, soberly garbed, and not unlike sisters of charity. Each guest on entering is furnished with a card, on which the account is afterwards written. A fee of 15-20 centimes is left on the table for attendance; the bill is then paid at the bar and receipted and is finally given up to the controleur at the door. The Bouillons Duval owned by a company are the oldest and best of these establishments and we found them quite satisfactory.

Not far from our hotel was the Madeleine or Church of St. Mary Magdalen, built in the style of a late Roman adaptation of a Greek temple. The construction lasted from 1764 till 1842. Napoleon wished to convert it into a Temple of Glory, while Louis XVIII. desired to make it an expiatory church with monuments to Louis XVI., Marie Antoinette, etc. The church is 364 ft. in length and 141 ft. in breadth and 100 ft. in height and is surrounded by an imposing colonnade of massive Corinthian columns. The building which is destitute of windows, is constructed exclusively of stone. The relief of the principal facade represents the last judgment and is very fine. The bronze doors 34 ft. in height, are adorned with illustrations of the Ten Commandments. The interior is richly decorated with mural paintings and sculptures. Above the altar is a large fresco representing the history of Christianity in numerous groups.

An intense historic interest is associated with the church of St. Germain—l' Auxerrois, founded in the time of Charlemagne. From its tower the fatal tocsin tolled forth the funeral knell of the awful night of St. Bartholomew's dread massacre, Aug. 24th, 1572.

Mention must be made of the Colonne Vendome, an imitation of Trajan's column at Rome, 142 ft. in height and 13 ft. in diameter. It was erected by order of Napoleon I. to commemorate his victories over the Russians and Austrians. The column is constructed of masonry, encrusted with plates of bronze forming a spiral band nearly 300 yds. in length, on which are represented memorial scenes of the campaign of 1805. The figures are 3 ft. in height and many of them are portraits. The metal was obtained by melting down 1200 Russian and Australian cannons. At the top of the column is a statue of Napoleon.

The vicissitudes of the Vendome Column reflect the political history of France. In 1814 the statue of Napoleon was taken down by the Royalists and was replaced by a monster fleur-de-lis surmounted by a white flag. The metal was used in casting the equestrian statue of Henry IV. which adorns the Pont-Neuf. In 1831 Louis Philippe caused a new statue of the emperor, in a great coat and three-cornered hat, to be placed on the summit, but Napoleon III. caused this to be replaced, in 1863, by one resembling the original figure. The column was overthrown by the Communists in 1871 but as the fragments were preserved it was recrected in 1875.

The visitor in Paris who takes any interest in natural science should not fail to pay a visit to the Jardin des Plantes or Museum d' Histoire Naturelle. In it are concentrated most of the Parisian institutions connected with natural science. Besides the zoological and botanical gardens it comprises natural history collections, laboratories and a library. The pleasantest way of reaching this Jardin is by steamboat. The Menagerie or Zoological department is not so extensive as the one in Regent's Park, London, but the natural history galleries are among the most extensive in existence. The gallery of Comparative Anatomy contains a very extensive collection founded by Cuvier. In the gallery of Anthropology every variety of the human species is represented by means of skeletons, skulls, casts, portraits in water-colors, photographs, busts, mummies and even by fossils. The gallery of Palaeontology consists of the fossilized skeletons of such extinct animals as the megatherium, glyptodon, mastodon, Irish elk, cave bear, etc. The Palaeotherium magnum exhibited

DON'T TEAR DOWN—BUILD UP.

The old-fashioned theory of tearing down disease was entirely changed by the advent of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, which cures by creating new rich blood and nerve tissue. Through the medium of the circulation and the nervous system they strengthen and invigorate every organ in the human body.

English Royal Marriages.

The English royal marriage act is one of the time honored absurdities which survive in spite of common sense and enlightened public opinion. By it the matrimonial choice of the English princes is practically restricted to the swarms of "the German hive" and the proverbially handsome English women are forbidden. The legal prohibition was enacted in 1772 at the persistent command of George III, he "being thereunto incited," first, by the marriage in 1776 of his brother, the Duke of Gloster, to the Countess Waldegrave (Maria Walpole), and, second, by the taking to wife by a young brother, the Duke of Cumberland, in 1771, of the widow of Colonel Christopher Horton.

The first provision of the act forbids to the descendants of George II matrimony without the consent of the crown under the great seal, necessary exception being made to cover the marriages of princesses abroad. The second provision has been the especial mark of raillery. It enables marriage by one above the age of 25 against the will of the crown, under certain conditions.

Nelson and the Spaniards.

There is an amusing anecdote about that gruff sea dog, Nelson. Two Spanish captains came on board, with a request to be allowed to see "the greatest seaman in the world." Nelson grumbled, but gave in and went on deck, forgetting that "at that moment his legs were bound up at the knees and ankles with pieces of brown paper soaked in vinegar and tied on with red tape."

This had been done to allay the irritation arising from mosquito bites. Quite forgetting his attire and the extraordinary appearance which it presented, Lord Nelson went on deck and conducted the interview with the Spanish captains with such perfect courtesy that his singular appearance was quite obliterated by the charm of his manner, and the Spaniards left the ship with their high opinion of him thoroughly confirmed.

The Observing Youngsters.

Mildmay has never been in the habit of punishing his children, leaving that disagreeable duty to his wife, but the other day one of his numerous progeny became very unruly, and he was obliged to say:

"Flora, if you don't keep quiet I shall have to whip you."

"Pooh!" retorted the little 8-year-old, with a contemptuous toss of her dainty head, "you isn't the mother."

Farmer Conlin Killed.

Grand Valley, Ont., May 29.—James Conlin, a well-to-do farmer, living about half a mile north of here, was almost instantly killed on Friday evening, and his son Harry, a young man 19 years of age, is in a precarious state. It appears that they were engaged in drawing manure, when the team, driven by Harry, became unmanageable and ran away. The father, seeing the danger of his son, ran to the rescue, and was struck by the tongue of the wagon, and only lived a few minutes.

Sound of the Voice.

In experimenting with the compressed air pipes of Westphalian coal mines Mr. H. Schab has found that the greatest distance to which the sound of the voice could be conveyed in a straight pipe was between 1,500 and 1,700 feet. For moderate distances a pipe of about 20 inches in diameter gave the best results, a slightly larger one being better for long distances.

SECOND TRIAL OF DREYFUS.

It is to Be by a Military Court Outside of Paris.

Proceedings Will Be Public—The Greater Part of the Court Room, However, Has Been Reserved by Ticket-Holders—The Procedure in the Court, and the Possibility of a Verdict by Friday or Saturday.

London, May 29.—A special despatch from Paris, received here, says the Government officially announced that Dreyfus will be re-tried by a court-martial, the sitting of which will be held in a garrison town distant from Paris.

The proceedings in the case will be public, although the greater part of the court room has been reserved for ticket-holders. The procedure will consist of the reading of the report of M. Ballot de Beaupre, followed by a speech by Maitre Mernard, counsel for Madame Dreyfus, and the address of the public prosecutor, M. Manau. The court will then retire to deliberate upon a verdict, which it is expected will be rendered on Friday or Saturday.

Officers Are Barred.

Paris, May 29.—The Minister for War, M. Camille Krantz, has issued stringent orders that no officers, either in civilian costume or in uniform, shall frequent the Palace of Justice or its precincts this week, during the public hearing of the demand for a revision of the Dreyfus trial and during the trial before the Court of Assize of MM. Paul Deroulede and Marcel-Habert on the charge of provoking offences against the security of the state and inciting the army to mutiny.

PEACE CONFERENCE.

Not a Great Deal Was Done at The Hague Saturday.

The Hague, May 29.—The sections of the committee on the laws of warfare, charged to deal with the subject of the Brussels conference of 1874, on Saturday studied articles 23 and 24, which deal with prisoners of war, and it was agreed to adopt the articles with slight verbal amendments.

The concert of the municipality of The Hague in the evening was a brilliant affair.

Arbitration Recommended.

Minneapolis, May 29.—A good attendance marked the final session of the Presbyterian general assembly on Saturday. An address to the international peace conference was adopted, recommending an international court of arbitration. The State clerk said he would forward the address next week, with a similar one from the Alliance of Presbyterian Churches of the World, representing millions of Christians.

MAJOR DIGGLES DEAD.

He Was Wounded in the Head by Filipines on May 8.

Manila, May 29.—Major A. M. Diggles of the 13th Minnesota Regiment, who was wounded in the head while reconnoitering May 8, at a point near San Miguel, and who was brought to the hospital here, is dead.

Would Work Macabebees.

Manila, May 29.—General MacArthur is in favor of the experiment of enlisting Macabebees against their old enemiets, the Tagalogs.

A delegation of the leading Macabebees has visited the General, and its spokesman read an address, assuring the American commander of the friendship of the Macabebees and of their willingness to transfer their allegiance from Spain to the United States. They complained that the Tagalogs murdered them and burned their villages, and they asked to be protected and given arms to protect themselves.

The Insurrection Reviving.

Manila, May 29.—The approach of the wet season finds the insurrection seemingly taking a new lease of life. All along the American lines the rebels are showing more aggressive activity, in their guerilla style, than at any time before since the fall of Malolos. They keep the United States troops in trenches, sleeping in their clothing, and constantly on the alert against dashes upon the outposts, and they make life warm for the American garrisons in the towns.

The Worst Is Feared.

Washington, May 29.—General Greeley yesterday received a cablegram from Major Thompson at Manila, reporting that a party landing for the repair of the cable at Escalante, Island of Negros, had been attacked by natives; that Capt. George H. Tilley, Signal Corps, is missing, and that the worst is feared.

Eight People Were Killed.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 29.—The through train from Chicago to Minneapolis over the Rock Island & Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Railway was wrecked at 1.15 Sunday morning at the crossing of Sink Creek, about four miles southeast of this place. Eight persons were killed and ten injured. A cloudburst had washed the sand and gravel roadbed, leaving the track unsupported for a stretch of 20 feet. The rails and the ties held together. The engine struck the washout and was derailed in the ditch beside the track, and behind it the cars were piled up in a confused heap.

DROP GERRYMANDER BILL

Was the Startling Proposal Made by Sir Charles Tupper.

Opposition Leader's Idea Was That the Canadian Commissioners Ought to Devote Time to Preparing for the Meeting of the Anglo-American Commission in Quebec on August 2—Sir Wilfrid on Treaty Possibilities.

Ottawa, May 29.—On Saturday in the House, Sir Henri Joly introduced a bill respecting the inspection of petroleum and naphtha, and one to amend the General Inspection Act with respect to the inspection of wheat.

The Minister of Agriculture denied that his words regarding the packing of apples for the Old Country would bear the construction that he charged the farmers with fraudulent packing. The packing had been done by jobbers.

Sir Charles Tupper's Proposal.

After routine, Sir Charles Tupper brought up the question of the Anglo-American commission. He said the statement made by the Premier the previous day that the reassembling of the commission depended upon the Alaskan boundary question being removed from the arena of discussion by the diplomatic action of the two Governments removed the difficulty he had felt in talking of the matter. From the inception of this question he (Sir Charles) had treated it as one above and beyond party. He read with great satisfaction that the peace commission assembled at The Hague has practically agreed to Sir Julian Pauncefote's proposal of a board of international arbitration for the settlement of questions of controversy between nations, and as the United States and Great Britain were parties to the peace conference, it would be most unreasonable to suppose they would not agree to submit the Alaska boundary question to arbitration. He assumed, therefore, that at this moment we could look hopefully forward to the reassembling of the Anglo-American commission on the 2nd of August. Sir Charles then dealt with an article in The New York Sun of May 14, which stated that the difficulty with respect to the Anglo-American conference reaching a satisfactory conclusion was with the Conservative party, which embarrasses the Government in dealing with these questions. Sir Charles said that all he (Sir Charles) had stated in the House, or out of it, was quite at variance with that statement.

For instance, there was the statement that Canada occupies the position which rendered her absolutely independent of the United States; then, although it is most desirable these questions should be settled on a fair and satisfactory basis, such, fortunately for us, is our position that we are not compelled to make any undue concessions to our great neighbors to the south. That statement was the strongest card the commissioners could play. Then there was the power which Parliament had already given the Government to impose an export duty on pulp wood, logs and nickel matte. He had held that by exercising that power we could cut off the supply from which the Americans manufacture a large part of the paper used in the world, and transfer its manufacture to Canada, where we had an enormous advantage by reason of our great water power and transportation facilities. As to mining rights, Canada was in the position that it was of more importance for Americans to obtain mining privileges in Canada than for Canadians to have similar privileges in the United States, so that it was in the interests of the United States to assimilate the mining laws of the two countries so as to make their privileges common. We had, also, the advantage of practically controlling the supply of nickel. Therefore, taking all these questions into consideration, it would be seen that the attitude of the Conservative party upon them would not only not interfere with the British commissioners during the negotiations, but was calculated to strengthen their hands when the negotiations should be resumed.

This being the case, his object in mentioning these matters was that he proposed to meet the leader of the Government with a flag of truce, to suggest means by which Sir Wilfrid would be left more free to proceed with the work of Graveyards In China.

The wife of an American naval officer stationed at Tien-tsin writes thus to a friend in Baltimore: "The trip by train from the landing to Tien-tsin takes about an hour and a half. The cars are not palatial, but they are comfortable. When you land, hundreds of coolies besiege you for your baggage. You wonder how it ever reaches its destination in safety. The trip is somewhat interesting, but rather desolate to take alone. You pass through miles of graveyards. There are thousands of mounds without a sign of green grass or green leaf.

"China seems to be one vast graveyard, for they bury their dead anywhere they wish. They bury in large coffins placed on the surface of the ground, covered over with mud and earth. This is blown and washed away, and then the coffins are exposed to view. A few miles from the railroad station on the river you come to trees and vegetation. It reminds you of some of the poor land that some of our railroads at home go through."

Mischievous to the End.

In the bog of Aughrim, in Ireland, it was a very common thing for gun barrels to be found, relics of the great battle there. There was a blacksmith who dug them up in order to make use of the material. One of them exploded in his furnace, when he exclaimed: "Bad luck to your love of murther! Isn't the battle of Aughrim out of you yet?"

the commission, which he regarded as no mere party question. He would suggest that, under the circumstances, Sir Wilfrid should withdraw the redistribution bill, have it published for the benefit of the country, and allow the business of the session to be promptly closed by the disposing of all the other questions now before the House, in order that the Government might give the necessary care and attention to the work of the commission, and furnish themselves with the most minute information to strengthen the case with which they were charged. However, he would not expect the leader of the House to make a statement in reply at once, as it was a matter on which he would naturally confer with his colleagues.

In conclusion, Sir Charles observed he was sure the leader of the Government would vindicate him from the charge in The New York Sun that the modus vivendi proposed by the United States would have been accepted by the British commissioners but for the fear of the hostility of the Conservative party, because, when Sir Wilfrid consulted him in reference to what Canada proposed, he had given him assurance of hearty support in the attitude the Government had assumed. He hoped, too, the Government would receive his suggestion in the spirit in which it was offered, and give it the consideration to which it was clearly entitled.

What Sir Wilfrid Said.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House may be pardoned, I am sure, for some feeling of satisfaction at the language just spoken by my hon. friend (Sir Charles Tupper). The wisdom of the course which I took in the month of February, instead of breaking suddenly the negotiations of the Anglo-American commission, has been fully vindicated by what the hon. gentleman has just said. If I were allowed to refer to a past debate I might call the attention of the House to the fact that in the debate on the address my hon. friend took a very different position, and stated that the moment we could not come to an agreement with our fellow-commissioners representing the United States we should have broken negotiations and come home. We thought that this course was not the course which should be followed under the circumstances.

Sir Charles Tupper—But that is practically what you did, judging from your statements in the House on Friday. You said you would not go on with the negotiations until the other questions were removed.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—When we left we referred the question of the Alaska boundary to our respective Governments, and stated then to the world that it would be useless to reassemble unless this matter had been disposed of. I stated at the time to my hon. friend and to the House on more than one occasion that the matter had been referred to the respective Governments, American and British, and that we were to reassemble on the 2nd of August. But, what would have been the use of reassembling on the 2nd of August or any other time if the very questions which we had not been able to agree on were then to be found in the same position as before?

We would not proceed with the other matters needing consideration, but we hoped that when we assembled again on the 2nd of August the British and the American Governments, by their respective authorities, would have been able to perform what we had not been able to perform; that is to say, settle the question of the Alaskan boundary. We thought that, of all the measures that had been referred to us, that was the most important. We might have gone on with some other questions, but, pending that, we thought it would not be advisable in the best interests of Canada to proceed with other questions. If that question could have been settled one way or the other, we could have proceeded with other questions, giving more or receiving more, as the question was settled one way or the other. There were only two ways of settling it. One was by compromise.

We did not agree as to the location of the boundary which has been defined by the treaty of 1825 between Great Britain and Russia. We, representing Great Britain, and the Americans, representing Russia, did not agree as to the location of the boundary on the ground. We claimed that the boundary passed at one point, while the Americans contended that it passed at another. If we could compromise by giving and taking, I say without hesitation, the manner in which we would settle it by giving more and accepting less would be of material aid in the solution of other questions before us, either one way or the other. But we could not come to an understanding upon that question, and there was nothing to do but to refer it to arbitration. We cannot, of course, force our fellow-commissioners to come to an understanding with us.

But there is one thing that must be done—if we cannot come to an understanding, the matter should be referred to arbitration. When it is referred to arbitration, it is then out of the way, and we can resume our sitting and go on with the other questions. I shall regret very much if the matter has to be referred to arbitration, instead of our reaching a compromise. I should prefer to have a fair and honorable compromise, by which both parties would relinquish claims in order to have a settlement.

Having taken that ground, I may proceed to say that if this matter of the Alaskan boundary is removed from the questions entrusted to the commission, and if we resume our negotiations upon matters still remaining over, and there are some of great moment, I say frankly that I do not expect that we can settle them all perhaps as I would like them to be settled myself, to the extreme limit of our rights and pretensions; but I have hopes that we can settle the most, if not all, of those questions, in an honorable and satisfactory manner to both countries. I do not expect that we can get all that we are contending for, but I expect that we can make an honorable settlement, such a settlement as will intensify the good feeling which now prevails between Great Britain and the United States.

Now I can acquit my hon. friend altogether from the aspersions made upon him by the editor of The Sun. I can say that anything he has done or has not done had nothing to do with the non-success of the negotiations. But I must take exception, at all events, to the suggestion which he made to us. I do not believe that either in the future or in the past any policy of retaliation towards the United States would have any effect or will have any effect in settling our difficulties with them. But I am quite as much in earnest as my hon. friend himself in this respect, that we must stand upon our rights and upon our dignity, but standing upon our rights and upon our dignity does not call upon us to enter upon a policy of hostility to the United States. Even though the United States sometimes try our patience very much, even though they sometimes more than try our patience, still I think it would be the part of wisdom in us under such circumstances to continue to be patient and not allow ourselves to be moved by any sentiment of irritation.

If we resume our negotiations, as I believe we shall, I think we are in a fair way of making a treaty which can be settled in a very few days.

Now my hon. friend led up to a conclusion for which I must say I was not prepared. He made these international negotiations a basis upon which to ask us to withdraw the redistribution bill. Well, the ground is a broad one for such a request. For the present I must say that I am not prepared to withdraw the redistribution bill. I am quite prepared to consider his suggestion. I owe to him, occupying the position he does in this House, I owe it to him to place the matter before my colleagues and before my party, and we will give it the best consideration. But if we are to spend the summer at Ottawa, I do not think it will be in the legitimate discussion of the redistribution bill. Although I think the bill is drawn upon a fair basis, I do not pretend that all its details are perfect; I do not know that we may not be able to make some improvement in it, and to that end we will listen to the suggestions that are made to us. All this is a matter for consideration in the committee.

But I say that the measure as it has been proposed is one which is fair in its terms, and which ought to win the commendation of both sides of the House. I do not see why, if the measure should receive a fair criticism, it should not be disposed of in a few days. But the hon. gentleman has made me a suggestion which, I repeat, coming from one having the authority which he has in this House, resting not only upon his official position, but upon his long experience and long service in Parliament, a suggestion I intend for my part to treat with great respect, and I shall ask my friends as well to give it their best consideration. But more than this, I know my hon. friend does not expect me to say to-day.

AMERICAN VIEW OF IT.

Canada Imposed a Condition on the U.S. Which Brought Forth a Refusal to Arbitrate.

Washington, May 29.—To clear up misunderstandings which appear to exist both in London and to some extent in this country, as to the exact status of the negotiations between the United States and Great Britain respecting Canadian-American issues, the following statement of the occurrences which led to the present condition of affairs has been secured from the best of authority:

When the joint high commissioners adjourned it was because it had reached an apparently insurmountable obstacle in the shape of the Alaskan boundary question. After the adjournment the two Governments took up this question with a view to settling it and thus removing it from the path of the many other important issues involved. There were numerous delays, owing to the need of exchanging views between London, Washington and Ottawa, and the authorities here became convinced that an adjustment was hopeless.

But the feeling in London was more hopeful, and when Sir Julian Pauncefote reached London on his way to The Hague he held conferences with Lord Salisbury, which resulted in a definite proposal for settling the boundary issue and removing it as an obstacle to the work of the commission. The chief point of this proposal was that a separate tribunal of arbitration should pass on the boundary question. It was communicated to Ambassador Choate and by him to the State Department.

Canada Makes a Condition.

Just as the acceptance was about to be given, the officials here were surprised to have presented what they regarded as an extraordinary condition, which Canada imposed in connection with the submission of the question to arbitration. This condition was that, in any event, Canada should have Pyramid Harbor and a strip of territory in the Lynn Canal, without reference to the general conclusions reached by the tribunal of arbitration. This port and the strip of territory on the coast would have carried also the back country leading to the interior. It was decided not to accept this condition, and a peremptory refusal was given to the proposition. Thus the matter stands. If it is withdrawn, arbitration may yet be arranged as a means of settling the boundary. The opinion in the highest quarters seems to be positive that without some such adjustment of the boundary matter the resumption of work by the joint high commission on the many other topics considered is impossible.

PUBLISH THE PROTOCOLS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Cannot Either Affirm or Deny American Report.

Ottawa, May 29.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier was last night seen with reference to the statement from Washington that the Canadian commissioners demanded Pyramid Harbor before they would submit the Alaska boundary question to arbitration. He said that he was not at liberty to say anything beyond what he had already stated, for publication, and that he could not make any additional statement until the protocols were published. He added that he regretted that permission to publish the protocols relating to the Alaska boundary question had not been given, as their publication would have prevented several misstatements being made in the American press, some of which had been officially contradicted. As this question had been removed from those before the commission by its being referred by the commission to their respective Governments, he could see no reason why the protocols relating to it should not be made public.

England's Case Is Strong.

London, May 29.—The Times this morning publishes a special article explaining all aspects of the Alaskan boundary dispute. It believes that England's case is very strong and that she has every interest in going to arbitration, provided the terms of reference are satisfactory, adding that the Venezuelan precedent might fairly be accepted on both sides. The article speaks favorably of the compromise plan for internationalizing the wharf at Skaguay and the White Pass road as far as the Canadian frontier.

The Big Island Pleased.

St. John's, Nfld., May 29.—The announcement of the failure of the joint high commission negotiations gives general satisfaction here, because it will enable the colony to resume independent negotiations with the United States for reciprocity in fishery products, which the Americans are desirous to concede in return for unhampered admission to the bait supply in Newfoundland waters. It is believed here that, in view of Canada's fault, the British Government will not object to Newfoundland making a separate arrangement.

FOUND THE ZEALAND.

First News of a Steamer Lost 18 Years Ago.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., May 29.—The propeller Zealand, which disappeared after leaving Port Dalhousie in a storm 18 years ago, has just been found by divers of the Donnelly Salvage Company while searching Lake Ontario for the Tug Walker of the Ontario Transportation Company, sunk last fall. The Zealand plied the St. Lawrence and was loaded with pork and iron. The steamer remains intact, and will be raised, the wreckers claiming ownership. She was valued at $35,000. Capt. Harry Zealand and his crew of Hamilton went down on her.

He Failed to Pass.

General Benjamin F. Butler was one of a commission to examine young applicants for admission to the bar, and before him came a youth who failed miserably on all that pertained to jurisprudence, case law, civil law, sumptuary law, unwritten law and due process of law. Finally Butler, who rather liked the chap and wanted to see him through, asked: "What would you like to be examined in? You have failed in everything we have suggested."

The reply came, "Try me on the statutes: I'm up on them."

Butler shook his head solemnly. "My young friend," he said, "I'm afraid you won't do. You may be ever so familiar with the statutes, but what is to prevent a fool legislature from repealing all you know?"

Another Railway Slaughter.

Buffalo, May 29.—Joseph Keller and Ray Sherman of Alden, N.Y., and Louis Carey of Auburn, Four Corners, Pa., were killed at Wende's Station at 2 o'clock yesterday morning while driving across the New York Central Railroad tracks. Their carriage was struck by an eastbound express train.

"JUST DRAGGING AROUND."

How many thousands of women understand the sad and pitiful meaning of that simple phrase: "Just dragging around." Women everywhere who feel that they have a work and a mission of womanhood to accomplish in this world will appreciate instantly the disheartened spirit of Mrs. Mattie Venhaus, of Tioga, Hancock County, Illinois.

"I had been sick for seven years," she says; "not in bed, but just dragging myself around. At last I took three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and five of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and it is impossible to describe in words the good they did me. My husband says 'Golden Medical Discovery' is the best medicine he ever tried for a cough. No praise is too high for Dr. Pierce's medicines."

Another lady, Mrs. S. P. Mesfort, of Lebanon, Warren Co., Ohio, says, "I think Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery the finest medicine on record. I have taken a number of bottles and it is the only medicine that relieved my terrible headaches."

Women who suffer should write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. He will send them the best professional advice that can be had anywhere in America and entirely without charge. Neither the "Golden Medical Discovery" nor the "Favorite Prescription" contains any alcohol to inebriate or create a morbid craving for stimulants.

Every woman should own a copy of his splendid book "The Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the greatest medical book for popular reading ever written. It contains a fund of knowledge of precious value to women. It has over a thousand pages elaborately illustrated with engravings and colored plates. The first great edition of more than half-a-million copies was sold at $1.50 each. The profit from this [illegible] his cherished intention of issuing a free edition one copy of which in paper-cover will be sent [illegible] the bare cost of customs and mailing, one-cent stamps; or a heavier, cloth-bound copy for 50 stamps.

MATRON AND MAID.

Baroness Ubrike von Levetzow, Goethe's last love, recently celebrated her ninety-fifth birthday at her home in Triblitz, Bohemia.

The first woman pensioner of the Spanish war is Mrs. S. C. Gibreath of Austin, whose husband, a major in the Seventh infantry, died in Porto Rico last summer.

Alice B. Smith of Cavendish, Vt., has a 5 cent piece dated 1837 that is apparently as fresh as when it issued from the mint, as it has been preserved as a souvenir and has not been in general circulation.

Lottie Fowler, who surprised many of the great men and crowned heads of the world 30 years ago as a clairvoyant and spiritualistic medium, is in the Manhattan State hospital, on Ward's island, for the insane.

Miss Elizabeth Brown, the English astronomical observer, who has just died, observed several total eclipses of the sun, going in 1887 to Kinashma, near Moscow; in 1889 to Trinidad and in 1896 to Vadso, in Lapland.

Because of Helen Gould's kindness to the men working on the Windsor ruins the workmen decided to give her a testimonial. She was touched by the offer, but refused to accept anything more than a set of resolutions.

The Duchess of Marlborough has good taste in jewels. In wearing ball gowns of soft, white, fluffy materials she invariably wears strings of pearls as ornaments and reserves her diamonds for gowns of more serious materials.

Mrs. Mary Smith Lockwood, president of the Woman's International Press union, was born and educated in New York. She is the author of "Historic Homes in Washington—Its Noted Men and Women." She is also one of the founders of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Miss Ellen Burdett, a young American woman, is said to have purchased the Pompeiian palace in the Cours la Reine, Paris, built by Prince Jerome Bonaparte 40 years ago, with the intention of turning it into a restaurant during the Paris exposition, where American visitors may find American cooking.

Mrs. Rosa B. Gates of Texas has been for three years a member of a class in which there were 32 young men. They were students at a Georgia medical college, where Mrs. Gates persisted in carrying off first honors. She did this the first year she was there. She did it again the second year. This year she made a better record than ever and has just been graduated at the head of the class.

Knew Him and Didn't Know Him.

A young couple called at a fashionable boarding house in the west end to engage board. They were from Chicago, and the husband had recently secured an appointment in one of the departments. The landlady, an amiable and pretty, if a trifle faded, little woman, showed the couple the vacant rooms, and one of them was finally accepted.

"Now, you'll want references, of course," said the young wife after the terms had been fixed. Then she mentioned the name of a Washington man of some prominence.

"You know him, or of him, I presume?" she inquired. "He is my husband's uncle."

"Well," replied the landlady, "I cannot precisely say that I know him. Nobody ever really knew him. He's something of a mystery. Now, I was married to him for 12 years, and at the conclusion of that period, when I secured my divorce, I don't think I could have conscientiously placed my hand over my heart and declared that I actually knew him. Some men are so difficult to get acquainted with, you know."

The situation was a bit embarrassing, but the young couple took the room they had decided upon anyhow.—Washington Post.

He Deals In Snow.

The Prince of Palermo is said to owe his wealth chiefly to the trade in snow, of which he has a monopoly. The snow is brought at night in baskets on mule back from the mountains to the coast and shipped to the Italian cities, where it is sold at 2 and 3 cents a pound.

A Good Report.

"My mother was troubled with rheumatism in her knee for a number of years, and it broke out into a running sore. She has taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now she is almost entirely well. She cannot speak too highly of this great medicine." Mrs. John Farr, Cloverlawns, Ancaster, Ontario.

Hood's Pills cure nausea, sick headache, biliousness, indigestion, constipation.

PARIS EXPOSITION.

SOME ACCOUNT OF THE PROPOSED PALACE OF ELECTRICITY.

The Most Important Inventions in This Branch of Science Will Be on View—The External and Internal Appearance of the Palace—A Wonderful Exhibit of the World's Electrical Achievements.

The Palace of Electricity will form one of the principal features of the great exhibition to be held in Paris next year. It is entirely devoted to electricity, and here will be on view all the most important inventions in this branch of science. The building is in two distinct parts. The first, over 200 feet in height, forms the facade of the Palace of Electricity, and is a sort of screen across the whole width of the Champ de Mars, concealing entirely from view the old Galerie des Machines. It is surmounted by a figure bearing a torch emerging from a crystal star, on a chariot drawn by two griffins. This facade is constructed of metal and glass embellished with ornaments in zinc repousse and transparent ceramic ware, and is to be covered with fairy lamps which at night time will show the outlines of the structure and give it the appearance of an enchanted palace. Behind this facade are the arcades of a gallery 450 yards long by 30 wide, and divided into three parts. Here the different apparatus and machines will be exhibited, and from here will start the wires which will distribute the electric light throughout the exhibition. The Chateau d'Eau, or cascades, will consist of a sort of grotto, with appropriate ornaments. From the center a stream of water will fall from a height of 90 feet from basin to basin, receiving on its way the tribute of fantastic monsters, of tritons and of dolphins. At nighttime the fountains will be illuminated by the electric light. These cascades will use some 400 gallons of water per second. In the middle will be an allegorical group representing progress leading humanity. This group will be at least 30 feet high. The Palace of Electricity was designed by M. Henard, and the Chateau d'Eau by M. Paulin.

A FUTURE PEER.

Mr. John Henniker Heaton, Who Has Done So Much for Penny Postage.

John Henniker Heaton, who, it is said, is to be raised to the peerage by the Queen on her coming birthday, is the father of the universal penny postage plan whereby a letter may be sent from any one part to any other part of the British Empire. Mr. Heaton is a very wealthy Australian, who owns large tracts of land in the island continent, and who is also the proprietor of several newspapers in the same country. He is a descendant of the Lancashire Heatons of Heaton, and is 51 years old. He was educated at King's College, London, and went to Australia while yet in his teens. He invested his money in farming, cattle raising and journalism, and prospered so well in all these fields of activity that he soon became a rich man. He once owned in Australia a quantity of land which was the equal in size of the whole County of Kent in England. Mr. Heaton has busied himself with many reform movements, but the penny post was his chief hobby, and he succeeded in having it set going. The chief source of his income is the newspapers he owns in Australia.

Of a Scientific Turn.

Only one death from smallpox occurred in London last year. In 1896 there were 2,646 cases and 190 deaths.

We are sometimes asked to recommend a handy little first book on science to give to intelligent children. We cannot do better than suggest as a primer the English edition of M. Paul Bert's "First Year of Scientific Knowledge."—Science Gossip.

In order to preserve the colors of plants it is necessary to kill the specimens quickly; and this can be effected by plunging them for a few seconds in boiling water. If a plant is allowed to die slowly the colors of its leaves and flowers will gradually fade.

The largest waves are seen off Cape Horn, rising to 46 feet in height and 765 feet from crest to crest. Waves in the North Atlantic have been observed to rise 43 feet. In the German Ocean the height does not exceed 18½ feet and in the Mediterranean 14½ feet.

Has Had Many Names.

The Earl of Ancaster, in his 66 years of life, has borne more names than fall to the lot of most peers. He began life as Mr. Heathcote, the son of Lord Aveland; at the age of 27 he succeeded his father as Baron Aveland; ten years ago he became twenty-second Lord Willoughby de Eresby in succession to his mother, and six years ago he was made Earl of Ancaster. It was through his mother that he came into possession of most of his 132,000 acres, and of his three castles in England, Scotland and Wales.

A Couple of Rat Stories.

George Purcell tells some stories about mining coal that are interesting. Purcell says a rat, when caught in a trap, will cut off a limb to escape. He one day caught a rat with a blacksmith's pinchers. He had only time to fix the pinchers on the rat's tail, but with sufficient grip to hold the rat for a time. He intended taking the rat to a feed box in the barn, where its fighting qualities could be tested by a terrier. The rat, hanging by its tail, turned around to free itself from the pinchers. Finding that the pinchers were harder than its teeth, it turned its attention to its own tail. It cut with its teeth a ring around the tail and then made a jump. The skin pealed off the tail, leaving the tail covering in the grip of Purcell and the pinchers. It is needless to say that the rat escaped.

Miners believe that rats leave a falling mine. M. W. Kerrigan met a horde of rats one day when he was entering a mine. He attempted to kill them with a stick, but as fast as he knocked one out another took his place. He was accompanied by a dog, and the dog was so badly bitten by the rats that he sought shelter behind Kerrigan. Seeing that the dog was badly injured by the attack of the rats, Kerrigan took him outside the mine to have his injuries attended to. Kerrigan then returned to the workings, but was surprised to find that the entry in which he had met the rats had fallen in during his absence.—Pittsburg News.

Sextons In New York.

"Sexton and Undertaker" is the sign usually found affixed to or near the New York churches, but it does not mean that the sexton actually conducts an undertaker's establishment. He merely contracts for the funerals of the members of the congregation and sublets the work to what are known as wholesale undertakers, who attend to this class of work exclusively.

A 20 per cent commission is the sexton's share of the proceeds, and, taking into consideration the large membership of some of the New York churches and the elaborate funerals that take place almost daily, it can readily be seen that to be a sexton is an honorable calling—for it is a business that brings in the coin. The profits of a sexton in one of the large down town churches are estimated at $10,000 annually from his funeral business alone. Weddings are not so profitable, but they do fairly well and are cheerful. He collects the pew rents and takes his habitual commission; he is paid for opening the church and for closing it and a few other things that keep him from starvation. But there is one thing he must look sharp after, and that is his collections. It is a peculiar fact, but people will stand off a funeral bill as long and as callously as any other.—Exchange.

THE PEACE FARCE.

Europe will go into the peace conference confident in the expectation that it is not likely to have any wars on hand until after the peace arrangements are all perfected.—Chicago Record.

With an embassador, an envoy extraordinary, a university president, an army officer and a navy officer on it, our delegation to the czar's conference is admirably symmetrical and well balanced.—Hartford Courant.

Captain Mahan, author of the term "sea power" and strategist in the late destruction of Spain's navy, seems rather a unique figure to send as United States delegate to a peace conference.—Kansas City Star.

Let the emperor of Russia take the initiative by moving, very early in the session, an adoption of a definite plan, and Kipling's "Truce of the Bear" can no longer inspire distrust in England as to the czar's sincerity. That in itself would be a victory for real peace well worth gaining.—Boston Globe.

Good Friday In England.

Many quaint and some grotesque observances of Good Friday have prevailed in various localities. In Brighton the custom of skipping the rope on that day led to the use of the term "Long Rope day." Six or eight adults, with a long rope, skipped at one time. In the Sussex villages men and boys play marbles. At St. Bartholomew's church, London, 21 old women appear and before a crowd of curious onlookers bend their stiffened, aged knees to pick up 21 sixpences.

This latter custom had its origin before the great fire, when an eccentric woman left her property to have 21 sixpences laid upon her gravestone in St. Bartholomew's church, which were annually to be picked up by aged widows.

At the Church of All Hallows the youngest boys of the Blue Coat school are enabled, by the will of Peter Symonds, dated 1587, to divide 60 new pennies and 60 packets of raisins among them.

In London and all over England the eating of "hot cross buns" is the special feature of the day. The original home of this English custom is said to be in Cambridgeshire and Hertfordshire. There, wherever the old Roman roads crossed, stood the altar of Diana of the Crossways, to whom the Romans offered their sacred cakes.

A Terrible Affliction.

There is no suffering the human flesh is heir to that is more severe than rheumatism. But the pain can be for ever removed by taking Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. Mrs. James Hunt, Port Hope, Ont., suffered with Muscular Rheumatism in the hands for three years. Four bottles of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure cured her completely. She has been free from pain since. This preparation is used internally. One bottle contains ten days' treatment, price 50 cents. For sale at all drug stores.

A Free Translation.

"And you say the idiot of a teacher told you that you had an extravagant fool of a father?"

"That's what he meant."

"But what did he say?"

"He said it was criminal folly to waste money on the education of such a chump as I am."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The term "infantry" soldiers originated with the Spanish and was first applied to the military force employed by an infanta, or young Prince of Spain, to rescue his father from the Moors.

Robbed the Grave

"A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters'; and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts. a bottle, every bottle guaranteed. ARGUES AGAINST THE DOCTRINE

REV MR ARMITAGE STRONGLY DENOUNCES CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

A Big Congregation at All Saints' Church to Hear the Address—The Speaker Claims That it is Not Scientific, is Unchristian, is Inconsistent and is Dangerous.

At All Saints' church last evening Rev W L Armitage spoke on "The Relation of Christians to Christian Science." The church was crowded, chairs having to be placed in the aisle for extra accommodation, and many were unable to gain admittance. Rev Mr Armitage criticized the doctrine of Christian Science strongly, arguing that it was neither Christian nor scientific, and he warned his hearers against being led to encourage the movement in any way, urging them to remain steadfast in the faith of their fathers.

Rev Mr Armitage spoke from the words, "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving head to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron." He stated that he had chosen to speak of Christian Science, as it is called, not because it is new, but because if nothing were said to refute the arguments advanced for it, it might look as if these could not be refuted. He took it not as a controversial subject, but because he thought it in the line of his duty to strive to crush out the erroneous doctrine and show it contrary to truth.

Why does it interest people? Everyone should ask himself this, because if we can tell why we are interested in a thing we can soon tell from conscience whether or not we ought to take it up. It has an attractive name, "Christian Science." What could be better? It signifies knowledge Christianized or sanctified. The very name is enough to make men proud of it. It seems to stand for a higher form of truth. In origin it is called a revelation, coming in 1866 through one Mrs Baker Eddy, who claims it to be a divine revelation. Her theory or revelation is given forth in her book, "Science and Health," which Rev Mr Armitage believes to be a most "illogical, disconnected, incomplete conglomeration of incomprehensible bosh." He did not wish to be uncharitable, but was sincere in his words.

A FAKE.

The speaker went on to say that the principles underlying it were advanced by

A SAD DEATH.

Demise of Mr Edward Lynch at the Age of Twenty-Five.

A sad death occurred when Mr. Edward J. Lynch passed away at St. Joseph's hospital early yesterday morning. The deceased was the third son of the late Mr. Jas. Lynch and was twenty-five years of age. He was taken ill about Friday, 19th inst., with bowel trouble, probably an obstruction in the bowels, and was taken to the hospital three days later. It was realized that the case was serious and death was not unexpected.

Mr. Lynch was a most estimable young man of unblemished character, and was very popular among his associates. He was an employee of the Lock works. The news of his untimely death was received with much grief. He leaves a mother and the brothers are Messrs. Harry Lynch, of Cleveland, John, of Rochester, William, of town, and Fred, lately removed to British Columbia. The sisters are Mrs. J. J. Lynch and Miss Lottie Lynch, of town.

The funeral took place from the family residence, 672 Stewart-st., this afternoon at 3.30 o'clock to St. Peter's cathedral and the Roman Catholic cemetery. The floral tributes to the deceased were many and beautiful.

THE CONFERENCE.

Programme for the Bay of Quinte Conference This Week.

The Bay of Quinte Conference of the Methodist church meets in Belleville this week. The Stationing committee will meet to-day (Monday), and on Tuesday a preachers' conference will be held. On Thursday the conference missionary meeting is to be held and on Friday a reception service will be held in the various Methodist churches, the city mission, John-st. church and the Baptist church. On Monday a varied programme is recommended and Tuesday will be devoted to Sabbath observance and prohibition.

GREATER EFFORT.

The Hospital Picnic on July 1st to be on an Unusual Scale.

The first announcement regarding the annual picnic in aid of St. Joseph's hospital was made yesterday. As usual the event will be held on July 1st, but this year it will be on an unusually large scale and will far surpass all past events. Energetic committees are being formed to take charge of the work and a number of very special attractions will be secured for the day. In fact extra efforts will be put forth to make the picnic a grand success. This picnic has always been the biggest affair in town for Dominion day but this year attractions never before seen at it will be given and it is expected to draw an immense crowd from all parts of the district.

The special effort is made this year because of the building of the House of Providence, which will entail a heavy expense, and this cause of charity is the reason why the general public should lend their heartiest and strongest support to those having the picnic in charge.

New Openwork Insertions, 6, 7, 8, 10, 12½c. per yard. New Tucked Muslins, some with "open work" insertions, 25 to 50c. per yard. New Black Summer Grenadiers, 20 to 40c. per yard. J. SUTCLIFFE & SONS. 369 George-st.

MR HATTON AND MR HOLST IN THE FINAL FOR THE GOLF HANDICAP.

The Second Draw in the Ladies' Club—The Expense of Golf—Miscellaneous Items.

Lacrosse.

The Toronto Tecumsehs defeated Galt in Toronto on Saturday by 5 goals to 2.

The Peterboroughs are trying to arrange a game with the Torontos or Tecumsehs for the city on June 9th.

Golf.

Following is the draw for the second round of the ladies' handicap:

Miss L. Davidson 18 vs. Mrs Dennistoun 6, Miss N. Hall 3 vs. Miss Boucher scratch, Mrs. Aylmer 3 vs. Miss K. Hall 18, Miss Fairweather 18 vs Miss Rackham 18, Miss D. Hamilton scratch vs Miss Kempt 9, Miss L. Hall scratch vs Mrs. Hill 18, Miss Dennistoun 6 vs Miss Fair 12, Miss Hatton 12 vs Miss Archer 12, Miss L. Dennistoun 9 vs. Mrs. Rogers 12, Miss A. Hamilton, a bye.

The semi-finals of the spring handicap competition were played off on Saturday, on a pretty wet links, with the following result:

G. W. Hatton x 18 beat H. H. D. Hall x 9 by 7 holes; E. W. Holst x 18 beat C. Bell x 12 by 1 hole. So now Mr. G. W. Hatton, and Mr. Holst are left to struggle in the finals for which of them shall have first or second prize. The match is to be played off before Saturday, 3rd of June. Both men, although beginners at the game this spring, have been making low scores. Their handicap is the same, so it will be a very good match.

Toronto Globe:—The ladies of the Peterborough Golf Club will play a match with the ladies of the High Park Golf Club on the Morningside links on Friday next.

A writer in the Toronto News says: Expense is the great drawback to the game of golf, and those in authority in our clubs would do well in the conduct of affairs to always keep this in mind. There is so much of absolutely necessary cost in the game that the outlay which is not necessary, but only tends towards more comfort should be closely criticised. To play, a certain set of clubs are necessary—the fewer the better—then balls are a source of considerable outlay, especially in the case of beginners, who quickly use up two or three in a round, besides constantly losing them. The older player does not cut up the ball in the same way, and from practice in following the flight seldom loses one. The price of golf balls seems absurd, considering the

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Rev A H Ranton on "The Wages of Sin" at George-st. Church.

GEORGE-ST.

Rev. A. H. Ranton spoke at George-st. church last evening. The edifice was crowded and great interest was manifested by the congregation. Mr. Ranton's address was powerful and eloquent. He spoke on the words "The wages of sin is death" and dealt with his subject in the firm and earnest manner which characterizes his work.

The music of the day was pleasing. The morning anthem was "Ye servants Rejoice," (Reid). The evening anthem "Ye Shall Dwell in the Land," with bass solo by Mr. Frank Turner was very nicely rendered. During the offertory Miss Pascoe rendered a contralto solo with most pleasing effect.

CHARLOTTE-ST.

Rev. Mr. Crossley preached at both services at Charlotte-st. church yesterday. The choir at the morning service rendered the anthem "Trust the Lord" with obligato solo by Miss Hall and duet by Miss Hall and Miss M. Stephens. Both were sweetly sung. As an offertory hymn Miss Dorothy Dark rendered a very pretty solo "It is Jesus." The evening anthem was "Rock of Ages" with solo by Miss Hall Hall. "Nearer My God to Thee" was sung during the offertory with solo by Miss Martha Stephens and duet by Miss Stephens and Mr. Sid Mitchell.

ON THE MIDLAND.

Trouble Expected on this Division of the Grand Trunk.

Lindsay Post, Saturday:—Since the G. T.R. trackmen's strike there have been mutterings of trouble on this portion of the Midland division. The enginemen, who now have several delegates in Montreal pressing for higher pay, feel that they are exposed to unusual dangers on this division as a result of the trackmen's strike, inasmuch as the tracks are not in as good condition as the main line, while the "double-header" trains being run are almost as heavy as those passing over any portion of the system.

Several strong resolutions were framed and adopted last evening, and will be forwarded to the Montreal delegates for presentation to the G.T.R. management.

We understand that a mass meeting of all the local trainsmen will be held to-morrow to consider the situation and concert measures to obtain recognition of the trackmen's claims and release the drivers, conductors, firemen, brakesmen and the travelling public from the strain induced by the present unguarded condition of the line.

THE CANOE MEET.

The Northern Division Want to Make a showing This Year.

The northern division of the A. C. A. has issued the following letter in regard to the annual meet this year:

"This speaks for itself, for where the American Canoe Association meets, there are the canoeists gathered together and there result good times such as are only possible to canoeists. Cruising, camping, racing, story-telling, living, eating, sleeping under canvas for two whole weeks in the heart of the summer, among the beautiful waters of the Division which has charge of the meet. Hither come paddlers, sailors and "has beens," from the East and from the West, the North and the South, glad to again feel the touch of the old gipsy spirit and to once more get near to outdoors. Business is forgotten, and old friends like Hogan, Wilkin, "Dad" Thorn, Louis Hall, D'Arcy Scott, "Charlie" Forbush, Seavey, McKendrick, Huntington, Morse, Winnie, Stewart and dozens of others, literally fall upon each other's neck in the joy of meeting. Soon the meet is an established fact, "Sweetheart" is put in commission the "Malaria" calls, and campfires rarebits, and "drop ins" are in full swing. Ladies' Camp, familiarly known as "squaw," is peopled with its charming inhabitants and the "Mess Tent" brightened by their presence. "Headquarters" is the general meeting ground; here the bulletins are read and here everybody gathers for the news of the day. Bye and bye the racing men get out their boats, and the river or lake is studded with sails and glistening paddles. Things are free and unconventional and everybody dresses and disports themselves as will be most conductive to their pleasure.

"This year the meet will be held at Hay Island in the St. Lawrence, near Gananoque, form Aug. 4th to the 18th, with "Dad" Thorn as Commodore and "Charlie Forbush as Sec.-Treas.

"The Northern Division wants you to come and bring your friends. We have not been properly represented at the "Meet" since '89 and the officers would like to show all the good people south the line that the home of the canoe is still peopled by canoeists who know a good time and get to it.

"Arrangements have been made with the G. T. R. to carry A.C.A. members at fare and one third and one canoe and duffle free on each ticket.

"Send your name to the Purser, G. Walter Begg, Toronto, stating that you will come to the Meet or "break a paddle" and if not a member, fill in the accompanying application blank. If you are, get some one else to do it, as we want at least one hundred new members this year.

He Didn't Need It.

Could the funny sayings and incidents at the tenants' dinners in Scotland be collected they would make an unrivaled book of humor. Mistakes of amusing and sometimes embarrassing nature occur frequently at such functions. One story is told of a guest at a Scottish tenants' dinner who tasted ice cream for the first time on that occasion. He pushed a large spoonful of the frozen mixture into his mouth and jumped from his chair with agony expressed on his face. He let out a yell and cried out, "Ow, ow, ma rotten tooth!" and could not be induced to eat any more.

At another Scottish affair of the kind a good old farmer was seated next to the hostess. She served him a bit of savory omelet, which seemed to cause the old man deep disappointment. His idea of an omelet had always been a dessert with sugar, or fruit or jams, and after tasting the sample before him he turned to the hostess and said, "Weel, ma lady, I canna compliment you on your puddin's."

The late Duke of Buccleuch told a story of a tenant at one of the farmers' dinners on his estates who was asked by the duchess if he would take some rhubarb, a dish she was fond of. The farmer was surprised, but answered politely, "I'm muckle obleeged to your grace, but I dinna' need it."

Pneumonia.

A bright chap who has traveled much told me that some years ago he met a man where he had camped, in the mining districts of California, who could make the New York doctors ashamed of the regular practice in a case of pneumonia. Said he: "It stands to reason. The claim of the man is this: Unless some part of the digestive process is clogged pneumonia is impossible, and it is even quite difficult to take cold if the circulation of the fluids of the body is free.

"His method is simplicity itself. In the first place, to start with, he gives a big dose of physic and puts his man into lots of blankets, and then he gathers all the bottles he can find in the camp and fills them with hot water and heats every part of the man but his head. As soon as he thinks the physic is out of his stomach, he makes him sip hot water. Just as soon as he sees a drop of perspiration on his forehead he will say: 'I've got you, old man. Keep the heat going until the pills operate freely, and don't let him take cold.' I have seen bad cases where they would have choked to death in less than an hour out and at work in two or three days. He didn't consider it a question of constitution at all. It was only a question of cleaning the man out and keeping him warm." —New York Times.

The Fascination of Gold Hunting.

Once you have seen a "color" in the bottom of a pan with the black sand following it around like a faithful servant, you can never again be deceived by the false glitter of any other particles. You would know it if you saw it between cobblestones in Broadway or if it were no larger than a pinhead at the bottom of a trout pool.

For the moment the yellow pile makes you feel like seeking a claim of your own and harvesting its treasure for yourself. But when you look at the miry path along the base of the mountain by the creek side and think of following it with a pack on your back until it is no more and a wilderness begins; think of passing on over the mountains until you come to what you consider a likely place and thawing through 30 feet of earth at the rate of a foot a day in the haphazard possibility of finding "pay dirt," you conclude that the poetry of the thing can be better appreciated by sitting on some one else's dump. — Frederick Palmer in Scribner's.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "Out Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

He grew white, even to his lips, and bit them, lest his pain should force a cry.

"Oh, Rupert!" she said, "you are always kind, and I am so grieved! Indeed, I hate to give you pain; but I could not love you."

"You shall not even try," he replied, gently, "if it gives you pain; but love is generous, seeking only the happiness of the one love, not self. Do you know, Sybil, that if by dying here at your feet I could secure your happiness, I would die with a smile on my lips?"

"I believe it," she said, simply.

The time came when the generosity and might of his love struck her, and she realized what she had lost; now another glamour was upon her.

"Then you must not be troubled," he said. "Perhaps in the years to come—"

"Ah! yes," she interrupted; "that is what I want to tell you, and I do not know how. You are very good to me and I shall always love you; but then not in that way, Rupert, because I—"

She stopped short then; she could not look in his face and tell him what he asked for, in vain, she had given to another.

"Because you what?" he said, gently. "Have no fear, Sybil; tell me all."

"Because I love some one else," she whispered. "oh! so dearly, Rupert! All my life has gone into my love; it has made earth heaven to me!"

He trembled like a man whose heart is pierced; for one-half moment earth and sky seemed to meet, but the trembling of the little hand he held restored him. When was he not strong for her? The fair, passionate child—for she was little else—raised her lovely face to him. Ah, Heaven! that women are so cruel to the men who love them.

"You must bless me, Rupert," said she. "Promise to stand my friend if papa should not be willing."

The numb despair that had first seized him was passing away, and a morbid terror took its place—a terror that chilled his heart, and made him draw the golden head down as though to shield it from harm.

"I will help you," he said; "but tell me one thing, Sybil—who is it you love?"

"Captain Ayrton," she said, proudly.

And he dropped her hands with a low, despairing cry.

"Great Heaven!" he said; "so fair a child, so young, so innocent; is there no mercy for her? Sybil," he added, bending over her pityingly, "is it true—do you really love this man?"

"I really do love him. Do you not understand, Rupert, loving him has changed earth into heaven? I am happy as the angels. I do not want to pain you, but you make me speak. Listen. I love him so that I could die looking upon his face—that if I lay dead and buried under the green turf, and he called me, I should hear him and wake."

"Hush, child!" he said, for her slender figure trembled with the passion of her words. "Remember he is but mortal; a higher Power alone raises the dead. Is it too late for advice, for interference, for remonstrance?"

"It is too late for everything, Rupert," she replied.

"Then I pray God to have mercy on you," he said solemnly; and the deep sorrow of his voice startled him.

"Why?" she asked, her fair face turned in wonder to his.

"Because you are drawing down a terrible fate upon your own head. Pause and think, Sybil. I, who stand here loving you as man never loved woman before with the might of a generous love—I who would give you this moment to a true man if you loved him, and give him my fortune, my life, all that I have to make you happy—I, Sybil, standing in the clear face of Heaven, say I would rather see you dead at my feet than the wife of this man!"

"Why?" she asked again, proudly, tearing her hands from his clasp, and raising her eyes undauntedly to his. "Tell me why you speak so of him!"

"Because he is a bad man, a gambler, a liar; and worse, because he has made playthings of women's hearts, Sybil, and will break yours; because he neither fears God nor man, and loves nothing in this world but himself."

"It is false!" she cried; "he is a noble man, true and brave, and I love him. Do you hear, Sir Rupert? I love him, and I will take his part against the whole world!"

They stood for some moments in silence. The south wind seemed waiting for what she would say next.

"For your father's sake, Sybil," he said—"your fond proud, old father—for love of your dead mother—for your own honor, pause before it is too late!"

Her face grew crimson with anger.

"My father will not oppose me," she said, "and my mother knows. What shall I say to you, Sir Rupert Dacre, who profess to be my friend, yet slander the man I love?"

"It is no slander, Sybil," he said, sadly. "I will give you proofs—"

"I do not want them," she returned; "they would be false as you are yourself. You have slandered a noble gentleman, and I hold you beneath contempt. Talk of dying for me, and with the same lips traducing the man I love!"

She turned angrily away; he followed her, and laid his hand gently upon her arm.

"Sybil," he said, earnestly, "let me save you."

But she flung his hand angrily away.

"Never speak to me again!" she cried; "never again! Henceforth we are strangers, or enemies—never again friends! I forbid you to seek my presence, to speak to me, or to remember that I live! Do you hear?" continued the beautiful fury.

"I hear," said Sir Rupert, sadly, "and I will obey."

She never looked at him, but walked rapidly across the garden to the house. He saw the sheen of her golden hair, the glimmer of her blue dress; he looked for the last time at the face that had been as the face of an angel to him.

Then he turned to his own misery, but it mastered him. He was a strong man—strong to suffer and endure; he was smitten with a sorrow that was beyond his strength.

When the moon rose its beams fell upon the white features of a man lying as one dead among the broken lilies.

CHAPTER XII.

"I REFUSE TO GIVE YOU MY DAUGHTER"

Sybil Jocelyn walked quickly to the house. The squire was still sleeping in his easy-chair; Irene and Violet had not returned. She went into the drawing-room and paced, with quick steps, from window to door.

Anything but this. She would have pardoned Rupert if he had been angry with her, if he had reproached her, if he had called her light or false; but he had revenged himself by slandering her love, and she would not forgive him; no, not if he were dying, and sent for her.

Her face burned, her eyes flashed, her girlish figure was drawn up to its full height. She was no longer the fair, loving child; she was transformed into an angry, outraged woman.

Opposition affected her as it does unhappily, so many girls—it made her resolve upon blindly following her own will. She never for one moment thought or believed there was the least truth in what Sir Rupert or any one else said of Captain Ayrton.

It only angered and incensed her. She never dreamed there was truth in it.

Her anger subsided as night came on. She was too generous to overlook entirely the pain she had inflicted upon the noble man who loved her. She remembered the keenness of his disappointment, the sorrow in his voice, the patience and might of his love.

She was quite resolved upon never speaking to him again; the lips that had spoken falsely of her love should never speak so kindly to her. If he entered a room where she was, she would leave it, unless he chose to apologize, and swear what he had said was false.

Then her reverie was broken, for the squire was calling her; he wanted his songs, his darling's merry laugh, and pretty, girlish talk. And when she had sung to him until the tears stood warm and bright in her own eyes, she took her accustomed place at his feet, and the squire talked to her as he would never talk again.

She listened to him, she answered gayly; but her thoughts were back in Glynn Woods; it was Lyster Ayrton's fair face she saw, and not her father's kindly glance; it was Lyster's voice that threw its glamour over her, and not the squire's.

Never more would the old man bend over his darling, play with her golden hair, or give her back jest for jest. He had loved her all his life; he had lived for her; he had lavished wealth and luxury upon her; he would have laid his gray head upon the block for her; and she had left him for one who could never lavish real love upon her.

"You are tired," he said at last, bending tenderly over her. "Kiss me, and say good-night."

She raised her face and kissed him; laid her warm, fresh lips upon his brow; then, with a cry, buried her face in his breast.

"You are overtired," said the squire. "Good-night, my darling. God's blessing be all about you!"

It was a quaint, favorite expression of his; to-night it gave her more pain than pleasure. Had her father been alone, she would have told him all, and the story of her life would have been different.

It was noon the next day when Captain Ayrton presented himself, and received the usual reply—there was no one at home.

"I do not want to see the ladies," he said; "my business is with Squire Jocelyn, and I must see him."

He managed to find his way to the library, where the squire sat alone. He was coldly received. After a few brief words of greeting, the squire inquired what was Captain Ayrton's business with him.

It all came out then, and words are weak to tell of the squire's angry, haughty dismay.

"You ask me for my child!" he cried; "you, against whom men with daughters and wives close their doors! You are not even an honorable man! You must be mad!"

"It is a very common madness," he replied. "I love your daughter, and ask you to give her to me."

"I refuse!" cried the squire. "She is the daughter of my old age; but I would ten thousand times sooner see her dead than give her to you."

"Am I so very bad?" asked the young man, bitterly.

"You are," said the squire, "so very bad, that I would sooner see her dead. You did not deceive me. Your character is well known. You are not even capable of appreciating my daughter. She is far beyond you. She is not of the class of women you understand. I see your motive. You want money, and you think my poor child will have it! To me you are so base and mean that I do not doubt, if I feared you, I could buy you off at a heavy price."

Hot blood rushed into the fair face, a dangerous gleam played in the blue eyes. The squire liked him rather the better for that.

"You are Sybil Jocelyn's father," said the young man, "or I would show you the price of such an insult to me!"

"There is no need," said the squire. "Hear my resolve, and then I shall not fear your asking for my daughter again. I swear most solemnly—and heed me well—that if my daughter ever becomes

COULDN'T GRUB AT NAPANEE

Eleven Bridge Builders From the Victoria Bridge.

They Refused to Replace Grand Trunk Trackmen Strikers—Many Constables Sworn in to Protect the Men, But Their Services Not Needed—Meals From Belleville—All But Six of Three Coach Loads Refuse to Work.

Napanee, May 29.—The G.T.R. brought 11 laborers from Victoria Bridge and placed them at Napanee, along with five Frenchmen brought from Montreal and sworn in at Kingston as special constables, whose duty would be to guard the above laborers, who were to patrol the track. When morning arrived these men positively refused to go over the track, stating that they were not trackmen, but bridgemen, and would not do trackmen's work or take their places under any consideration.

On arrival at Napanee about 7 o'clock Saturday evening and applying for accommodation none of the hotels or boarding houses would either give them lodging or supper, nor would the merchants of the town supply provisions, so strong is their sympathy with the striking trackmen. Provisions for the laborers were finally procured from Belleville.

Three Coach Loads.

Kingston, Ont., May 29.—Three coach loads of men reached here Saturday to work on the G.T.R. The men have all gone save six, who say they did not engage as trackmen but as blacksmiths and bridge builders. Police Magistrate Louff has sworn in Montreal men to act as special constables on the line.

Situation at Montreal.

Montreal, May 29.—The situation in the matter of the Grand Trunk strike remains, so far as can be learned, in statu quo. All sorts of reports are afloat regarding further movements, but nothing can be learned definitely. The Grand Trunk people will only say that the men's places are being rapidly filled all along the line.

Matter Serious at Hamilton.

Hamilton, May 29.—The strike of the G.T.R. trackmen is taking a serious aspect here. Engineers and firemen of the road attended the meeting of the local strikers yesterday afternoon and afterwards sent a telegram to the management of the road at Montreal, to the effect that if there is not better protection against accidents given them on the line they will strike. The strikers are more determined than ever that all their demands shall be acceded to before they return.

Word has been received from the Minister of Justice that no action will be taken with regard to the importation of aliens, in view of the fact that the international commission last year agreed that the alien law in Canada shall remain in abeyance. Until United States officials violate this understanding, Hon. D. Mills says there will be no prosecution in Canada.

"A SCANDAL AND DISGRACE."

The Trackmen's Strike Discussed in Parliament on Saturday.

Ottawa, May 29.—On motion to go into committee of supply being made in the House on Saturday, Mr. Clarke, West Toronto, called attention to the condition of things on the Grand Trunk Railway, owing to the strike of the trackmen. He thought that the company not only owed something to the men, but to the travelling public. The men said that they were paid $1 a day for each day they were employed, less two or three cents a day, which were deducted, so that for 10 or 12 hours' work they received about 97 cents. He had no hesitation in saying that men who were expected to work out of doors at all times of the year for 10 or 12 hours a day in Canada and only received 97 cents were underpaid. He had taken the earliest opportunity of calling the attention of the Government to the matter, so that the claims of the men might receive that consideration to which they were justly entitled.

Hon. Mr. Blair said that he had carefully studied the newspaper reports of the strike, but had not been able to arrive at any decision as to the merits of the case. While he largely agreed with Mr. Clarke as to the wages received by the men being low, it must be admitted that this was largely a question of supply and demand. While one might sympathize with the strikers, it did not follow that it was the duty of the Minister of Railways to interfere, or that the Department of Railways was charged with the responsibility of settling controversies of this kind. Unless the parties to the struggle were themselves willing to refer their differences to the arbitration of some outside authority, he thought no good result could be obtained by the gratuitous offer of services which would not be appreciated by either party.

Sir Charles Tupper said he believed the Government would be right to give this matter its prompt attention and to intervene if it considered that the circumstances warranted intervention.

Hon. Mr. Blair quoted the instance of the British Government not interfering in labor's struggles until it was shown that its services would be appreciated.

Mr. Wallace thought it was an extraordinary thing if the Minister of Railways was not justified in interfering. It was a scandal and a disgrace to Canada that any railway company should keep its employes down to starvation wages.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that in cases of strikes public sympathy usually was with the employes, but it did not necessarily follow that the employes were always right. He agreed with the Minister of Railways that it would not be proper for the Government to interfere at the present stage.

The matter then dropped.

Killed by a Through Freight.

West Lorne, Ont., May 29.—John Johnson and his two sons, Peter and John, farmers, on Saturday morning did not notice a through freight, westbound, until their horses were on the track. On seeing the train the father grabbed the lines from his youngest son and caused a delay. In an instant the train struck the wagon. The horses got free, but the occupants were thrown several rods. The father was instantly killed. The youngest boy and part of the wagon were carried over a quarter of a mile on the cow-catcher. The boy at last rolled off, fortunately on the outside of the rails, or he would have been killed. The eldest son cannot possibly live. The youngest son, it is thought, will live.

New Frozen Insects Revive.

Experiments in reviving frozen insects, by Mr. S. F. Aaron, show some surprising results. A large cecropia moth, frozen in the center of a snowball until it was perfectly brittle, revived in 20 seconds when held near a stove. Several newly hatched io moths revived in a similar manner after being frozen stiff and then thawed out. Similar experiments with ants, butterflies and house flies gave the same results. But Mr. Aaron noticed that recently hatched insects resist cold better than older ones.

Scores and thousands of grateful men and women have been rescued from the miseries and dangers of kidney disease by this greatest of all kidney cures.

Mr. D. C. Simmons, Mabee, Ont., writes: "My kidneys and back were so bad I was unable to work or sleep. My urine had sediment like brick dust, I was compelled to get up four or five times during the night. I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and concluded to give them a trial. I have only used one box and am completely cured. I was a great sufferer for 18 years, but my kidneys do not bother me now. I enjoy good rest and sleep and consider Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills a boon to suffering humanity."

Some cough mixtures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.

Better put the cough out.

That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.

But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and the oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheldon, February 28th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

ARGUES AGAINST THE DOCTRINE

Bishop Berkley, who lived about the end of the seventeenth century, and who, resenting and turning from the materialistic spirit of his time, formed a conception of Idealism, in which the principles are identically the same. The principles are the same as those of the mesmerist, the Indian "medicine man" and the Egyptian fakir.

NOT SCIENCE.

It claims to be Christian Science. The speaker claimed that it is not science at all. Used as it is, the word must go contrary to all laws of language. It is claimed to be a revelation. Yet science is never a revelation. It is classified knowledge discovered by human investigation. No true science can be found in the book "Science and Health." Christian Science as a circle of assertions, iterated and reiterated, over and over again, as "God is good; good is God." They claim their science to be above all other sciences. They claim it is a revelation. They claim everything outside of Christian Science to be vague, hypothetical and untrue. Yet the Bible is outside. Healing, medicine and surgery are not sciences, but are arts. Rev Mr Armitage claimed that Mrs Eddy did not know the meaning of the word "science" when she used it.

NOT CHRISTIAN.

It is not Christian, went on Rev Mr Armitage. Maybe it does not set aside or disparage the Scriptures. But there never was a heresy but has had in it a deal of truth, and this is what makes them so dangerous. That error which contains truth in the greatest of errors. Why is Christian Science unchristian? It is unchristian in its use of the Scriptures. The speaker read numerous passages from the Bible and showed how they are interpreted in the light of the new doctrine. We notice only a couple of these. "Thou shalt have none other gods but Me," Rev Mr Armitage pointed out is interpreted to mean, "Thou shalt have no life, no intelligence, no substance, no truth, no love but what is spiritual." "Unto us a child is born" is interpreted as "This is Christian Science. When a new spiritual idea is born into the world the text is fulfilled." "If this is not blasphemy it is very near it," declared the speaker. The Christian Scientists teach that Christ was simply a human being, a man, and that, being imperfect, He was not able to conquer the maladists of mortal mind.

INCONSISTENT.

The speaker devoted some time to showing that the doctrine is inconsistent. It teaches that Christ came in form to be appreciated by the senses and yet claims that the senses are false. Mrs Eddy claims that those who use her discoveries without giving proper credit break the Commandment, "Thou shalt not steal." While sin is declared to be a "species of insanity" why condemn those who are insane? The Holy Ghost is taught to be the Great Comforter, yet they teach that Christian Science is the comforter that will lead to all truth. "It is blasphemy," said Rev Mr Armitage. It teaches that God is spirit and man is spirit, which means that man is God, a system of Pantheism.

CONCLUSION.

The idea of mind healing is nothing new and there is something in it. But hypnotic suggestion is at the beginning of the influence of mind over matter. The healing also teaches not organic diseases; it deals with functional disease. The power of our minds, of our wills, is a wonderful one, but to use that power without license or understanding would be a grave danger. The truth was delivered to the saints but once and it was not so late as 1866. The speaker closed with a warning against the dangers of having anything to do with Christian Science.

CHANGE OF ORGANIST.

Mr. Percy Owens Goes to Toronto and Mr Rodgers Succeeds at St. John's.

The engagement of Mr Percy W Owens as organist and choirmaster of St. John's church terminated yesterday. During his three years' occupancy of the office Mr Owens has greatly endeared himself to the choir, especially to the boys, who greatly regret his departure. Mr Owens' conduct has also invariably been courteous and obliging to the church officers. He has accepted a similar position at the Carlton-st. Methodist church, Toronto, and left this morning to enter upon his duties. Mr Owens' many friends will be glad of his success.

It will be learned with pleasure that the church wardens have secured Mr Charles J Rodgers as successor. Mr Rodgers has had successful experience in choir work, having built up an excellent surpliced choir before coming to Peterborough. He is a musician of very high rank and the officers of St. John's are to be congratulated upon the appointment, which augurs well for the music at the church in the future. Mr Rodgers enters upon his duties with enthusiasm and is determined to bring St. John's choir to the highest possible standard.

Purely Vegetable.

First the bud, then the blossom, then the perfect fruit. These are the several stages of some of the most important ingredients composing the painless and sure corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. The juices of plants greatly concentrated and purified, gums and balsams in harmonious union, all mean's Extractor makes no sore spot, combined give the grand results. Put-does not lay a man up for a week, but goes on quietly doing its work until a perfect cure results. Beware of acid substitutes.

THE PEAT INDUSTRY.

Uses to Which the Peat Can be Put Other Than Fuel.

Companies are being formed for the manufacture of peat in various parts of Ontario, and it is expected that during the coming fall some of the new fuel will be placed on the market.

There is another means of utilizing peat beds profitably besides for fuel. Capitalists are now securing patents for manufacturing peat fibre in Canada. Peat fibre is the moss which grows on peat, which hitherto has been deemed worthless. By an Austrian process it is now made into first-class wrapping paper, cardboard, carpet, matting, blankets, rope, twine and surgical bandages, for which latter purpose it is said to possess ideal antiseptic qualities. A principal feature which commands the use of peat fibre for the manufacture of paper is its cheapness. Common wrapping paper costs $60 per ton to make from pulp, whereas it can be made at $12 to $15 per ton from peat fibre. A factory was started in Vienna a year ago, which has now become a very large concern. Ireland, with its great peat deposits, affords a favorable field for an industry of this kind, and a syndicate has been formed there, with a capital of £120,000 sterling, to carry on the work, and a factory has been built in Dublin. £600,000 was paid for control of the patent in Great Britain. Very pretty designs of carpet matting are produced at 14 to 18 cents per yard. The Austrian government has placed an order for peat fibre blankets with the Vienna firm for the whole army.

Samples of the Canadian peat moss have been sent to Austria and pronounced of the very finest quality. The local men who are interested in making peat fuel might find it to their interest to look after this subject.

The Staff Ride.

The first military staff ride in the history of Canada concluded at St. Catharines on Saturday evening. General Hutton and sixty officers took part. Among those present were Major Greenwood, of town, and Capt Cockburn, of Lakefield.

The Charge Withdrawn.

A session of the county police court was held to-day for the hearing of the charge against Fred Stabler, of Smith, against whom an information had been laid charging him with an infraction of the Charlton Act in regard to a girl of Smith township under sixteen years of age. A settlement, however, had been arrived at between the parties and the case was withdrawn.

Prof. Hamill Ill.

Belleville Intelligencer:—Prof. Hamill, superintendent of the field work for the International Sunday School Union, was to have been in the city yesterday to deliver an address, but was unable to be here owing to illness. At Hamilton he spoke under great difficulties owing to the approach of an attack of nervous prostration, and at Toronto he was totally unable to take any part in the work. He then returned to his home.

number manufactured, 20c. or 25c is a good deal each, or $3.50 a dozen, and twelve go nowhere. A good many dozen are needed for a season's play. Then there is the "caddie," a small boy, who, on the other hand, is very useful and saves money in finding balls, besides carrying the clubs, or, on the other, who is very useless as so many are But give them their just due, if a caddie takes an interest in the game, he is keen indeed, and he is his employer's severest critic, whilst his grin of delight when the opponent "foozels" a shot at a critical moment, and his whispered comment thereon is delicious; moreover, he knows the game, and it is from the caddy of to-day that our future professionals in Canada will come.

A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer, of 1125 Howard-st., Philadelphia, Pa., when she found that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption had completely cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. All other remedies and doctors could give her no help, but she says of this Royal Cure—"It soon removed the pain in my chest and I can now sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the universe." So will everyone who tries Dr. King's New Discovery for any trouble of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50 cents and $1.00. A Mining Deal.

As the late Mr. Florence would say in his great play "The Almighty Dollar," "There's millions in it." We refer to the celebrated mining property known as the Gateland estate, in the township of Marmora, owned by Messrs. H. Corby, M.P., Thompson and Carscallen. The Cleveland & Deloro Mining company heard of this property and promptly proceeded to investigate. It must have taken their fancy, for they have purchased it from the aforementioned gentlemen for $35,000. They intend erecting a large mining plant on the premises and going to work at once. Ald. Hungerford, of this city has been appointed manager.—Belleville Intelligencer.

SELWYN SIFTINGS.

Empire Day Celebrated at Selwyn School—A Bold Tramp.

Empire Day was observed in patriotic manner by the pupils of S.S. No. 9, Smith. In the morning the regular school work was taken up, but the afternoon was devoted to subjects of a patriotic nature.

A fine new Dominion Ensign purchased with the proceeds of a concert last Christmas was hoisted over the school house at a height of about forty-five feet and can be seen for miles on every side. The interior of the school house was also nicely decorated with small flags and evergreens.

The programme consisted of readings, recitations and singing by the scholars; a talk on the flag and the British Empire by the teacher; and a series of essays on "The Gems of Britain's Crown," by some of the senior pupils. These essays contained much information about the great British colonies in Canada, India and Australia. These papers were read and prepared by Gilbert McIlmoyl, Harry McIlmoyl and Bella McConkey and were entitled respectively "Our Young Dominion," "The Indian Empire" and "The Australian Federation." Light refreshments were served by some of the visitors and larger scholars and the afternoon's entertainment closed by singing God Save the Queen.

Mr. Jas. Nichols is moving his barn and putting a stone wall under it.

A colored gentleman, one of the travelling fraternity, was observed by Mr. Isaac Manning making his way into the latter's barn one evening and Mr. Manning went down and told the visitor to come out, as he did not wish to have him sleeping in the barn all night. The negro, however, refused to obey the command given him, and Mr. Manning refrained from forcing a conflict, not knowing what preparations the tramp might have made for his reception. Mr. Manning then retired to the house and left the fellow in charge of the barn till morning.

Bills are out announcing the visit to Selwyn of the Rines Brothers, the well known singing evangelists. They are brought here under the auspices of Selwyn lodge No. 50, I. O. G. T., and the meeting will be held in the temperance hall each evening of the week beginning Sunday, June 4th. The meetings will be unique and pleasing. The Rines brothers are men whose singing is exceedingly clear and sweet and most impressive. Mr. H. J. Rines is a forcible speaker. Their subjects are illustrated by means of a powerful calcium light so that the meetings cannot fail to be attractive. A collection will be taken each evening to help defray expenses.

The Galician Murderers.

Winnipeg, May 29. — On Saturday morning the two Galicians, Guszak and Czuby, were hanged in Winnipeg jail yard. Unexpectedly, both displayed great nerve at the end and walked to the scaffold, the drop falling at 8 o'clock. Radcliffe made a good job, death being practically instantaneous. Czuby protested his innocence to the last.

Laughs Better Than Tears.

I bless all the apostolic college of humorists. The man that makes me laugh is my benefactor. I do not thank anybody to make me cry. I can do that without any assistance. We all cry enough and have enough to cry about. God bless all skillful punsters, all reparteists, all propounders of ingenious conundrums, all those who mirthfully surprise us with unusual juxtaposition of words. Thomas Hood and Charles Dickens and Sydney Smith had a divine mission, and so have their successors in these times. They stir into the acid beverage of life the saccharine. They make the cup of earthly existence, which is sometimes stale, effervesce and bubble. They placate animosities. They foster longevity. They slay follies and absurdities which all the sermons of all the pulpits cannot reach.—T. De Witt Talmage.

Big Fees For Doctors.

Sixty thousand dollars and a pension of $2,500 a year was the fee paid to Dr. Thomas Dimsdale, the Hertfordshire physician who, in 1872, was summoned to St. Petersburg to vaccinate the Empress Catherine II. Dr. Butler, who had obtained a great reputation for extraordinary skill in the operation for lithotomy, received a lac of rupees (then equivalent to $50,000) from each of six Indian rajahs for the single operation.

The late czar of Russia paid a fee of $75,000 to Professor Zacherine of Moscow for two days' attendance. A certain Dr. Gale of Bristol, who was blind, for curing a gentleman of a seriously diseased knee by some electric treatment received a check for $350,000. Dr. Gale Yowski, the famous oculist, who attended the son of the shah of Persia, received $35,000 in fees during the three months of his residence in Teheran, while all his expenses of traveling and maintenance were paid.

Sir William Jenner received for four weeks' attendance at Sandringham during the illness of the Prince of Wales a baronetcy and a fee of $50,000, while Sir Morell Mackenzie is reported to have received twice that amount for attending the Emperor Frederick. His royal highness the nawab of Rampur, India, a few years since paid an English army surgeon $50,000 for an occasional attendance in an ordinary attack of rheumatism.

G.T.R. TRACKMEN'S STRIKE.

The Brotherhoods as Yet Have Taken No Action.

The Men Are All Anxious to Avoid Accidents—A Report From London, Eng., Says That the President of the Grand Trunk Said the Strike Was Practically Ended—News From Many Points.

Toronto, May 30.—The trackmen are endeavoring to avoid any accident on the line. At many points they are still lighting the lamps, for which they receive a small reward. This, so they say, is being done only to help the engineers and firemen to safely carry the travelling public.

The local members of the Brotherhood of Engineers and Firemen have not as yet made any effort to take action. They are waiting for news from headquarters, which will govern their movements.

The officials at the Union Station still continue to take a cheerful view of the situation. Walter White, representing Mr. Jones, said that a number of the old hands had returned at the old scale of wages, and at some points new workmen had been engaged. He was informed that the road was being properly patrolled and that "everything was running smoothly."

"The Strike Was Practically Ended."

London, May 30.—There was a crowded attendance yesterday at a special general meeting of the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Railroad of Canada, who unanimously adopted the Central Vermont Railroad agreement. An announcement made by Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, president of the Grand Trunk, that the strike was practically ended, called forth much cheering.

Trains Stopped.

Hamilton, May 30.—There is no change in the situation locally. A traveller to the city yesterday morning from Guelph reported that the train was stopped at frequent intervals, while train hands ran ahead to examine the tracks.

Station Agent Discharged.

Kingston, May 30.—Yesterday morning a young man named William Jackson of Gananoque, one of the striking sectionmen, was struck by the G.T.R. local train as it pulled into the station from Brockville. He received a severe cut on the back of his head, and was badly bruised.

The Grand Trunk authorities have discharged Station Agent Hickey, Malleytown. They accuse him of giving away information to the striking sectionmen.

A number of laborers sent up here from Montreal to look over the tracks of the G.T.R. Company met with a hot reception. They took a "pumper" and started east. At Young's Mills, near Brockville, farmers and others turned out and made the men decamp, leaving their track tools behind them. Trains were delayed between Kingston and Brockville yesterday by a loose rail.

In Montreal.

Montreal, May 30.—There is nothing new to report re the Grand Trunk strike. The men appear to be crowding the papers with their side of the story, while the company's officials still decline to be quoted.

Engineers to Meet.

Montreal, May 30.—The Grand Trunk engineers have a meeting appointed for to-day with Supt. McGuigan.

Toronto Petitions the Government.

Toronto, May 30.—Last night the Council resolved to respectfully petition the Dominion Government to take such steps as they may deem necessary to terminate the G.T.R. trackmen's strike on an equitable and fair basis.

Sir James Grant Tossed.

Ottawa, May 30.—The buggy in which Sir James Grant and his coachman were driving was run into by an electric car yesterday morning on Elgin street. The car struck the rig and threw them out. Neither of them was hurt. The buggy was damaged to the extent of breaking three wheels and a portion of the box.

A circular issued by the Customs Department provides that postmasters and collectors of customs may in future, in regard to postal packages, grant the preferential tariff rate on all parcels less than $25 net value, and not for sale, even if there is no certificate attached as to the goods being of British origin.

Murdered Their Father.

Rapid City, S.D., May 30.—Little Lena Bouts, 14 years old, and her brother Nicholas, 10 years old, were yesterday brought here charged with the murder of Frank Bouts, their father. Bouts was a Burlington & Missouri River Railroad contractor. The little girl admits the crime, and the boy adds that he did what he could to kill his father. The father is said to have been cruel to the family, and this appears to have been the motive of the crime. The boy steadied a rifle while the little girl pulled the trigger.

Coming Up for Their Money.

Havana, May 30.—Yesterday 300 privates arrived during the day to apply for payment. Many who brought arms were not on the rolls at all. Ninety-nine rifles were surrendered, most of the applicants declining to take any chances in turning the weapons over to the Mayor of Havana.

THE STORM STRUCK BUFFALO.

Number of Persons Hurt and Much Damage to Property Done.

Buffalo, May 30.—A severe rain and wind storm passed over Buffalo and vicinity yesterday afternoon, causing considerable damage to property and injury to a number of people. In this city a 90-foot smokestack at the works of the Buffalo Cast Iron Pipe Company was blown over, and in falling it crushed in the wall of the foundry building. Andrew Riedle and Valentine Hahn, workmen in the foundry, were probably fatally injured, and 20 others were slightly hurt.

At Lockport, the grand stand at the Lake avenue ball grounds was wrecked. Daniel Toothill, 14 years old, was fatally injured. Two other boys, named Albert Murphy and Sharkey, were painfully injured. Reports from Tonawanda, Jamestown and other places report much damage in the way of trees and outhouses blown down, windows blown in and signs torn down. Many houses were struck by lightning in outlying districts.

Great Fire at St. Thomas.

St. Thomas, Ont., May 30.—Robertson, Lindsay & Co.'s establishment, the largest departmental store in western Ontario, was completely destroyed by fire last night. The building was one of the largest in the city, and comprised about six stores. It was comparatively a new structure, having been built two years ago, and was situated in the centre of the city, directly opposite the postoffice. The stock was valued at $35,000, the building at $25,000. Insurance on stock in the neighborhood of $60,000, and on building $25,000.

Braun Killed His Wife.

Sing Sing, N.Y., May 30.—Adrian Braun was put to death by electricity here yesterday for the murder of his wife. Braun killed his wife in Sing Sing Prison on March 4, 1898. His wife visited him in prison and she carried him some delicacies of which he was fond. Braun, who was employed in the prison as a potato peeler, went to the visitors' room to see her with a knife secreted in his clothes. The two conversed together in the most friendly terms until the prison detective told them their time was up. Braun stood up with a long, sharp-pointed potato knife in his hand. He brought it down with fearful force against the left side of his wife's neck, severing the jugular vein and the main artery in the neck.

"IT IS THE DEATH OF MY LIFE"

Dreyfus' Agonized Exclamation to Lieut.-Col. Henry.

The Court of Cassation Met in Paris to Hear the Debates in the Application for a Revision of His Trial—Military Guarded the Precincts, But There Was No Disturbance—Profound Silence in Court.

Paris, May 30.—The Court of Cassation met yesterday to hear the debates in the application for revision of the Dreyfus case. The doors of the Palace of Justice were opened at 11 o'clock. Extensive precautions were taken to preserve order. The court room was filled with Parisian celebrities, the greater part of the hall having been reserved for ticket-holders. Many judges belonging to other courts were among those present, and absolute tranquility prevailed. The proceedings commenced at noon, amidst profound silence, the reporter of the civil section of the court reading his report on the case. After recalling the conditions under which the prosecution of Dreyfus was installed in 1894, he dealt with the contradictory evidence of the experts in handwriting, and mentioned the protest of innocence by Dreyfus to Lieut.-Col. Henry.

Eulogies of Dreyfus.

M. Ballot de Beaupre then read a number of eulogistic reports on Dreyfus, when the latter was a military school probationer on the general staff, his interrogatory by Lieut.-Col. Du Paty de Clam, in which Dreyfus persisted in denying having had relations with any foreign embassy, and his statement that he had not given any documents to any agent relating to the defence of the country.

The report said the first suspicions of Dreyfus emanated from Col. Bahre, who was struck with the similarity of the word "artillery" in the bordereau, and in a document written by Dreyfus. The report deals with Lieut.-Col. Henry's account of his conversation with Dreyfus, when the latter was transferred to the Cherche Midi prison. Dreyfus said: "It is terrible. I am accused of a frightful thing."

Henry then asked what he was accused of, and Dreyfus replied: "I am accused of the crime of high treason."

"The devil!" answered Henry. "But on what ground?"

"The Death of My Life."

"I don't know," said Dreyfus. "I am nearly mad. I would prefer to receive a bullet in the head. I am not guilty. This accusation is the death of my life."

To this Henry said:

"If you are not guilty you must not lose your head. An innocent man is always strong. Have you a family?"

"Yes," replied the prisoner. "A wife and children. I am well off, and I must have justice done me."

"That does not come within my competence," was Henry's next remark, "but justice will certainly be done you. Do you know what you are accused of?"

"Yes, I am accused of giving documents to a foreign power."

"What documents?"

"I don't know. Du Paty de Clam only spoke of secret and confidential documents. Without further explanation I replied that during my probation at the general staff office many documents passed through my hands, but that I communicated them to nobody."

The Judicial Aspect.

M. Ballot de Beaupre then reviewed the judicial history of the case, and said it now rested with the court to pronounce judgment. He upheld the statement that there was sufficient presumption that most serious errors and doubts existed, and that they justified a revision of the case. He had examined the different cases in which the court could annul sentence without retrial, and in his opinion the court should only consider a revision of it. A revision, he contended, was imperative.

Continuing, the reporter read letters written by Esterhazy, abusing France and the French army, these producing a deep impression upon the audience. He referred to a letter written by Esterhazy to Baron Rothschilds, dated June 21, 1894, to the effect that if his application for money was refused he would have no resource but to kill his family and then commit suicide. Such, said the reporter, was Esterhazy's language on the eve of

IN EASTERN ONTARIO.

THERE is naturally not a little curiosity as to why the Government did not extend the beneficent principle of sacrificing everything to the sanctity of county boundaries to the eastern section of Ontario. If it is good for the west, why not for the east? The reason certainly was not that county boundaries are already followed in the east; for nothing of the kind occurs. County lines are set at defiance all through the eastern division of the province; even the city of Ottawa is not left inviolate. And when the Government displayed a willingness to shoulder the responsibility for so many staring absurdities and black cases of injustice in order to apply its beloved principle in the west, it is sadly puzzling that it should not have extended its benefits to the entire province.

Some critics of the Government measure are suggesting that the Ministers left the east alone because to meddle with it would have led them into sore trouble. For instance, a portion of Ottawa with a Conservative majority votes in Russell, where Mr Edwards feels nevertheless quite safe. But to bring it back into the city would not add to the comfort of the two Liberals who now hold uneasy seats for the Capital. Then the restoration of county lines would have carried Smith's Falls out of Leeds and Grenville, and Mr. Frost, M. P., with it. This is an arrangement which would not likely be very popular with the latter Liberal member. Still worse, were the rest of the province to be re-arranged, the Liberals could hardly have saved the constituency of Brockville from annihilation, and that, after the Comstock victory, they would not like to do.

Still, if we are to observe county lines at all hazards, and force through a gerrymander out of due season in order that this "fetish" may be satisfied, certainly the united counties of Leeds and Grenville call for some consideration. They have a total population of 60,673, and—with only the addition of the town of Smith's Falls—they send four members to Parliament. The populations of the four constituencies are as follows:—

Leeds, South	23,449
Brockville	15,852
Grenville, South	12,929
Leeds and Grenville	12,321

If Smith's Falls' 3,864 be taken from Leeds and Grenville, we shall have a population of a trifle over 60,000, to which even this remarkable bill would not venture to give more than three members. At the last general elections these counties gave a total Conservative majority of nearly one thousand. Mr Comstock has since reversed the situation in Brockville; but, even giving the Liberals these bye-election figures, there is still a Conservative majority of over 900 in the counties. They could hardly be divided into three constituencies which, on these figures, would not return three Conservatives; while the constituencies, as they stand, are represented by two Liberals and two Conservatives.

It was not an oversight when the Liberals omitted to apply the county principle in Eastern Ontario.

IT IS REVOLTING.

Mr. Justice Osler, in giving judgment in the South Ontario election case, said:—"It simply revolts me to see a case in which "there does appear to have been a very "considerable expenditure of money, if this "little opening that we have had this morning indicates at all what has been going on "in the riding. It revolts me to be obliged "practically to stop where the investigators "choose to stop with the reporting of a few "trifling creatures who would take $5. But "the court is helpless." Mr. Justice Rose added: "In the present case it seems to me "manifest that there has been a general "scheme and much money spent, and that "the seat can no longer be held by the re-"spondent." It has been charged that the Ontario Government has had an organized army of corruptionists operating in every constituency in which a bye-election has been held. These employees worked for the Hardy Government to pull it out of what Mr. Hardy termed "the hole." They were also retained by the Federal Government to corrupt and to perform other illegal acts both in West Huron and Brockville, which constituencies the candidates of the Government carried.

MR. E. F. Clarke has brought the question of the Grand Trunk strike up in Parliament with a view to the securing of adequate protection to labor. The section men on strike receive $1 a day, or, with deductions, 98 cents. The rate is below that paid by the Canadian Pacific, $1.25 per day being the figure allowed by that company. It looks as if the case were a good subject for conciliation or arbitration, and it is a wonder the Government does not endeavor to secure a settlement on that basis.

the date when the bordereau was "placed." The inference to be drawn was that Esterhazy sought in treason resources necessary to carry on a life of dissipation.

At this point, with the evident approval of all who listened, M. Ballot de Beaupre quoted from M. Mornard's statement, as follows:

Innocent Man Unjustly Condemned.

"Although justice has been rendered more or less impotent with regard to Esterhazy by the latter's acquittal of the charge of being the author of the bordereau, it is none the less the duty of the Supreme Court to restore to liberty an innocent man unjustly condemned."

The hearing of the argument in the Dreyfus case was adjourned without any incident worth noting at 5 o'clock.

Sons of Benjamin to Mme. Dreyfus.

New York, May 30.—At their convention here yesterday the following cablegram was sent by the Sons of Benjamin: "Mrs. Captain Dreyfus, Paris:

Will Dreyfus Be Taken Home?

London, May 30.—The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Cayenne, capital of French Guiana, telegraphs the substance of an interview he has had with H. L. Mouttet, Governor-General of the colony, as to the possibility of the retransportation of Dreyfus to France. The Governor-General says: The question has been already thoroughly considered. I have received the minutest instructions relating to his removal from the Isle du Salut, which will be personally superintended by myself and M. Daniel of the Isle du Salut. No person but the state officials and the regular warders will be permitted to witness his departure. What arrangements are made for disembarkation in France I do not know.

A MAN OF BACKBONE.

J. H. Loghead Tells How He Became Strong.

Suffered with a Pain in His Back for Years and Nothing Relieved it until He took Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Toronto, May 29th.—A man of backbone is a rare specimen in these degenerate days. But few as they are the world could not get on without them, for they do the greater part of the world's work the part that requires firmness of purpose and unchangeable resolve. The pity is that so many men suffer from weak backs—in the literal sense. A man of brains with this physical disadvantage is terribly handicapped. A man that works with his muscles is rendered totally helpless. It is safe to say that if a sufferer from weak back understood that the trouble lay in his kidneys, he would not sleep another day. Pain in the back, back-ache and general weakness of the spinal column are symptoms of Kidney Disease.

Mr. J. H. Loghead, 191 Richmond-st. West, says: "I have suffered for years with severe pains in the back. I could get nothing to help me. Everything I ever took seemed to make me worse. I heard of your Dodd's Kidney Pills. I tried them and after I had used one box all pains were gone. I can highly recommend them to any one who may be troubled with this disease."

Lame back is but one symptom of Kidney Disease. It has a score of others. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Sciatics, Lumbago, Gout, Heart Disease, Paralysis, Dropsy, Stone in the Bladder, Urinary Troubles and Female Complaints, may all be called symptoms of Kidney Disease, as they are all due to impure blood. Healthy kidneys filter the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the kidneys healthy.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are sold by all druggists, at fifty cents a box, six boxes $2.50, or will be sent, on receipt of price, by The Dodds Medicine Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CARNEGIE'S CREED.

NO RICH MAN AT SIXTY OUGHT MERELY TO ACCUMULATE.

The Iron and Steel King Says He Will Spend His $300,000,000 in Pure Philanthropy—Some Criticisms on His Recent Declarations—Chauncey M. Depew's Idea of What He Will Do.

Andrew Carnegie, the iron and steel millionaire, the other day gave his reasons for selling out his vast interests. Being asked if he had sold his iron and steel interests from fear or dislike of the trusts, he said:

"The trusts have never frightened me, and the Carnegie Steel Company has no occasion to be afraid of them, as it is the greatest property of its kind the world has ever seen, or probably will see. I did not sell out because business was not prosperous; it never was so prosperous, nor were its prospects ever so good. I sold in pursuance of a policy determined upon long since, not to spend my old age in business, struggling after more dollars. I believe in developing a dignified and unselfish life after 60."

Mr. Carnegie's attention was called to a paragraph in a London paper which referred to his famous declaration that "to die rich is to die disgraced," and asked what he was going to do with the $300,000,000 he had amassed. "Tell the editor," replied Mr. Carnegie, "to watch and see. I hope I shall not justify the definition sometimes deserved of a philanthropist, as a man with a great deal of money, but with very little sense."

In pursuance of his apparently well-defined plan, Mr. Carnegie has written a letter to Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, who is trying to raise a sufficient endowment for the University of Birmingham, in which he says that he will give the remaining $250,000 required, [illegible] scientific school be made [illegible] department in the institution.

The criticisms upon the declaration of the Pittsburg magnate [illegible] in kind and tone. That of The London Chronicle voices one class of these lucubrations upon Mr. Carnegie's intentions, when it says: "We will remember how the Homestead Works were shut down for months because [illegible] refused to have their wages lowered, and how barbed wire fences charged with electricity were set up, the place fortified, Pinkerton men sent for, and, finally, after a state of war and siege, the Steel Workers' Union was smashed to atoms and the millionaire's works were filled with Poles and Hungarians."

Members of his own millionaire class have their thoughts spoken in these words of Senator Chauncey M. Depew:

"Mr. Carnegie," said Senator Depew, "has been one of the phenomenally successful men. He has made a tremendous fortune. I do not believe during his life time that he will, under any circumstances, give away more than his income. If a man has an income of my seven millions of dollars a year it is not real philanthropy to give away a million. To give away $600 when one's income is $35,000 amounts to much more—and there's not much self-denial in that, either.

"The widow's mite," Senator Depew went on, "still continues to represent real philanthropy. I do not deny that the $12,000,000 which Mr. Carnegie has dispensed in charities has done a great deal of good, and comparing this sum, too, with the amounts given by other millionaires, the proportion even is largely in Mr. Carnegie's favor.

"Mr. Carnegie's income last year was, I understand, about $7,500,000. His guaranteed income from the sale of his works is $5,000,000 a year—five per cent. on $100,000,000. Those works have been earning $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 annually for years. When you come to think of this, $12,000,000 scattered over many years is not such a large sum, proportionately."

Senator Depew said that he had a friend whose income was a million dollars a year. This friend gave away in charities every cent of this income, retaining only enough to live on in a modest fashion. He considered this charity after the widow's mite plan, for the man not only gave unostentatiously and without letting his right hand know what his left hand did, but practised self-denial and gave to the extent of his ability.

Danger in Tin Cans.

Open a can of peaches, apricots, cherries or other fruit—for all fruit is acidulous—let it stand for some time, and the fruit acids and the tin are ready to do their work of poisoning. A chemical knowledge that tells just how the dangerous compound is created is unnecessary to an avoidance of the peril. The rule to follow is never to make lemonade or other acidulated drinks in a tin bucket nor allow them to stand in a vessel of tin; and in the case of canned fruits or fish, immediately upon opening the can turn the contents out upon an earthenware plate, or into a dish that is made of earthenware or glass.

Fruits in hermetically sealed cans, if properly prepared, generate no poison. As soon as opened the action of the acid on the tin with the aid of the atmosphere, begins, and in a short time the result is a deadly poison. This brief treatment of the question should be remembered by everyone, and its instructions followed. The general press also should aid in disseminating this simple knowledge.—Popular Science.

Steel Rails.

Steel rails now figure as the cheapest finished product in wrought iron or steel. A good lesson in the finances of modern industry is also afforded by them. To establish a steel rail works, an expenditure of $3,000,000 is required before a single rail can be turned out. The steel is made to conform to an accurate chemical composition—the most accurate in the ordinary range of technical operations.

The Grand Black Chapter will conclude business this morning. In the afternoon the annual convention of the Grand Lodge of British North America will be held and to-morrow the election of officers will take place.

The Dummy Line Sold.

Hamilton, May 30.—The purchase of the Hamilton & Dundas Electric Railway by the Cataract Power Company was completed yesterday. The price is private, but it is said the stock was bought at a large premium. E. B. Osler of Toronto formerly had a controlling interest in the road.

Holland Arrested.

New York, May 30.—William Holland, the bookmaker, who on April 2 last shot Samuel Heller, the ticket seller for Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, in this city, and who escaped after the shooting, was arrested here yesterday, and held in $500 bail for June 2.

Did you ever notice the sign in the switching-tower? Does it ever occur to you that the lives of every living person on a train frequently depend on the promptness and intelligence with which he moves the switch levers under his control?

If upon small duty required how small a thing may cut at the critical instant to switch them upon a dangerous track on to one of perfect safety, the yearly deaths from lung diseases would be less by many thousand.

"I had a regular consumptive cough, of which I was afraid, and everybody considered and warned me concerning it," says Mr. A. F. Mowery, P. O. Box 1097, this city, in a recent letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y. "At last I decided to give your medicine a trial. I began taking it and after using three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and over my shoulders I changed entirely. I do not cough at all. I have gained eight pounds in weight, have gained my healthy color; and my appetite is enormous. I can and will recommend your medicine to everybody who may be in need of it; as it is a sure cure, and no heavenly cough cure, which so many medicines are. It is by far the superior of all."

One chapter of Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated book, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser tells of nearly one hundred men and women thus promptly switched from the track of death by this matchless remedy. This book is sent free for the bare cost of customs and mailing, 21 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 50 stamps.

Still in the Ways of Sin.

This story was told by a Boston plumber: "Some years ago one of the city missions up home had a job of plumbing done at its meeting house. The work was much more extensive than showed on the surface, and when the bill was presented the minister in charge insisted he was being robbed. He made a frightful kick, and had several redhot interviews with the boss of the shop. After the last and warmest of these confabs he returned to the mission sizzling with wrath and found a well known local character awaiting him. The fellow had been a notorious professional crook, but growing too old and rheumatic for safe cracking he concluded to mend his ways, and the parson had promised to aid him in getting an honest start.

"'Well, James,' said the parson sympathetically, 'have you decided on what you want to do?'

"'Yes, boss,' replied the ex-crook. 'Seeing as how I'm a pretty good mechanic, I thought I might open a bit of a shop.'

"'A shop!' replied his benevolent friend. 'What kind of a shop?'

"'A plumber's shop,' said the burglar.

"'Oh!' exclaimed the minister, rising suddenly and picking up his hat. 'I was under the impression that you wanted to reform.'"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Saved by Tact.

A down town woman, who is known among her friends as a decidedly stylish person, but who is quite indifferent to her toilet when at home, had an experience a short time ago which gave her quite a shock at the time. She had given a dinner party one day at which a very distinguished Englishman was entertained. The foreigner was quite captivated by the charming hospitality of his hostess, and when on his way to the station to leave the city the next day he stopped at the house to pay his respects. All the servants were out, and the mistress of the house was by no means dressed for company. She was expecting the arrival of a new gown at the time, and thinking that the ring was that of a messenger boy bringing it she went herself, in very slipshod attire, to the door.

To her horror, when she opened the door, she saw the face of the distinguished Englishman. To her joy, however, he asked if her mistress was in. This cue was all that was needed. Quick as a flash she replied, "No, sir; she's out riding." Without recognition the visitor left his card and went away with a decided opinion of the untidy appearance of Philadelphia servants.—Philadelphia Record.

A Waiter's Dilemma.

It was in one of the large down town restaurants that the short little woman and her tall husband went for dinner one night.

"Will you have oysters?" asked the man, glancing over the bill of fare.

"Yes," said the short little woman, as she tried in vain to touch her toes to the floor. "And, John, I want a hassock."

John nodded, and, as he handed his order to the waiter, he said, "Yes, and bring a hassock for the lady."

"One hassock?" asked the waiter, with what John thought more than ordinary interest, as he nodded in the affirmative. Still the waiter did not go, but brushed the tablecloth with a towel and rearranged the articles on it several times, while his face got very red. Then he came around to John's side, and, speaking sotto voce, said: "Say, mister, I haven't been here long, and I'm not on to all these things. Will the lady have the hassock broiled or fried?"—Chicago Chronicle.

Who Loaded the American Press Up the Wrong Way?

The Alaskan Boundary Question Is Just as It Was When the Commission Adjourned Till August Next—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Pretty Fully Explains the Matter in the House—The Proceedings of Parliament on Monday.

Ottawa, May 30.—After routine the House proceeded at once to the answering of questions put by members yesterday, a large number of which were replied to, nearly all of them being of a local character.

Sir Louis Davies said, in reply to Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, that Capt. Moore of the Allan steamer Californian had informed him that he attached no value whatever to the tidal survey.

Purple Two-Cent Envelopes.

In answer to a question put for Mr. Quinn, the Postmaster-General said that no mistake had been made in printing the purple two-cent stamp envelopes, and that none were recalled from circulation. If the gentleman would make a charge that any stamps had been improperly obtained, the department would make an investigation. It was not the intention of the Government to print any more purple two-cent envelopes.

Eight Reports From Walsh.

Mr. Sifton, in answer to Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, said that eight reports had been received from Major Walsh, under order-in-council, on the 17th of August, 1897. Six of these reports have been brought down, and the other two will be included in a return which is now being prepared.

Questions re Name Ogilvie.

In answer to Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, Mr. Sifton said Mr. Ogilvie, commissioner of the Yukon, had no connection with the British Canadian Gold Fields of the Klondike, Limited; that the Government knew that Mr. Ogilvie had given it certain exclusive information regarding unclaimed mineral deposits, and he put in a letter from Mr. Ogilvie in answer to Sir Hibbert's sixth question, "Had the Government any information," etc., to offer.

It was claimed that this mode of answering avoided the necessity of putting Mr. Ogilvie's letter in the official minutes, and the debate on this question of order and the Government's method of answering questions became general.

The order paper was run through, and several unopposed motions for papers passed.

WERE NO CONDITIONS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Speaks Out About Pyramid Harbor.

Col. Prior called attention to the despatches in the morning papers to the effect that Canada was responsible for the failure of the negotiations with respect to the Alaska boundary because Pyramid Harbor was claimed, and asked if the Government had any statement to make in the matter.

Sir Wilfrid Speaks Out.

The Prime Minister, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, replied: "Of course, I have, like everybody else, noticed the series of articles and correspondence that have appeared in the American press. I believe I am not saying too much when I state that there is an evident attempt on the part of somebody to create the impression that Canada has taken a very unfair position in regard to the settlement of the Alaskan boundary. It has been suggested in some quarters that the authorities in Washington must in some degree be responsible for such a statement appearing so frequently, so repeatedly, in the American press. I am quite sure that the American authorities in Washington are free from blame in this matter.

"I am sure they cannot in any way have authorized or sanctioned any such expression of opinion appearing in the press, for the very simple reason that the American authorities know perfectly well in what condition the question stands at the present time. I have only to repeat that the position to-day, on May 29, is exactly what it was when the commission adjourned in the month of February last. There has been no change, and so far as this Government is concerned, there will be no change.

"My hon. friend (Mr. Prior) asks me to state what is the contention maintained by the Government of Canada, or by the commissioners of Canada, with regard to the Alaskan boundary. I am not in a position at this moment to give any information on this point. I may say that I hope that, perhaps, without making any promise or even undertaking to anticipate coming events—I hope that perhaps the negotiations of the commission upon this subject may be laid before Parliament during the present session. As I say—I make no promise upon this point.

"I hope that before we separate we shall be able to lay before Parliament the exact condition of things, that is to say, the statement of the views maintained before the commission and of the point on which we disagreed. While I cannot say what was the position maintained by Canada upon this question, still I may say, without revealing any secret, that it is well known by everybody who has given any attention to the study of the question of the boundary, that the boundary is defined by the treaty between Great Britain and Russia in 1825. According to our construction of the treaty, according to the construction that has been maintained all along, the boundary line should follow the crest of the mountains nearest to the coast, passing over bays and creeks and inlets, which are territorial waters.

"The contention maintained by the American authorities all along is that the boundary line should be placed so as to place in American territory the strip of territory which is given to Russia by the treaty of 1825, beyond and above all head water. That was the contention, I may say, which was maintained all along by both parties, and it may be assumed, without doing violence to any understanding, that this was the position maintained by the British commissioner. The contentions of both parties were so far apart that it shall not surprise anyone if I state that it was difficult to come to an understanding. Nor shall I surprise anyone if I state that we endeavored on both sides, both American commissioners and Canadian commissioners, to reach a settlement by a fair compromise.

"After we had negotiated on this basis for a long time we came to the conclusion that even a compromise could not be reached upon that question, and, having reached that conclusion, that it was not possible by the Commons to effect a settlement of this question by giving and taking and by reconciling either party to the views of the other, we came to the conclusion that the only thing to be done was to have the question referred to arbitration.

"We proposed, and the statement was made when we adjourned, that is to say, the British commissioners proposed, that the arbitration should be held on the lines of the Venezuela precedent. That position was ours, and it was not coupled with any other condition. The only proposition which we made was that the matter should be referred to arbitration, and that the arbitration should proceed exactly on all fours with the lines of the Venezuela precedent. All statements made that this was coupled with any other condition are absolutely erroneous. This is the last statement of the case that I have to make at this moment, and I hope I have made it sufficiently clear to have it understood by everybody in this House."

Sir Charles Tupper thanked the Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, for having gone as far as he could properly go under the circumstances in giving a brief explanation of the present position of this question.

Standard for Wheat.

Mr. Davin moved his resolution respecting grain standards and the mixing of wheat at Fort William.

After the mover, Dr. Sproule and Mr. Campbell had spoken,

Sir Henri Joly said he thought the Government bill would meet all, or nearly all, the objections to the present system, and when it was in committee it could be amended so as to make it as workable and efficient as possible. There was great difficulty in determining how far east the bill should be made to apply, but that also could be discussed in committee. The matter then dropped.

Private Bills.

After recess these private bills were read a third time and passed:

Respecting the James Bay Railway—Mr. Hughes.

Respecting the Nipissing & James Bay Railway—Mr. Bertram.

Respecting the Ottawa Electric Railway—Mr. Belcourt.

Mr. Carey's bill respecting the drainage over the property of railway companies was referred to a new special committee, consisting of Messrs. Casey, Monk, Bain, McGregor and Craig.

Mr. Bertram's bill to further amend the Trade Mark and Design Act passed through committee, was read a third time and passed.

Proposed Railway Commission.

The adjourned debate on Mr. Rutherford's resolution for the appointment of a railway commission was then resumed, and the question discussed at some length by Mr. Bostock; Sir Charles Tupper, who opposed the appointment of a commission, and moved the adjournment of the debate; Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who suggested the withdrawal of the motion, and Messrs. Davin, Blair, Davies, Oliver and McCarthy, after which Sir Charles Tupper's motion to adjourn the debate was carried.

The House adjourned at 10.30.

Dandurand's Usury Bill.

In the Senate yesterday afternoon, Hon. Mr. Dandurand's bill respecting usury was read a second time and referred to the committee on banking and commerce. The bill limits the rate of interest which can be recovered on a promissory note to 90 per cent. per annum before judgment, and ten per cent. after.

Leasing a Part of the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Blair last night gave notice of a resolution confirming the lease of that portion of the Grand Trunk from Sec. Rosaire to Montreal for 99 years, from March 1, 1898, at a rental of $140,000 a year.

Could Apply the Parable.

It is not always safe to talk in parables to the young, as the following school board story shows: A correspondent states that one of his pupils caused him some annoyance by uncouthness of speech, dirty boots, and so on, so, says our correspondent: "I drew a verbal portrait for the class of the man who did not shine in the world of polite society. 'You cannot fail to know him,' said I, 'for he never cleans his boots nor washes before meals. He speaks and drinks when his mouth is full and generally uses his knife in place of his fork.'

"Gradually the lad whom this story was designed to profit showed an awakening interest and put out his hand to speak. In reply to my query, 'Well?' 'I know him,' said he. 'He's our lodger!'"—London Chronicle.

More coffee is used in the United States than in any other country, the annual consumption being not far from 450,000,000 pounds, for which American importers pay about $90,000,000 to the growers.

Men have been known to lose by perspiration 5,000 to 6,000 grains an hour.

How They Made Mummies.

A body might be mummified in three different ways, and the price varied accordingly. In the first and most expensive method the brain was extracted through the nose by means of an iron probe, and the intestines were removed entirely from the body through an incision made in the side with a sharp Ethiopian stone. The intestines were cleansed and washed in palm wine, and, after being covered with powdered aromatic gums, were placed in Canopic jars. The body was then filled up with myrrh and cassia and other fragrant and astringent substances and was laid in natron for 70 days. It was then carefully washed and wrapped up in strips of fine linen smeared with gum. The cost of mummifying a body in this fashion was a talent of silver, or about £240.

In the second method the brain was not removed at all, and the intestines were simply dissolved and removed in a fluid state. The body was also laid in salt or natron, which, it is said, dissolved everything except the skin and bones. The cost of mummifying in this manner was 22 mins, or nearly $90.

The third method was employed for the poor only. It consisted simply of cleansing the body by injecting some strong astringent and then salting it for 70 days. The cost was very small.—"Budge's Guide to First and Second Egyptian Rooms."

They Would Get There.

It was a lecture delivered by a learned purveyor of liver pills and illustrated by diagrams of the frame of man. "That," he explained, pointing out a totally different spot, "is where man's liver is."

"Excuse me," observed the man in spectacles, "but I am a surgeon, and that's not where the liver is."

"Never you mind where his liver is," retorted the lecturer. "If it was in his big toe or his left ear my pills would reach it and shake it for him. On that you can bet your gig lamps."

Robbed the Grave.

"A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters'; and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts. a bottle, every bottle guaranteed. INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION.

Mr. James Grigg, West Devon, P. E. I. writes:—"I am glad to say that the supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I procured from you was very effective in restoring the health of my son Robert, who is now thirteen years of age. He was taken sick in the fall of 1897 with a severe pain in the right side, and a bad cough. He lost his appetite and was running down very fast. The doctor told me his trouble was turning to consumption. We had some of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills on hand and began to give them to him. They helped almost at once. His cough became less frequent, the pain left him and his appetite returned. A second lot of pills completely restored his health and he is now as well as ever and has been for the last three months. I think your valuable pills should be kept in every home."

SISTERS OF CHARITY.

The Sisters of L'Assomption, Onion Lake, N.W. T., who are doing a noble work among the Indians of that section write: "It affords us great pleasure to bear testimony to the beneficial effects of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in each case a cure resulted. We distribute a great many boxes to cure scrofula, consumption, and anæmia, and always with the happiest results. We recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as the best preventive of consumption we know."

THE CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

Too little blood is, as a rule, the first cause of consumption—Thin, bloodless, anaemic people lack power of resistance. They catch cold easily, get a cough and cannot throw it off. Then the lungs give way; they lose more blood, and give the fight for life up as hopeless.

CONSUMPTION IS CURED by increasing the blood supply and making it richer, so that it may feed and fortify the weakened lungs, throw off the distressing cough and put an end to the debilitating night sweats.

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE make new, rich blood with every dose. Consumption may go so far as to be incurable. Quacks who pretend to cure every case are unworthy of confidence; but many cases of consumption have been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, See that you get the genuine—substitutes never cured consumption or anything else.

The Genuine are Sold only in Packages like the Engraving. WRAPPER PRINTED IN RED.

Purely Vegetable.

First the bud, then the blossom, then the perfect fruit. These are the several stages of some of the most important ingredients composing the painless and sure corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. The juices of plants greatly concentrated and purified, gums and balsams in harmonious union, all combined give the grand results. Putnam's Extractor makes no sore spot, does not lay a man up for a week, but goes on quietly doing its work until a perfect cure results. Beware of acid substitutes.

Marian Elliott, a girl of about twelve years of age, was bitten by a vicious dog belonging to a Stewart-st. resident last evening. While petting the animal he seized her hand in his teeth and inflicted an ugly gash of some length. The wound was dressed by Dr King. The number of accidents of this kind that have happened of late should be sufficient to convince people of the danger of keeping such brutes about their premises.

A Letter from the Manager of the C P R Says Nothing of Trainmen's Removal.

In reply to the resolution recently passed by the Board of Trade the following communication has been received from Mr. Tate, manager of the C.P.R.:—

Montreal, May 8th, 1899.

T. Q. Quartermaine, Esq.,
Sec. Board of Trade,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 6th, enclosing a resolution of your Board of Trade respecting alleged removal of train crews from Havelock to Smith's Falls.

We have lately put in use on the line between Toronto and Montreal, a large number of consolidated compound locomotives. In order that these locomotives may be economically and efficiently operated it is necessary that we should have the facilities for making light running repairs to them. Such facilities exist at Toronto Junction and are available for the engines running between Havelock and that point. In order to make the required light running repairs on the engines not only between Havelock and Montreal but between Chalk river and Smith's Falls, we have provided the necessary facilities for the purpose at Smith's Falls where they are available for use in these engines, both east, west and north of that point. These engines while under repair, etc., lay over longer at Smith's Falls than hitherto, and I expect that this will result in some of the men running engines moving from Havelock to Smith's Falls, but such removal is not obligatory, and rests with the men themselves. Nothing has been done in the direction of discontinuing Havelock as a divisional point.

Yours truly,
THOS. TATE.

Provided, however, that at the request of the quarterly official board expressed by a three-fourths vote of these present and voting by ballot at a regular meeting (notice having been duly given that the question of the pastoral supply will be considered thereat) the Stationing committee may appoint a minister to a circuit or station for four or five years in succession."

DOUBLE DROWNING NEAR COBOURG

TWO BOYS DROWNED IN THE LAKE A SHORT DISTANCE FROM SHORE.

The Boat Capsized and Both Perished Before Assistance Could Reach Them—Sons of Prominent Citizens.

Special to the Review.

Cobourg, Ont., May 30.—A very sad drowning accident occurred here this morning about half-past six. Gordon Wilson, son of ex-Mayor Wilson, and Willie Floyd, son of W H Floyd, shoe merchant, went out for a sail in a canoe. When only a short distance out the canoe capsized, and before any assistance could reach them both boys were drowned. The boys were each about fifteen years of age.

ON THIS DIVISION.

Trainmen With Headquarters at Lindsay Held a Meeting.

There is apparently no change in the strike of the G.T.R. trackmen though many rumors are afloat. Owing to Peterborough not being a divisional point there is no commotion here but at other points on the Midland division there is considerable excitement. A large number of men who were brought from Montreal to Belleville, ostensibly to work on bridges, but in reality to work on the line, refused to take the place of the strikers. Those who were brought did not disembark, as was generally expected. A dinner car was run out and provisions secured from a Belleville grocer, but when a second supply was required he refused to fill the order. A number of other grocer stores were visited with a like result. The men were finally taken eastward. No violence has occurred on the section.

The Lindsay Post says:—The unrest and dissatisfaction among the men of this division of the G.T.R., arising out of the trackmen's strike and the demand of the engineers for increased pay culminated yesterday (Sunday) in a mass meeting of the several classes of employees in the Brotherhood hall. All the men who were not out with specials were on hand, and it was plain even to the uninitiated that something unusual was to the fore. When the session opened the situation was discussed with considerable warmth. The sympathy was with the striking trackmen, and some speakers proposed allowing the G. T.R. management a very short time in which to render justice to the oppressed and dissatisfied employees. Wiser councils prevailed, however, and we are informed on good authority that a resolution was unanimously adopted ordering that an ultimatum be forwarded to headquarters giving the management one week in which to patch up a peace with the men, failing which the traffic on the Midland division will be tied up.

Effect of the Storm.

A heavy storm of rain and hail fell west of town yesterday evening and seems to have been very severe still farther west. A despatch from Lindsay states that about six o'clock Lindsay and the surrounding country were visited by a perfect deluge of rain and hail, which is sure to do immense damage to grain and garden stuff. The incessant rains of the past two weeks have prevented many farmers in the district from putting in their grain, and last night's deluge has flooded their fields so that they will have to put in roots in its place. A great quantity of the grain already in has been washed out, and the outlook is discouraging.

A Despatch From the Northwest That is of Interest.

Winnipeg, May 23.—An inquest was held at Fleming, N W T, on the body of the infant of Agnes Glendenning, who has been living with George Taylor in Manitoba. This man has a large family in the east. The evidence showed that the mother left the child on the prairie to perish. When the baby was discovered it was almost dead and without clothing. It only survived a short time. The jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against the woman, who was committed to Brandon gaol for trial. Taylor will be dealt with later as an accessory, pending instructions from the Attorney-General.

TWO OF A KIND.

A Pair of Bad Boys Before the Magistrate.

The business at the Police Court again this morning concerned juvenile offenders. Two were in the box. They were George Kearns and Eddie King. Both are said to be incorrigibles, Kearns is a brother of the lad who was in court last week. The two this morning were charged with throwing stones and with making themselves general nuisances in the west end of the town. The Magistrate promised them reformatory if they are brought before him again on any charge.

A Bargain Made.

Chief Rossel and Mr F W Millar will make their first attempts on the steel and rubber steed next week. All that is wrong in the agreement is that they should give exhibitions the first week and learn in the second. People are warned not to mistake the show for Forepaugh & Sells' circus, which does not arrive here till later in the month.

IN THE ICE FLOES.

Description of the Imprisonment of the Allan Line Str. Manitoban for Weeks in the North Atlantic.

The Allan Line steamship Manitoban, Captain Calvert, came into port the other day from Glasgow via Liverpool, Halifax and St. John's, Nfld., after having been imprisoned in the Arctic floe ice for weeks in an attempt to reach the last-named port. There were times during the period of imprisonment when it seemed as if the huge ship must be ground to pieces by the terrific force of the ice obstruction.

Around her were toppling ice islands which seemed to be gradually closing in about the steamer. The noise of the cracking and crumbling of the ice as it jammed tighter together was almost deafening, and momentarily the position of the ship appeared to be fast becoming more serious and more awfully dangerous. To work the engines meant the snapping off of the propeller bladee, and she therefore could only wait.

Hourly observations were taken from aloft to see whether or not there were in the distance any appearances of a break in the obstruction, but none appeared. Here and there were visible some small sailing craft, also held within the grasp of the tremendous floe, and what has been their fate is mere conjecture. The chances are, however, that they were eventually ground to pieces and that their crews perished. On board the Manitoban were some old tars who have sailed the Arctic Seas in the old Dundee whalers, but all of them say they never before witnessed such a complete and inextricable ice blockade on the north Atlantic.

HARBOR OF ST. JOHN'S, NFLD.
Manitoban entering, showing huge iceberg on starboard side of the vessel.

This memorable trip of the Manitoban's was begun by her departure from Liverpool on April 1. Nothing of note marked the passage across until when she was about to make the Newfoundland coast. Then the lookout reported ice ahead, but this was not unusual at that season of the year. The ship's head was kept in the direction of St. John's, but the further into the ice she got the harder became the obstruction, until finally the craft was brought to a complete standstill.

It was then that the serious trouble began. The ship could not be turned around, neither could she be backed out of the floe, and there she remained, imprisoned within the grasp of the thickly-packed ice. It was bitterly cold all through the first night of imprisonment and the next morning revealed the fact that the Manitoban was surrounded on all sides.

To add to the critical condition in which Captain Calvert found himself, the coal bunkers were almost empty and the provisions were fast becoming exhausted. The crew were put on reduced rations and after a week's imprisonment the craft worked her way out of the obstruction, abandoned any further attempt to reach St. John's, and bore away for Halifax, reaching that port April 23. Here she took on board a fresh supply of provision and coal and on the evening of April 28 bore away to the northward again, and forced an entrance to the harbor of St. John's. Never before was the Newfoundland coast so completely barricaded by ice; but, when the Manitoban left, the obstruction was gradually working its way to southward.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

your wife, she shall never see one farthing of my money!—nay, not even if she wanted bread! I am a Jocelyn, and the men of my race never broke an oath!"

Captain Ayrton looked very indifferent.

"I swear another thing," said the squire. "If Sybil Jocelyn ever becomes your wife I will refuse to help you in any way whatsoever, let you suffer what you may."

"I can work for my wife, sir!" said the young man lightly.

"You work!" said the squire, with scorn that almost blinded him. "You work! Not while money can be made without labor. Let us end it, Captain Ayrton. I refuse to give you my daughter! I forbid you to enter my house! I curse the blind folly that caused me to let my innocent child meet such a one as you!"

Then Captain Ayrton looked fixedly at the old man.

"Do you know," he said, "that your daughter loves me—loves me, Squire Jocelyn—and that if you send me from her you condemn her to misery, perhaps death?"

"Do not dare to say it!" he replied, trembling with passion. "My dead wife's child love you! I would not believe it if she swore it herself!"

"Ask her," said the captain. "If she says 'No,' I am off to the wars, as the song says; if she says 'Yes,' give me a chance. I am very fond of her, and will make her a good husband."

Squire Jocelyn's face had become very white. His adversary saw that he had gained a point at last.

"She loves me—she does, indeed, sir," he said. "You should have seen her face when I spoke to her yesterday! You would not be so hard then—by Jove, you would not!"

"Yesterday!" said the squire slowly. "Did you speak to her of this?"

"I did," replied the young man. Then he stopped abruptly, for the mortal pain in the old man's face startled him.

Yesterday she had known of this, and last night she had laid her head upon his breast. She had kissed his face with this secret between them. Never again in life did a moment so bitter come to the master of Glynn.

"I will not believe it!" he said. "I will be blind, deaf and dumb. If it be true, and she loves you, better die of love than of a broken heart."

"I would not break her heart," returned Captain Ayrton.

"You shall not!" was the stern reply; "for it shall never be yours. Go now, at once. I refuse your request with contempt and scorn. Always remember that. If you were a king, being what you are, my child, should never be yours. Leave Glynn, and never attempt to set your foot within my grounds again! If you do my servants shall drive you off!"

"You may, perhaps, recall me," retorted the young man. "Fathers have done more than that before now to save the life of a dear child."

"I shall never do it. We Jocelyns bury our dead with honor, sir, preferring that to life disgraced. I have no more words to say to you, except that, not trusting you, I prefer seeing you leave the grounds myself and for your own sake advise you to leave Linn."

"I leave to-day," said the captain, cheerfully; and then the two walked through the grounds. They spoke no further word. When the outer gate was opened, Captain Ayrton turned with a gay smile, for which the squire could have felled him to the earth, and raising his hat disappeared down the high road.

From one of the castle windows a fair, wistful face had been looking down upon them. Sybil's hopes rose when she saw the two go out together, at least there had been no quarrel, no high words, no dispute, or they would not have done that.

She watched them until the trees hid both from her sight, then sat down, poor, foolish child, to think of the happiness awaiting her.

It was more than an hour afterward that a message came to her, saying that the squire was in the library, and wished to see her there.

CHAPTER XIII.

SHE WENT TO HER FATE.

The squire would have faced a regiment of foes with swords drawn rather than have had to meet and oppose the girl who came shrinking and hesitating into the room. He had prepared sensible speeches for her; he had laid out all his arguments ready for use; he had intended to be sternly practical and severe, but Sybil waited for nothing of the kind; as soon as her eyes fell upon the face never yet turned in anger upon her, she rushed up to him with a great cry, and fell weeping on his breast.

He could not put her from him; he could only lay his trembling hands on the golden head, and soothe her with loving words.

"Papa," she cried, "what have you done with him? You have not sent him away?"

"Yes, my darling," said the squire. "I have sent him away, and he must never come back again, Sybil—never more. You must learn to forget him."

"I shall learn to die first," she cried, passionately. "Oh, papa! you have always been kind to me; you never refused me one wish. I pray you do not send him away."

"It is for your own sake," he said quietly. "If you loved a beggar, Sybil, and he were a good man, you should have him. Captain Ayrton is a bad man, and you must forget all about him."

"He is not bad," she cried. "And if he has not been quite good all his life, he will be now that he loves me. I should make him good. Oh, papa! do not break my heart. I love him—I love him so dearly! Let him come back to me!"

Her tender arms loosened their hold, and before he could prevent it, she was kneeling at his feet, her lovely, childish face raised to his with such wistful entreaty, the squire's heart ached as he looked upon her. He raised her quickly in his arms.

"Sybil, do you love this man so very much?"

"So much!" she sobbed. "With my whole heart! Better than all the world besides!"

"I have nursed you and trained you," said the squire. "You have been my sole thought for many years. Do you love him better than me?"

"It is different," she said, her face flushing. 'When he is with me, all the world seems bright; my heart is full of quiet happiness. I want nothing else. If he were to say to me: 'Sybil, come and die in my place,' I should go. When he spoke my name, or came near me, it was as though my whole soul rose to him. Was that real love, papa?"

"Yes," groaned the squire; "Heaven help us! that was real love. And you would leave me for him, Sybil?"

"I should like best to keep you both," she said; "if not— Ah! papa, my mother left all she loved for you!"

"It can never be, my darling," he cried. "If you can not love Sir Rupert, I will not urge it upon you; but I shall never give you to this man, Sybil, never! This I solemnly swear!"

He bent his gray head as he spoke. She sprung from him like a wounded bird.

"And I say, papa," she said, slowly, "I am his; I have promised to be his wife, and I will either keep my word or go unmarried to my grave."

"He will not ask you again, child," said the squire, sadly; "it is your money he wants—not you. I have told him that if he married you, not one farthing of my money should ever go to you. Not one penny. I have sworn it, and I mean to keep my word!"

Her proud face grew crimson.

"You misunderstand him, papa;" she said. "No one but yourself should dare to utter such words to me!"

"They are most fatally true," he replied. "Now that he knows it, I have no fear. He will not molest you. He might take your fortune without you; he will never take you without your fortune."

It was pitiful to see the hot anger that flamed in her face and brow. She turned in her willful, imperious way from the heart that loved her best on earth.

"Try to be reconciled," continued the squire. "Forget all about it. You are young, and youth soon forgets. From this moment I forbid all mention of the man's name. Would to Heaven we had never heard it! He has taken my darling's heart from me."

She was not proof against the sorrow in his voice—she was but a lovely, spoiled child. She clasped her tender arms around his neck, crying out that she should always love him.

"Now go," said the squire, "and make yourself look like my bonny Sybil again; and from this moment, darling, mind the name is not to be mentioned."

She would have argued with him, but there was that in his look which counseled obedience. She left the room slowly, with lingering steps. Ah, me! the squire never saw his bonny Sybil again.

When he came down to dinner he hardly recognized her; the beautiful bloom had left her face, the violet eyes were dim with long weeping and saddened by grief.

He looked at her in alarm. Perhaps the sharpest pain of the old man's life came to him then, when he saw how entirely his child's heart had gone from him.

He lavished tenderness and caresses upon her. She was not sullen or impatient; she smiled, and tried to look interested in all he said; but the weary, woe-begone expression never left her; she was like a beautiful, drooping flower.

Quality Counts in Home Dyeing.

Progress, is the watchword of all economical women who dye at home—old fashioned powder dyes that streak are relics of a forgotten past. The day of uncertainty about results in Home Dyeing had an inglorious ending with the advent of that New English Home Dye of highest quality (it washes and dyes at one operation) Maypole Soap.

Clean to use—quick and sure in the brilliant colors it yields—fast beyond a single question. You can dye to any shade with it. Prepared by eminent scientists from ingredients of the very highest quality. It is the Dye of Quality.

Maypole Soap Dyes.

If you can't get them of your druggist or grocer (10 cents for any color or 15 cents for Black) send the money to the Wholesale Depot, 8 Place Royale, Montreal, and get the Soap and some useful advice about successful home dyeing.

Welcome Punishment to Bobby.

A little boy went to church with his mother. The service was somewhat long and utterly incomprehensible to the child. Consequently he fidgeted. His mother reproved him several times. At last she leaned toward him. "Bobby," she whispered, "if you act badly I'll never bring you to church again."

A gleam of hope dawned in Bobby's weary eyes. "Mamma," he said eagerly, "how bad will I have to be?"—Exchange.

The Last Rose.

There is a ticket chopper at the Park place station of the elevated railroad who could not take a prize in a beauty show in any climate and whose marked aggressiveness of mien fails to soften the effect of nature's handiwork upon his visage. A lady crossing the platform in a hurry dropped one of two large red roses that graced her corsage. It was promptly pounced upon by the chopper, who, seeing that its owner had no intention of returning to reclaim it, fell to fondling his prize with so evident an air of delight that a group of three or four brakemen, fellow employees, who stood near by waiting for an up town train, found a vast amusement in "guying" him.

At the instant they did so a tired looking woman, dragging a shabbily clad little girl by the hand, approached the box. The child, whose great eyes were sunk deeply in her pale little forehead, broke loose from her mother's hand, stopped stock still and began staring hungrily at the rose. In an instant it was in her possession and the great eyes had gone out of mourning. In two seconds the unlovely chopper was glowering at other arriving passengers more belligerently than ever, and his friends, the brakemen, had forgotten to jeer.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Two Fosers.

Lewis Carroll, the author of "Alice In Wonderland," was fond of puzzling his friends with curious problems. One of them was the question, When does the day begin? If a man could travel around the world so fast that the sun would always be directly above his head, and if he were to start traveling at midday on Tuesday, then in 24 hours he would return to his original point of departure and would find that the day was now called Wednesday—at what point of his journey would the day change its name? The difficulty of answering this apparently simple question has cast a gloom over many a pleasant party.

Another problem was as follows: A rope is hung over a wheel fixed to the roof of a building; at one end of the rope a weight is fixed, which exactly counterbalances a monkey which is hanging on the other end. Suppose that the monkey begins to climb the rope, what will be the result? It is very curious the different views taken by good mathematicians. One says the weight goes up with increasing velocity; others say that it goes up at the same rate as the monkey, while another says it goes down.

PROCEEDINGS AT THE HAGUE.

Italian and American Amendments to Russian Arbitration Scheme.

The Hague, May 30.—The drafting committee, or sub-committee of the arbitration committee, met yesterday and discussed the Russian scheme, adopting with slight modifications, the first six articles. Count Nigra, chief of the Italian delegation, submitted a proposal of mediation and arbitration, consisting of six articles, in the form of an amendment to the Russian project.

The Americans also submitted an amendment, demanding that in the event of a dispute between two nations, each should choose another nation to act together as arbitrators to settle the difference without bloodshed. This must not be confounded with the proposal for a permanent arbitration tribunal, which the Americans will introduce during the week.

The Italian proposal includes a clause providing that mediation and arbitration shall not stop mobilization or preparations for war. Neither the American nor Italian amendment has as yet been discussed.

The naval and military sections of the disarmament committee both met yesterday, and exchanged ideas in a desultory manner. The impression gains ground that the outcome of this committee will be practically nil.

The British minister to the Netherlands, Mr. Henry Howard, gave a grand reception last night, at which all the delegates and the leaders of Dutch society were present.

Philippine Courts Re-Established.

Manila, May 30.—An order has been issued re-establishing the Philippine courts, which have been closed since the American occupation. It revives all of the Spanish system, which does not conflict with the sovereignty of the United States.

Spanish the Official Language.

The Chief Justice is Cayetano Arrelano, and he has eight associates. The Attorney-General is Florentio Torres. This corresponds with the American Supreme Court. The oath prescribed begins: "I recognise and accept the supreme authority of the United States of America," etc. The Filipino members are all prominent lawyers. Spanish will be the official language of the courts.

The correspondents of a New York newspaper have been disbarred for fabricating an interview with Gen. Lawton, dated Manila, May 23, and for evading the censorship.

Paderewski Again Married.

New York, May 30.—A Paris despatch to The World says that it is learned on unimpeachable authority that Ignace Paderewski, the great pianist, was secretly married last December to Mme. Eilena Gorski, the divorced wife of Ladislas Gorski, a well-known violinist, formerly a member of the Lamoureux Orchestra. Mme. Gorski, when in Geneva recently, signed herself "Eilena Paderewski" on the register of the Casino there. Mme. Gorski and Paderewski are now living quietly in Paris together, awaiting the Pope's dispensation before having an ecclesiastical marriage.

In case of an ecclesiastical marriage Gorski will probably give his wife away, as was done by Ruskin to Sir John Millais.

The Plague in Egypt.

Cairo, May 30.—The total number of plague cases reported at Alexandria is eight. Two of those stricken have died and two have recovered.

Rev. Dr. Black Accepts.

Toronto, May 30.—Last night a cablegram reached Justice Maclennan, announcing that the Ministers' Presbytery in England had recommended the call and that Rev. Dr. Black had accepted.

The new pastor is an impressive-looking man, standing fully six feet in height and is broad-shouldered. He has had extended experience, lasting some 25 years, in ministerial work. He has held charges in St. Andrew's, Irvine, Waterbank, Edinburgh, Kilcreggan and Birkenhead. He is an eloquent preacher and wins friends as much by his kindly disposition as by his earnest spirituality. He is an ideal pastor. Dr. Black will come to Toronto in August.

Toronto University Deficit.

Toronto, May 30.—The Ontario Government has issued the report of the standing committee on finance of the University of Toronto, which gives a detailed statement of the expenditure of the past year. The deficit estimated for 1897-98 was $6,089.26, and the actual deficit was $6,089.26. Although $8,000 had been received for sale of lands, the deficit for the current year is estimated at $8,006.98. The revenue for 1898-99 is estimated at $125,465.23, while the total receipts for 1897-98 amounted to $119,097.10.

Train Killed Unidentified Man.

Port Union, Ont., May 30.—Last evening about 6 o'clock No. 8 local train killed a man half a mile west of Port Union. He was walking on the track and was watching a train going in the opposite direction. He was about 50 years of age, height about 5 feet 11 inches, small moustache, face recently shaved, black Christy hat and black shirt and tie, black coat and brown trousers. Nothing was found on the body that could identify him.

Marine Is Finance Minister.

St. John's, Nfld., May 30.—In a by-election just held in the Placentia District, Mr. McGrath, a member of the Opposition, defeated Hon. W. J. S. Donnelly, Minister of Finance and Customs, by 226 votes.

This will involve a rearrangement of the Cabinet offices, Mr. Marine taking the Finance portfolio instead of the portfolio of the Fisheries Department, which he now holds.

Will Meet in Woodstock.

Toronto, May 30.—The Ontario and Quebec Baptists yesterday disavowed the twentieth century fund, the announcement of which they cheered on the previous Friday night. Delegate after delegate told of financial stress, and the project was abandoned. It was resolved to hold the next convention in Woodstock in October of 1900.

The Grand Trunk Offices.

Montreal, May 30.—Work will be begun on the Grand Trunk offices, McGill street, to-day at noon. The masonry work has been awarded to Messrs. Peter Lyall & Sons. The masonry contract amounts to over a quarter of a million, and the whole building will cost about half a million.

Montreal Conference Opened.

Brockville, May 30.—The Montreal District Conference opened here yesterday in Wall Street Methodist Church. There are about 300 delegates present.

Eminent Violinist Dead.

Montreal, May 30.—Prof. Jehin Prune, the eminent violinist, died in Montreal yesterday, aged 60 years.

Forest Reservations.

The 30 forest reservations of the United States embrace an area of 40,000,000 acres in 18 states and territories. Seven are in the state of California, the largest of which, the Sierra forest reserve, includes 4,006,000 acres. Within the past 35 years it is estimated that 11,000,000,000 feet, board measure, of timber on public land have been destroyed by forest fires.

THE MARKETS.

Wheat Has Gone Up a Cent and a Half at Chicago—Crop Damage Reports Responsible.

Liverpool, May 30.—Wheat futures yesterday were ¼d to ½d per cental higher than on Saturday.

Chicago, May 30.—Wheat futures yesterday advanced. The July option rose 1⅛c and the September delivery 1⅛c per bushel, both closing near the top figures of the session. The reason for the appreciation was found in the continued reports of increasing damage to winter wheat.

IT'S TOO RISKY

To undergo an operation for bleeding, Piles when Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is a surer, cheaper, easier way to cure.

Cruel, barbarous methods belong to the dark ages of the past. There was a time when a surgical operation was considered the only possible cure for piles. Not so now. Occasionally there is still found a physician who adheres to this dangerous and expensive method, but to every one who still believes in using the knife, ninety and nine recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Dr. C. M. Harlan, writing in The American Journal of Health, said:

"We know that 'Dr. Chase's Ointment' meets all the requisitions of the highest standard of worth, that it will be held in high esteem wherever it is used, and consequently we endorse it to every reader."

By force of merit alone Dr. Chase's Ointment has won its way into this wide, wide world, until it has made the name of Dr. Chase familiar in almost every home, and won for the venerable discoverer the title of "America's Greatest Physician."

Dr. Chase's Ointment has never been known to fail as a cure for piles. It matters not whether blind, bleeding, itching or protruding, Dr. Chase's Ointment is an absolute and perfect cure.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment is the discovery of the author of Dr. Chase's Recipe Book, whose portrait and signature is on every box of the genuine.

Rev. Mr. Armitage's Sermon.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Why attack Christian Science? Mrs. Eddy, like a country parson, with a B.A., has got an idea that she knows what's what. Well, if she doesn't know it now she will later on and what's the good of raising a rumpus over a few years at most. The Christian religion as taught (and I may say practised by many) appears to the casual observer as a mass of contradictions, one kind of believer maintaining one thing and another another thing and so on to perdition. Now Christian Science teaches that man may cure his ills of body and mind by becoming as Christ was viz., devoid of sin and its consequences. We are told to be like Him in everything and that devils may be cast out in His name and wonderful things performed by what? By the all sufficiency of faith. Do not forget this—faith is all sufficient, not half-sufficient. At present long-winded sermons that teach a lot but of no practical result are on the decline. People fail to see the point. A living testimony is what is wanted—a practical soul and a body saving faith. Salvation, immediate heaven-sent bliss is promised in the Word to all who believe. Why not believe in the full and receive it?

Yours etc.,
CANDOUR.

Humane Society's Medals.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I have read the answer of Mr. J. P. Dwight, chairman of the investigating committee of the R. C. H. A. re the case of Eddie Walls. The Society no doubt, tries to do what they think is right. In the case of Eddie Wall it does seem to me, however, that the brave little fellow's action should be recognized in some way. Some years ago I was with a party on Georgian Bay when two of the party were upset. It was late in October and the water was cold and rough. I saw both were going to be drowned. I at once jumped in a small canoe and faced the rough water to save them or perhaps lose my own life in the attempt. Before I got to them one went down, I caught the other just as he was going down, I held him up for nearly half an hour, at the same time I had to fight two dogs that was trying to climb on the man's head when I was trying to keep him up. Two or three times he told me to let him go and save myself. I said no I will save you or we both should go together. There was no boat nor people near us so I expected no help. By chance a boat came. I did not see it till it was close to me. The man was saved and I was saved. My friend thought I deserved a humane medal. I was told it would not be granted as I had only risked my life to save one of my own party whereas if the man I had saved was a stranger to me I would have received the medal. That was the second life I had saved from drowning. Pardon me for using the valuable space of the Review.

Yours etc.,
CANORIST.

SCHOOL GIRLS' NERVES.

Many a pale, weak school girl, suffering the evil effects of an exhausted nervous system, and thin, watery blood, has been fully restored to the vigor and buoyancy of robust health, by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. The healthful glow on the cheek and the brightness in the eye tell of the building up process which is taking place in the body.

ber that the caddie knows a little. 5. Do not instruct the professional. 6. When the flag is unscrewed turn your back on your friend. 7. Never throw the club after the ball. 8. Before handing in your score find out what the chap multiplies by. 9. Stand in the centre of the water hazard to argue. 10. Count 100 before you swear; then make up for lost time. 11. Have all your pockets built for pints. 12. Play more golf.

The Review gives the first instalment of a glossary of golfing terms, so that one who plays golf may "know the lingo."

Addressing the ball—Method of standing and handling the club preparatory to striking the ball.

All even—An expression used when neither side has gained an advantage.

All square—Synonymous with all even.

Approach—The stroke by which the ball is played onto the putting green.

Baff—To play a high ball into the air with a backward spin.

Baffing spoon or baffy—A short wooden cup with a deeply cut back face formerly used for approach playing.

Bents—Long, wiry grasses found on seashore links.

Bisque—A point taken by the receiver of odds at any stage of the game.

Blind hole—One of which the green is not visible to the player as he addresses himself to the stroke. A blind hazard is one that is hidden from the player's view.

Bogy—A phantom opponent called generally the colonel, the number of strokes which ought to be taken to each hole without serious mistakes.

Bone—Piece of horn or vulcanite, let into the sole of wooden clubs to protect the lower edge of the face.

Borrow—To play a ball up or down a hill slope instead of straight at the hole, so that the slope will cause the ball to return to the hole.

Brassy—A wooden club soled with brass.

Break club—Any hard object (interfering) with a stroke which might break the club.

Bulger—A club with a convex face.

Bunker—Originally a natural sand hole. Now used of artifical hazards with built-up faces.

Bye—The hole or holes of a stipulated course that remains unplayed when a match is finished.

Caddie—The man or boy who carries the player's clubs, tees his ball and gives him advice.

Carry—The distance a ball travels from the club's face to the lighting spot.

Cleek—An iron club with a long narrow face, used for long shots when a ball lies badly, or when a wooden club would take it too far.

Club—Any legitimate instrument used in striking the ball.

Course—The ground within whose limits the game is played.

Cup—Any small indentation on the ground.

Cut—To put a right hand, or backward, spin on the ball so as to prevent it rolling forward when it strikes the ground.

Dead—The ball is dead when it lies so near to the hole that the player is certain to put it in at the next stroke. A ball "falls dead" when it does not roll after reaching earth.

Divot—Slice of earth cut out by the club in playing a stroke.

Dormy—A player is "dormy" when he is as many holes up as there remain to be played and he cannot be beaten.

Down—A player is "down" when an opponent has won one or more holes than he has.

Draw—Synonymous with "pull."

Driver—Wooden club used for playing the longest strokes.

Duff—To hit so far behind the ball or so deeply that it travels only a short distance.

Face—The hitting surface of a club head.

Fog—Thick mossy grass.

Follow through—The forward following of a club after the ball is struck.

Fozzle—Any thoroughly bad stroke, short of missing the ball altogether.

Fore—The word shouted by a player to give warning to those in front.

Fore caddie—Boy who goes ahead to show line to the holes and mark balls.

Full shot—A ball played with a full swing and intended to travel as far as possible.

Gobble—A ball played too hard at the hole, but which nevertheless goes in.

Green—Synonymous with "links" or "course"; used also as a contradiction for "putting green."

Grief—A ball in a hazard puts its owner in grief.

Grip—Upper part of club shaft gripped by player; manner of gripping the club; a narrow ditch in the course used as a drain.

Gutty—A gutta percha golf ball.

Half one—A handicap of one stroke at every second hole.

Half shot—A shot played with a half swing and not intended to go so far as a full shot.

Halved—A halved hole is one to gain which both sides have taken the same number of strokes. A match is halved when no advantage has been gained by either side.

Hanging ball—A ball which lies on a downward slope in the direction in which it is to be driven.

Hazard—Any kind of difficulty into which a ball may get on the course, "except sand blown into the grass by wind or sprinkled on grass for the preservation of the links or snow or ice or bare patches on the course."

Heel—The part of the face, or hitting surface, of the club nearest to the shaft; to hit the ball with the heel so as to cause it to fly to the right.

REVIEWS.

The Fowler.—By Beatrice Harraden, published by the Copp, Clark Co., Limited, Toronto, price, paper 75c.; cloth $1.50.

Miss Beatrice Harraden's latest novel, which takes its title from an adapted quotation from the 124th Psalm, "Our soul is escaped even as a bird out of the snare of the fowler," was begun soon after "Ships that Pass in the Night," and she has been engaged upon it ever since. It was supposed that it would be published two years ago, but on account of ill-health and other interruptions, she has been unable until now to complete it to her satisfaction. The book which has ben aptly called a mental seduction, shows the way in the "Fowler," a peculiar man with a mania for what might be called mental vivisection, and having a curious mental sway over most people, which attracted while it repelled them, so influenced a magnificent young creature "obviously gifted with a keen enjoyment of everything which life presents," that for a time he robbed her of her individuality, and her bright, joyous, frank nature became listless, depressed and suspicious; but with such skill did he exert this influence, that she actually believed him "just and generous-minded and free from malice and uncharitableness." The working out of the plot is interesting. The characters are all strong studies, Miss Harraden's individualistic style is as pronounced as ever and the lovers of her books will find the story most interesting.

Making a Dictionary.

Nearly every one has had the bright idea that it must be a tremendous amount of work to get up a dictionary, but few have any notion of the real size of the task. When Johnson got his famous dictionary started, he calculated that, with six assistants, he could complete the task in three years. It took him nine years instead. He received the small recompense of £7,500, and had to pay his assistants out of that.

Webster worked 24 years before his dictionary made its bow to the world. Webster was very punctilious in his definitions, and so painstaking that it was a wonder he completed the work when he did.

The words which give the compiler of a dictionary the most trouble are the little one syllable Saxon words. Their history extends back into the Saxon period, and their meaning has become twisted in many directions. Words with pedigrees are the hardest to trace.

When a new dictionary is projected, one man is selected as editor in chief, and he appoints his subeditors. Then appeals are sent out to literary people in general for voluntary contributions in the nature of rare and curious words. There are over 1,000 people who have offered their services in the case of a dictionary now making. They are to read standard works, ancient and modern, in the search for curious words, their origin and meaning. These words, written on slips of paper, are filed in thousands of pigeonholes. Over six tons of clips have been put away. This means 4,000,000 words, but only 1,000,000 will be printed. The amount of work necessary to properly sort these is evident.

The Red Bird, Best To-day and Good for Years.

THE WILSON CHAIN

With which Red Birds are fitted

When bicycle manufacturers and riders the world over were having trouble with their bicycle chains, which, in spite of all they could do, would wear and stretch, it was a Canadian who found a way out of the difficulty.

This Canadian was Mr. W. Wilson, one of the experts paid by this company to bring the Red Bird nearer a state of absolute perfection.

This invention consisted of a patent, whereby the centre part of the pin was hardened, giving the hardened steel pin. So well was this received that the largest chain manufacturing establishment in the world purchased the American right to produce it. Since then there have been many imitations, but, as is always the case with imitations, none are so good as the genuine article, such as Red Birds are fitted with to-day.

Stale Bread.

All bakers, wholesale and retail, seek to produce at their several bakings through the day only so much as may be required to supply the wants of their trade, but in making sure to provide enough there is likely to be some left over to get stale. There is some demand for stale bread for household uses—for making toast and for cooking purposes—but the demand is limited. Such stale bread as may remain unsold in this manner is never wasted; it is sold to farmers and market gardeners, who drive into the city with produce to sell and who buy more or less supplies here to carry back to feed stock. When finally disposed of thus, it is sold by the barrel, at so much a barrel, the price being very low, but depending somewhat on the surplus stock on hand on the day of sale.

The Kiss.

The olfactory kiss is Mongolian. The nutritive affair is European. The Mongolian kiss is with the nose. The European kiss is with the mouth.

The Mongolian kiss indicates that the party sniffed would be an agreeable prey. The European variety indicates that the party embraced would make a delectable meal.

They are but the different forms of the same instinct of preservation—the give and take of wild beasts.

FIFTY YEARS OLD

Why let your neighbors know it?

And why give them a chance to guess you are even five or ten years more?

Better give them good reasons for guessing the other way. It is very easy; for nothing tells of age so quickly as gray hair.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

is a youth-renewer.

It hides the age under a luxuriant growth of hair the color of youth.

It never fails to restore color to gray hair. It will stop the hair from coming out also.

It feeds the hair bulbs. Thin hair becomes thick hair, and short hair becomes long hair.

It cleanses the scalp; removes all dandruff, and prevents its formation.

We have a book on the Hair which we will gladly send you.

If you do not obtain all the benefits you expected from the use of the Vigor, write the doctor about it. Probably there is some difficulty with your general system which may be easily removed. Address, Dr. J. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass.

WRECK NEAR EDMONTON.

Train Left the Track and Several Persons Were Injured.

Winnipeg, May 31.—A South Edmonton despatch says the Calgary and Edmonton express, northbound, was ditched ten miles from there about 7 o'clock Monday evening. Several persons were injured, including Conductor Clark and Mail Clerk Kinney. Both the baggage and mail cars were badly wrecked. Superintendent Osborne of the C.P.R. gave the following particulars of the accident to a Winnipeg reporter yesterday: As train No. 41 was running north one and a half miles south of Otoskawan, it left the track, and two of the cars rolled down the dump, which at this point is eight feet high. The train was a mixed one, having two colonist cars attached. These were occupied by Galician settlers, and it was those cars which rolled over. However, none of the occupants were seriously injured, and only seven were slightly hurt. Three trainmen were also slightly injured. All of the passengers arrived at Edmonton at 10.45 p.m., the accident occurring at 6.50 p.m.

20TH CENTURY FUND.

The Baptist Convention Resurrects the Scheme and Passes It.

Toronto, May 31.—The Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec yesterday afternoon resurrected the twentieth century fund. The committee, after three sessions, resolved to recommend to the convention a modified amount which, being $30,000 less than that rejected, carried unanimously. Briefly, $150,000 is to be raised within 18 months, which sum includes all moneys already voted for all Baptist purposes, including the wiping out of the present deficits. The result will be reported to the meeting of the convention at Woodstock in October, 1900.

TEN FACTS IN DREYFUS CASE

Procurator-General Manau Gives Fresh Reasons for Retrial.

M. de Beaupre's Strong Speech—The Advocate Believed "On His Soul and Conscience" That Esterhazy Wrote the Bordereau—It Was on Paper Identified as the Same as Esterhazy's—Procurator-General's Speech Unfinished.

Paris, May 31.—At the Palace of Justice yesterday before the Court of Cassation resumed its sittings, the same precautions were observed as on the day before for the preservation of order.

M. Ballot de Beaupre said that if in 1894 the officers of the court-martial had thought it was not their duty to show Dreyfus the documents concerning him, the judges, not being lawyers, had erred, though acting in good faith.

Ten Fresh Facts Brought Out.

M. de Beaupre read a fresh report drawn up by M. Manau, the Procurator-General, on Saturday last, in view of the recent developments, enumerating ten fresh facts in favor of Dreyfus, viz.:

1. The Henry forgery.
2. The changing of the date of the bordereau to August instead of April.
3. Contradictions of the handwriting experts.
4. The absolute identity of the paper upon which the bordereau was written with Major Esterhazy's letter paper.
5. The sentence, "Am starting for the manoeuvres," which could not have been written by Dreyfus.
6. The police report withheld by the court-martial.
7. Lieut.-Col. Henry's weeping confession in Burtulu's office.
8. The Panizzardi despatch.
9. Official documents proving that Dreyfus had no relations with foreign embassies.
10. A document demonstrating that Dreyfus never confessed guilt.

M. Manau's report concluded with an expression in favor of a retrial of Captain Dreyfus.

Paper Same as Esterhazy's.

M. Ballot de Beaupre said that one new fact, from a legal point of view, was the discovery that the bordereau was written upon precisely the same paper as that used by Major Esterhazy. The judges in 1894 did not know this, and M. de Beaupre declared that on his soul and conscience, according to his conviction, the bordereau was written by Esterhazy. He deplored the attacks of revisionists upon the army, but said that the honor of the army was not dependent upon the detention of an innocent man on Devil's Island.

"I do not ask you to proclaim the innocence of Dreyfus," cried M. de Beaupre, with profound emotion, "but it is with a firm conviction and a lively sense of my duty and responsibility that I say there is reason to grant revision of the trial of 1894, and send Dreyfus for retrial before another court-martial, whose task will be to give a decision with a full knowledge of the facts. My report is ended," said M. de Beaupre, while cries of "bravo" and other marks of approbation filled the court room.

Address of M. Manau.

Amidst general excitement, M. Manau, the Procurator-General, addressed the court. He claimed that the change in the date of the bordereau constituted a new fact apart from numerous other new facts, and declared that the bordereau was really the work of Major Esterhazy. M. Manau dwelt upon the strangeness of the general staff's protection of Esterhazy, and the latter's ambiguity.

The court adjourned at 5 o'clock without incident. M. Manau will continue his speech to-day.

The news that M. Ballot de Beaupre had directly ascribed the authorship of the bordereau to Major Esterhazy produced a condition of stupefaction among members of the League of Patriots in the precincts of the court. They made no attempt to conceal their chagrin. "It is the collapse of our charges," shouted Maurice Barres, the novelist and Deputy from Charmes-sur-Moselle. The anti-Semites generally bitterly denounced M. de Beaupre, whom they accused of having sold himself.

Deroulede and Habert.

The section of the Court of Cassation engaged in the hearing of the case against MM. Paul Deroulede and Marcel-Habert, charged with inciting soldiers to insubordination, resumed its sitting at noon. The entry of the defendants elicited shouts of "Vive Deroulede." Several witnesses deposed in favor of M. Deroulede, and de Beaurepaire backed Deroulede and addressed the court in support of Deroulede's charges against President Loubet.

THE BILL WILL BE FORCED ON

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Wicked Colleagues Decline.

Consequently the Redistribution Bill Will Be Gone on With This Session—Government Printers Who Work on Sunday—Hon. Clifford Sifton Brings Down Commissioner Ogilvie's Report—The Contents of the Document.

Ottawa, May 31.—Mr. W. F. Maclean, M.P., took his seat in the House while it was in session for the first time yesterday, and was greeted with applause as he hobbled in on crutches. When Mr. Maclean was here last week he left again for Toronto before the House met. He returned to Toronto again last night, but expects to be down next week for some time.

The Dunkin Act.

Mr. Cowan introduced his bill to amend a temperance act of 1864. He explained that this act, which is commonly known as the Dunkin Act, was passed at a time when there was open voting, and his object was to amend the act so as to bring the voting under it into touch with the ballot system. The bill was read a first time.

The Redistribution Bill.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that on Saturday his hon. friend, the leader of the Opposition, had made the suggestion in the House that the Government should suspend for this session the redistribution bill. He had submitted the matter to his colleagues, and they had given it their consideration, and had come to the conclusion that there was really no reason why the bill should not be proceeded with this year.

Laugh on Sir Hibbert.

Sir Hibbert Tupper inquired about some returns he had asked for, and a laugh was raised by the Premier informing him that the returns had been brought down on Monday.

The Ogilvie Report.

Hon. Mr. Sifton presented the report of Mr. Ogilvie on the investigation he had made into the charges of misconduct on the part of Yukon officials.

Commissioner Ogilvie's report covers about 24 pages, one-half of which consists of the commission issued to Mr. Ogilvie, notices to the parties interested and the text of the resolutions proposed at the miners' meeting. Mr. Ogilvie's report deals only with three cases. The report explains that after a conference with his legal adviser, Mr. Clement, Mr. Ogilvie decided not to investigate anything which occurred after Aug. 25, 1898. Mr. Ogilvie states on this being announced the representatives of the Miners' Association and of The Nugget newspaper withdrew, and this naturally took away most of the interest from the proceedings. Still he continued the inquiry and examined three cases. The first of these was of a mounted policeman who was charged with having received money for letting a man pass into the postoffice. This case had been already dealt with by the Mounted Police authorities and the man punished. The next case was that of a Mrs. Cook, to whom Gold Commissioner Fawcett was charged with having improperly issued a location permit. From the evidence it appeared that the woman spoke very imperfect English, that Mr. Fawcett had made a mistake, but Mr. Ogilvie was not of the opinion that any blame attached to him. The third case was that of Miner and Kelly, in which it was claimed that Gold Commissioner Fawcett had acted improperly in connection with some transaction between these men and Alex. Macdonald. Mr. Ogilvie, after taking the evidence, could not find that Mr. Fawcett had acted improperly in this matter. Mr. Ogilvie's report, which is dated at Dawson, April 27, concluded with the statement that in a few days he would continue the investigation with regard to the charges made against Messrs. Wade and Norwood.

Hon. Mr. Foster suggested that the rules of the House should be suspended, and an order passed that the report be printed immediately. This was agreed to.

Printers Working on Sunday.

Mr. Guillet inquired whether the Government knew that work was done every Sunday in the Printing Bureau.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that he did not know.

Mr. Guillet—Will you stop it if it is true?

IN ITS TRUE LIGHT.

THE Huntingdon Gleaner (Liberal) says of the Government's redistribution bill:—

"The inference is obvious, that the distribution has not been based on population, but upon the political complexion of the constituencies—that Conservative counties have been allotted fewer members than they are entitled to, while Liberal counties have been unduly favored.

"While it is probable the judges would effect a more equitable division of a county into ridings than Parliament, the price the country would pay in making the bench partisan would far outweigh the advantage.

"When the country has had time to fully consider the bill, we are inclined to think the balance of public opinion will be against dragging the judges into the political arena.

"If the bill brought in on Friday passes, the Liberals will have a much better prospect of success in Ontario than they otherwise would.

"The constitutional point, whether the House is competent to pass a redistribution bill except after the census, is a formidable one, and if referred to the Supreme Court the decision would probably be against the Government."

Hon. John Costigan's Perversion.

(Montreal Star).

The mere fact that Hon John Costigan has severed his connection with the political party with which he has been connected for so many years is not in itself a reason for condemning the honorable gentleman. Independence is a thing to be encouraged rather than discouraged in members of Parliament. But the people of Canada expect and have a right to expect that when a member changes his political allegiance, when he announces his intention to give a general support to the party and the principles he was elected to oppose, he shall give good and sufficient reasons for his course of action. This is particularly the case when a member has, with a number of relatives and connections, been dependent for a living for many years upon Government appointments received from his party. Mr Costigan seems to recognise this, and indeed to be sensitive to criticism with reference to his action. The only question is whether the explanations offered by the honorable gentleman are sufficient to satisfy the country.

It seems to us that the explanations leave much to be explained, and we hope that Mr Costigan will take an early opportunity of supplementing his statement. He speaks of the Conservative party as "a grand old party, comprising men of honor, integrity and patriotism," and we can easily understand with what deep feeling he must find himself compelled to dissociate himself from such men to whom he has been bound for years by a common allegiance and common principles, no less than by the ties of gratitude for confidence and preferment bestowed upon him and his relatives. Mr Costigan dates his political conversion from "the day that half of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's Cabinet went out and left him in the lurch." This would do very well for an explanation, but for the fact that since that revolt Mr Costigan committed himself to the leadership of Sir Charles Tupper by accepting a seat in his Cabinet, and one cannot help wondering whether Mr Costigan would be now suffering from these belated qualms of conscience were the Tupper Cabinet still in existence.

We admire and share Mr Costigan's admiration and affection for Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who has shown his loyalty to his country and his party to be above all personal interests; but why at this date these feelings should impel Mr Costigan to desert the party which still comprises Sir Mackenzie Bowell and other men of honor, integrity and patriotism passes comprehension. The hon gentleman renews his grief at the deception of the "bolters," after a somewhat long interval, and manifests it by becoming a "bolter." He reminds us of the story of one man who at the first sight of mustard took a spoonful at a venture and naturally brought the tears to his eyes. When asked by his companion what he was crying for, he explained that he was crying about his father who was hanged forty years ago.

We have no doubt that Mr Costigan will make a very good Grit. He has not taken long to learn the style of his new associates, and to use personal abuse where argument is wanting. It is possible that when he is feeling less strongly he may be able to discover some better reasons than he has yet disclosed for leaving his party. To command general acceptance the causes must obviously be of later date than his acceptance of a portfolio from Sir Charles Tupper. He has stated that the Conservative party is not now in harmony with his principles, but the only "principle" upon which he appears to differ with them seems to be on the question of the Yukon investigation. Their principle is that charges against a Minister should be investigated by a judicial commission. Mr Costigan's principle is that charges against a Minister should be investigated by the Minister's wife's uncle. We cannot help thinking that Mr Costigan could give an explanation that would entitle him to the sympathy, although perhaps not the approval, of his countrymen generally.

The Diet Proposes to Reject the Government Army Bill.

Stockholm, May 31.—According to a despatch from Helsingfors, capital of Finland, published by The Aftenbladt, the Finnish Diet will virtually reject the Government army bill by adopting the bill recommended by the army committee, raising the strength of the army from 5,000 to 12,000 men, and providing that as a condition of the service performed, the Finnish army is to retain its national character and is only to be employed outside of Finland when the defence of Finland does not require it, and the Landwehr is only to be employed in Finland, except in a case of emergency, when it may be used in defence of St. Petersburg. The Diet also asks the Czar if he cannot sanction the bill, or submit a new bill, to be dealt with in a constitutional manner.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—It is easy to find out about it.

DeBarry's Work at Buffalo.

Mr. McCleary called attention to the case reported in the newspapers of Inspector DeBarry having stopped in Buffalo a Canadian mechanic who was on a visit to his uncle, and who had taken his kit of tools along with him, and inquired whether it was the intention of the Government to enforce a Canadian alien labor law.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that when the Anglo-American commission met there had been a sort of informal agreement made with respect to the alien labor laws of both Canada and the United States that their operation should be suspended until the commission had made its report. His attention had been called to the particular case referred to by Mr. McCleary, and he (the Premier) was at the moment corresponding with some influential gentlemen in Washington on the subject.

Inland Revenue Act.

The House then went into committee on Sir Henri Joly's bill to amend the Inland Revenue Act. The object of the amendment is to increase the amount of malt which may be used to the gallon in liquor. In the committee the bill was so amended as to make it retroactive to July 1, 1898.

It was then reported, read a third time and passed.

Sir Henri Joly's bill to amend the Weights and Measures Act, so as to provide a special barrel for apples, was read a second time.

Sir Henri Joly's bill to amend the act respecting the inspection of petroleum and naphtha passed through committee and stands for third reading. The bill changes the flash test, abolishes inspection in barrels, only permits sale from tank vessels and imposes fines and penalties for infringement of the act.

The Drummond Railway Bill.

After the usual recess, the House was about to proceed to the second reading of the act to authorize the acquisition by the Dominion of the Drummond County Railway, on the motion of Mr. Blair (Minister of Railways and Canals), when Sir Charles Tupper said there were resolutions upon the paper which ought to be dealt with before the second reading of this bill. The arrangements with the Grand Trunk Railway were an essential part of that measure and the House should not proceed to the second reading until they had agreed to the resolutions which were absolutely a part of that bill. He would suggest that, in order to get the matter fairly and legitimately before the House, the second reading of the bill should remain in abeyance until those resolutions had been carried.

Mr. Blair said that it did not occur to him that there would be any objection to proceeding to the further stages of that important bill. There had been no attempt to impose any restrictions whatever on the discussion of the Grand Trunk features of the resolution in regard to the Drummond County Railway. There had been no objection to a reference of the existing contract, or to any discussion thereon, nor had there been any absence of information, either as to the one agreement or the other. He took it that the present motion was largely a formal one. The House had practically adopted the principle of the measure by adopting the resolution in committee of the House.

After Hon. G. E. Foster had spoken to the question,

It Stands Over.

Mr. Blair said that under the circumstances he was perfectly willing the second reading should stand over.

Mr. Foster said they ought to have the original of the Grand Trunk contract laid on the table of the House, together with the plans which showed the connections they were buying and for which they were paying heavily.

Mr. Blair promised to produce the documents asked by Mr. Foster, and then moved that the order for the second reading of the Drummond County Railway Act be withdrawn.

The motion was agreed to and the House then proceeded to consider an act to amend and consolidate the acts relating to the harbor commissioners of Quebec. After discussion, the measure passed through committee, was reported for a third reading and the House adjourned.

THE ORANGE ORDER.

Annual Convention of the Grand Orange Lodge of B. N. A.—Ladies Elect Officers.

Toronto, May 31.—The annual convention of the Grand Orange Lodge of British North America began in County Orange Hall yesterday afternoon. Orangemen from all parts of Canada were present. About 500 delegates were present, and the city members have made every arrangement for their reception and entertainment. The Grand Master, Hon. N. Clarke Wallace, delivered his annual address, after which the Grand Secretary, in his report, gave in detail the figures of the growth for the year as follows: Initiated 3,268, joined by certificate 1,034, reinstated 947, withdrawn by certificate 1,480, suspended 2,038, expelled 108, died 387, real estate and other property $483,179.50, insurance $199,252. The treasurer's report showed receipts $6,-880.68, disbursements $3,681.25, leaving a balance on hand of $4,199.43. Committees were appointed and the meeting adjourned till 9 this morning.

Ladies Elect Officers.

The Ladies' Orange Benevolent Society met in Victoria Hall yesterday afternoon and elected these officers: Grand Mistress, Miss M. Cullum, Toronto; Deputy Grand Mistress, Mrs. William Hoey, Hamilton; Junior Deputy Grand Mistress, Mrs. E. M. McClelland, Ottawa; Grand Chaplain, Mrs. Olive Pearson, St. Thomas; Grand Treasurer, Mrs. Marion Yeates, Sarnia; Grand Secretary, Mrs. Maggie Longmore, Chatham; Grand Lecturer, Mrs. H. M. Ellis, Montreal; Deputy Grand Secretary, Miss Josephine Bassett, St. Thomas; Deputy Grand Lecturer, Mrs. Kemp, Toronto; Grand Director of Ceremonies, Mrs. E. Simons, Chatham; representatives to Grand Orange Lodge, Messrs. William Hoey and Alex. Downey.

The Trackmen's Strike.

Toronto, May 31.—There is nothing new to report in the Grand Trunk trackmen's strike. The telegrams received at the men's headquarters from other points are all calculated to maintain the belief of the strikers that they are sure to win. The officials have nothing to say save that the trains are running on schedule time without accidents.

Bones Broken.

Kingston, May 31.—While attempting to board a C.P.R. train at South Perth, Ont., Lieut.-Col. Montizambert slipped and fell, breaking bones in his right arm. He will be laid aside for some days.

Struck by Lightning.

Paris, Ont., May 31.—Yesterday afternoon lightning struck the chimney of Mr. Sam Lane's confectionery store and partly demolished it. Mrs. Coulthard's house on the flats was struck, the bricks in the chimney flying all over the yard. The plaster on the walls was knocked off in many places. Miss Coulthard, who was in the house at the time, received a severe shock in one of her arms.

Two Cobourg Boys Drowned.

Cobourg, Ont., May 31.—About half-past 6 yesterday morning Gordon Wilson, son of ex-Mayor Wilson, and Willie Floyd, son of W. H. Floyd, shoe merchant, went out for a sail in a canoe. When only a short distance out the canoe capsized, and before assistance could reach them both were drowned. The boys were about 15 years of age.

Great Strike in Paris.

Paris, May 31.—A general strike has been inaugurated in the village of Lacroussot, in the Department of Saone et Loire, and in nearly all the factories work has been suspended. Four thousand hands are already out.

"SAVE THE BABY!" The first instinct of the mother-heart is to preserve her little one. Its life and health take precedence even over her own. The common dread which women who are looking forward to the coming of a new and precious baby into the world first feel, is that they may not themselves be able to go safely through the trying ordeal, and secondly comes the fear that the darling little baby's life or health or general well-being may somehow be sacrificed.

But there is no real need of apprehension in either direction. If any woman who is expecting to become a mother will follow the example of Mrs. Orrin Stiles, of Downing, Dunn Co., Wis., the most perfect confidence may be felt in the happy outcome of this critical period, both for the mother and the child.

"I have been intending to write to you ever since my baby was born," says Mrs. Stiles in an interesting letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., "in regard to what your 'Favorite Prescription' has done for me. I cannot praise it enough, for I have not been as well for five years as I now am. In July last I had a baby boy, weight 11 lbs. I was sick only a short time, and since I got up I have not had one sick day. I have not had any womb trouble since I got up. I was not only surprised myself but all of my friends here are surprised to see me so well."

The properties of this grand "Prescription" and what it has accomplished for thousands of women, are more fully described in one chapter of the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., a splendid thousand-page illustrated volume. It will be sent free paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of customs and mailing only; or, cloth-bound for 50 stamps.

The "Favorite Prescription" is entirely free from alcohol; unlike nearly all other proprietary medicines for women, which merely give a temporary stimulation and are likely to induce a morbid, unhealthy craving. The "Favorite Prescription" gives energy and nerve-tone that is real, healthy and permanent.

THE RUSSIAN PROPOSALS.

Suggest Arbitration in Such Cases as Affect Neither National Honor Nor Vital Interests.

The Hague, May 31.—The Vaderland printed yesterday the text of the Russian proposals regarding mediation and arbitration.

Part one deals with the desirability of seeking a solution of international disputes by the mediation of friendly powers, and sets forth that such good offices, whether sought or proffered, shall bear strictly the character of friendly counsel, and in no way of compulsory force.

Part two deals with international arbitration, which declares "the most efficacious and equitable means of settling questions regarding the international application of treaties." The contracting powers, therefore, should undertake, to seek arbitration in such cases, so far as these affect neither vital interests nor national honor.

Then, after setting forth that each state remains the sole judge of what cases are to be submitted to arbitration, it is suggested that in a large number of cases, such as questions of pecuniary damage, and disagreement in the application of treaties or conventions affecting commercial, postal, navigation, currency, sanitary and copyright matters and the like, not affecting vital interests or national honor, arbitration should be obligatory. In all other cases, says the Russian scheme, arbitration, though recommended by the present act, can only be applied on the spontaneous initiative of one of the parties in dispute, and with the express consent of the other parties to the quarrel.

THE COOKBOOK.

Poultry should never be eaten until 12 or 14 hours after it is killed.

Before attempting to chop parsley scald it by pouring boiling water over and squeeze it very dry in a clean cloth.

The best flour has a slight yellowish or straw colored tint. To judge of its excellence squeeze a handful. If it is good, it will retain its shape as given it by your hand; if poor, it will crumble.

Hard boiled eggs chopped and covered with a not too rich white sauce that is seasoned with curry, the eggs and dressing served in a ring of boiled rice, is an excellent dinner entree or luncheon dish.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Pickles or vinegar will not keep in a jar that has ever had any kind of grease kept in it.

When using an egg beater, do not keep it in one place all the time, but move it about the bowl.

The Queen to Undergo Operation.

London, May 31.—Truth, in its issue yesterday, says that Queen Victoria has decided to undergo an operation for cataract when Prof. Hermann Pagenstecker, director of the Opthalmic Hospital at Weisbaden, thinks the proper time has arrived. The operation will be performed either at Osborne or Balmoral, probably after the Parliamentary session.

Liberia Wants a Change.

London, May 31.—The Liverpool correspondent of The Daily Chronicle asserts that Dr. Blyden, a native Liberian statesman, is now en route from Liberia, empowered by the Liberian Executive to demand an American protectorate for Liberia, and, in the event of the United States refusing, he is empowered to approach the British Government on the same subject.

Marchand on French Soil.

Toulon, May 31.—Major Marchand arrived here yesterday afternoon on board the French cruiser D'Assas. The hero of Fashoda was greeted with immense enthusiasm. He was received by the mayor of Toulon and several generals of the French army, who welcomed him with speeches of laudation.

FASHION HINTS.

The Preferred Mode in Stationery and Minor Matters.

Mourning toilets should always be simple. Flat trimmings are preferable, and for jewelry dull jet or black wood is alone allowed. A line of white may be worn at the throat and wrists and inside the edge of the bonnet.

Some years ago black hats were almost universally worn, accompanying even the lightest gowns, but this season there is a change, and it is not possible to have millinery too gay in color. Pale gray hats with gray trimming and white hats with white trimming will go well with any toilet, but decided colors are apt to be inconvenient for a woman who cannot afford a variety of different hats.

Most stationery now has a cipher. The cipher is small, at the top or left hand upper corner of the sheet. Light, soft greens, blues, lavenders and grays being favorite tints for paper, the cipher is usually white, and there is often a white border. Light rose pink stationery with the same white trimmings is also seen, but is less elegant. There is white sealing wax for use with these papers, and the cipher is repeated upon the seal.

CLOTH TOILET.

The gown illustrated has a double skirt of pearl gray cloth, over which is a tunic of pearl gray cloth pointed in front and at the back and bordered with applications of gray velvet. The bodice, which fits tightly behind, is slightly gathered at the waist in front and is cut away to show a guimpe of plaited white satin decorated with silver buttons. The top of the bodice is edged with gray velvet applications, and the sleeves are covered with the same ornamentation. The gray velvet belt is fastened by a silver buckle. The hat of pearl gray straw is trimmed with a drapery of gray tulle and white feathers.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Silks For Bodices and Spring Hosiery and Gloves.

The new taffetas have white or black stripes or dots on a colored ground, and these stripes and dots are of velvet, chenille or satin and are an attractive novelty.

It has been announced many times that black stockings are condemned by fashion, but nevertheless they hold their own and are as well worn if not as universally worn as ever. Colored hosiery is much used, but a large class of elegant women prefer black to any other for general wear.

White and pearl gray gloves continue to be preferred, although dead white is perhaps not quite as fashionable as those indescribable shades which have the effect of white, but are yet shadowed with a tinge of color. A suspicion of suede or fawn or drab is rather more pleasing than absolute chalky colorlessness. The stitching may be dark or light, according to taste. In fancy shades of kid yellow appears to predominate. Glace gloves continue to be preferred to suede, perhaps because, light tints being fashionable, glace kid is more convenient. White or pearl suede gloves could not be worn in the street more than once without becoming soiled to the degree of unsightliness.

The illustration given today shows a ball costume of mauve silk. The trained skirt has five narrow plaitings around the foot. The long tunic, which is rounded in front and at the back, is bordered by a deep flounce of white lace headed by a garland of wallflowers in front and by a little ruche of silk behind. The lace flounce is carried up the left side of the tunic in coquilles. The tight bodice is draped at one side and has a bretelle of lace at the other, which is a continuation of the lace bertha which surrounds the round decolletage. The plastron is covered with little plaitings of mauve silk. The bertha is headed by a fold of mauve velvet, which forms a knot on the right shoulder, and a garland of wallflowers is carried from the left shoulder to the waist in front. The mauve velvet belt is fastened by a jeweled buckle.

Superstition and Its Effects.

I wish that some one would write an adequate book upon superstition and its effects, as distinguished from and opposed to revealed religion and its effects. This curse of the world, civilized or savage, deserves a worthy chronicler. Walking round the exhibits in the Agricultural hall, it was borne in to my mind that superstition in all its hideous phases is perhaps the most concrete and tangible form in which the evil one manifests himself upon earth, and I think that those who have mixed much with native races will not disagree with me.

Here is an instance of its working which has just come to my notice: Not long ago two Matabeles were tried at Bulawayo for the murder of their grandson, a child of 2. Poison having failed, the boy was held beneath the water and drowned. The crime was admitted, but the defense raised was that the child had cut its top teeth first. Such children being unlucky and the cause of ill luck to others, it was customary to kill them, and a "witch doctor," on being consulted, had ordered that this one should be put to death! Well, only a century or so since we did things almost as bad in England.—Rider Haggard in Longman's.

An Added Burden.

I was taking my dinner one day at a mountain farmhouse on the headwaters of the Cumberland river, and the lady of the house, who had four children playing around the front of the establishment, was inclined to repine at her hard luck in having so much work to do.

"I run this here whole farm," she said in a tone which indicated that she was ready to resign.

"How many acres have you?" I inquired.

"A hundred and forty—20 in wheat, 60 in corn, 10 in medder an pasture, an the balance scatterin an woods."

"Got any stock?"

"Ten head uv cattle, two cows, six hogs an work critters fer the place."

"And you run the whole business?"

"Indeed I do—every hide an hair uv it," she sighed.

"Don't you hire some help?"

"In course, but 'tain't hired help that takes the load of'en a body." There was philosophy in that statement, and I paused a minute.

"Haven't you got a husband?" I next asked with a good deal of sympathy.

"Yes," she responded very slowly, "but I have to run him too."—Washington Star.

He Got the Fees.

Sagar, the verger of Halifax parish church, was quite a character in his way. He figured in several good stories in Dean Pigou's "Phase of My Life." On one occasion a bridegroom discovered after the service that he had no money with which to pay the fees.

Sagar went to the bride in his most winsome way and asked her: "Hast ever seen Black Bibles? We've a rare lot on 'em in this 'ere vestry."

"No," she replied, not having the faintest idea of what a Black Bible was.

"Coom along. I'll show yer them."

He lured her into the inner vestry.

"There's the Bibles," he said, pointing to them, locked up as they were in a bookcase with glass panels, of which he had not the key. "Wait awhile till I come back."

He turned the key of the vestry on the bride and, going to the bridegroom said, "Lass is all right, but you'll no have her till you have paid."

The "brass" was immediately forthcoming.

A Happy Introduction.

An Englishman who is an enthusiastic Alpine clubbist came in one night to carry a friend off to a lecture which the veteran mountaineer Whymper was giving at Westminster on his pet theme, "Twenty Thousand Feet Above the Sea." The friend could not go, for he was otherwise engaged, but Whymper's name reminded him of a story of Sir James Linton, the late president of the Royal Institution of Painters in Water Colors. He had to introduce the well known artist E. M. Wimperis to the Alpinist, and he did it in the following fashion: "I want to make two distinguished men known to each other. The one is Mr. Whymper, the other Mr. Wimperis." For an impromptu this is not bad.

A Haughty Reply.

A story about William Pitt I read or heard somewhere many years ago, it is to be feared, is not authentic, as I cannot find it in Lord Stanhope's or Lord Rosebery's book. It represented a noble mediocrity as assuring the great statesman with some condescension that he might fairly expect an earldom for his magnificent services.

"I an earl!" was the haughty reply. "I make dukes."—Macmillan's.

Hunting Tigers in Persia.

The people of different countries have different ways of hunting the tiger. Traps, pitfalls, spring guns and nets are called into play. The Chinese are said to employ the mirror to lead the animal into a trap. The tiger's curiosity is excited when he sees his image in the glass, and he immediately proceeds to investigate the mystery. The Persian manner of conducting the hunt, as this is described in Chambers' Journal, is more sportsmanlike.

A spherical, strongly woven bamboo cage, with intervals of a few inches between the bars, is erected in some spot near the haunts of the tiger. This cage is firmly and securely picketed to the ground. Inside, a man provided with several sharp and powerful stabbing spears, or with a keen and pointed sword, takes his post at night, with a dog or a goat as his companion. There he wraps himself in his blanket and goes to sleep.

In due time the tiger makes his appearance, the man is waked by his four footed companion, and after vainly snuffing and prowling round the cage to find an entrance the tiger rears against the walls.

The man instantly takes advantage of the brute's unprotected position, and with a resolute stroke of the spear or the sword puts him to death.

Why He Failed.

The Michigan Tradesman suggests, in the course of an anecdote, the reason why a certain old fashioned tradesman came to fail. When one of his creditors reached the place, after this catastrophe, he found the merchant working hard to figure it all out.

"Land, but I don't see why I should fail!" he kept on saying. "Mebbe, though, I didn't collect sharp enough."

"You have a heap of goods round here," said the other, looking about him.

"Yes, more or less."

"When did you take the last inventory?"

"Inventory? Take everything down?"

"Yes."

"And make out a list?"

"Yes."

"And dust off the shelves and mop the floor?"

"That's it."

"And clean the windows and paint the front of the store?"

"Yes."

"I never went into that. I was going to one day about 15 years ago, but they had a wrestling match in town and I forgot the inventory. Mercy on me, but I can't understand why I should fail!"

Testing a Diamond.

"When in doubt as to the genuineness of a diamond," said a leading dealer in precious stones to the writer recently, "there is only one really reliable way by which the expert or the amateur judge can determine the quality of the article and that is to test its hardness by holding it against a rapidly revolving grindstone from five to ten minutes. Then, if the least mark appears upon the diamond, it is not a real stone, for if it were a diamond, so far from any mark being produced upon it, it would be likely, on the other hand, to make a deep impression on the grindstone. The same test may also be made with emery paper or on an emery wheel, neither of which, although harder than a grindstone, will make any impression upon a genuine diamond.

"This is a good thing for one to remember in these days of manufactured diamonds. The paste article is now made with such care that it sometimes tests the skill of the expert to distinguish the genuine from the bogus, but if the grindstone is brought into play there can be no room for doubt. Some people think that if they rub a stone against glass and it makes a deep impression it is a diamond. But nearly all paste diamonds will scratch glass, and the imitations of sapphires, rubies and emeralds will do the same."—Washington Star.

The Peculiar Dance.

"The Dance," wrote Julian Ralph from Copenhagen, "are not satisfied with the alphabet. They have invented a twenty-seventh letter, which is an O with a mark run through it diagonally from the north northwest to the south southeast, and this amazing letter comes in most of the words. They are so proud of it that they paint it, all by itself, in heroic size on the front of the second stories of the tram cars. I always used to think that when a British or Russian or Swedish prince came here to get a wife all he had to say was, 'Wjill yjou mjarry mje?'

"But I didn't know a great deal of Danish then. In fact, I only knew the word 'tandstikker,' which means 'rancid match'—at least I think so after using these matches all over the world. Since I have come here I've not only discovered the O with a skewer through it, but I find that the language is so impossible that the Danes themselves have given it up. They spell Copenhagen Kjopenhaven, Kiobenhaven, Copenhague and Coepenhaun."

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters'; and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts. a bottle, every bottle guaranteed. For Cattle Market Site.

A meeting of the Council in committee was held last evening to prepare business for the regular meeting next Monday. Among the business that came up was an offer from a manufacturing concern to build on the site now leased to Mr Kennedy. Alderman Corkery was enthusiastic for its acceptance, but the matter was not finally settled.

Refuses to Pay.

The Town Council of Lindsay gave an order for a write-up in the Journal of Commerce, similar to what Peterborough got. The "write-up" appeared, but was not satisfactory, and the Town Clerk shipped the copies of the papers which had been delivered and which Lindsay had agreed to take, back to the printers.

BODY RECOVERED.

Body of Little Joe Wall Found in the Lake.

Last evening about seven o'clock Mr Cos. Wall discovered in the Little lake the body of his little son, Joe, who was drowned in the river just three weeks ago to-day. It rose to the surface about one hundred yards above the east end of the railway bridge, which crosses the river just above the locks bridge. Mr Wall has been indefatigable in his search ever since the drowning and rowed around the lake six or eight times each day. He was at the spot half an hour before he discovered the body and saw no sign of it, so it is supposed it rose at that point. Interment took place last evening.

Rev Mr McQuade, of Havelock, was in yesterday to see Relief Officer Miller whether there were any young girls in the care of the society for adoption. There are none at present, however.

A Trip Probable.

It is possible that the 57th battalion may have a trip to Niagara on June 30th and July 1st. Major Edwards while coming down from the staff ride, had a talk with the Quartermaster General on the matter and it is expected that the Government would be willing to assist. Nothing definite has been decided about the matter yet but it is almost certain that a battalion trip will be held this year, whether to Niagara or some other point.

WORKS OF ART.

A Beautiful Collection of Paintings Exhibited by a Toronto Artist.

Mr. Henry Martin, A.R.C.A., of Toronto, has on exhibition at Belleghem's furniture rooms, 190 Hunter-st., a collection of water color pictures that everybody in town should see. The work is exceedingly fine. Mr. Martin is a specialist in European scenes and shows a taste especially for scenes depicting life in the historic cites of the Old World. Some of his pictures of great buildings with which are combined life-like figures of the people are especially fine. His view of Como market place is an elaborately built up picture, the brightly garbed and vivacious looking Italians standing out in strong contrast with the grand and stately old building. Mr. Martin also has on exhibition a beautiful interior view of Westminster Abbey, showing the chapel of Edward the Confessor. A delightful scene is Muckross Abbey, which is situated just near the famous Killarney lakes. It is a gray old building with small windows and is almost overgrown with ivy. It is in a state of ruin. An English view of interest is St. John's church, Chester, which has been in existence in one form or other since 675. Scotch people will be delighted with the view of old Stirling. Toronto bay at sunrise is nicely painted and in interesting contrast to it are two very pleasing pictures, one a view of the entry into the market square at Verona, a perfect watercolor, and the other a view of a subterranean passage under the ampitheatre at Verona. There are many other beautiful pictures. Mr. Martin is offering these for sale.

DEATH FOLLOWS AN ACCIDENT

LITTLE DAVID BAILEY BLEEDS TO DEATH FROM A WOUND.

A Sad and Peculiar Accident Last Evening Resulting in the Death of a Seven Year Old Boy.

A peculiar accident followed by a grievous result happened in the yard back of the Wm. Hamilton Co's foundry last evening. Little David Bailey, son of Mr. Samuel Bailey, a moulder at the Wm. Hamilton works, residing at 470 Donegal-st., fell upon a broken bottle which pierced at artery in his groin and death resulted about midnight from the loss of blood.

About a quarter to seven o'clock, just after having had supper, the little fellow went across to the yard apparently to play with a couple of other children. He was climbing upon a high wooden pulley wheel when he fell off. On the ground below was the bottom part of a broken bottle, standing on end with a sharp jagged point a couple of inches long projecting upwards. The boy fell upon this and was literally impaled upon it, the point puncturing an artery in the region of the groin.

He began at once to bleed copiously and two children who were with him, little Joe McManus and the latter's sister, endeavored to carry him over to his home. His father had heard of the accident and, running over, met them and took the boy home. He was by this time unconscious from the great loss of blood.

Drs. King and Moher were sent for and quickly arrived. They found the boy in a very weak condition and still bleeding. They labored with him for about two hours. The puncture in the artery was very hard to locate and the child was very near to death. Finally he was left for the night. About a quarter to twelve the wound opened again. Dr. King was summoned and hurried to the house but the boy drew only a few breaths after his arrival.

Little Davie was just about seven years old. He was a pupil of the Park-st. school, a member of Miss Richardson's class. The family have the sympathy of all in his sad death.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock.

FOR A HALF HOLIDAY.

Discussion at a Meeting of the Retail Clerks

The adjourned meeting of the clerks to consider the matter of getting shorter hours or a weekly half holiday for the summer months was held at the National Hotel parlors last night. There was a large attendance. Rev Mr Davidson and Rev Mr Potter were also present. Both spoke encouragingly on the matter of shorter hours, especially of early closing on Saturday nights. The committee that had been appointed to interview the merchants as to early closing or a weekly half holiday reported that a majority appeared to be in favor of the latter. The clerks decided to request in favor of this, and a strong committee was appointed to wait on the merchants with a petition. The committee includes Rev Messrs Davidson and Potter.

—To-day was dry enough to let some work go forward on the streets to put to use the new road roller. Engineer Hay has begun on McDonnell-st., a thoroughfare well deserving his municipal attentions. It has been a veritable bog for the last three years. On this street, on the short block from Aylmer to Bethune-sts., 35 loads of surface mud was removed. In places it was full nine inches deep. The metal put on the streets some years ago had entirely disappeared, going down beyond the possibility of recovery in the soft soil, and the exposed surface being soft from the recent rains it was deemed not necessary to pick it over. A thorough coat of broken stone was given and the roller put on to level it. The results were good and a top dressing of fine stone and a trifle of sand to smooth the thing down and finish it off.

THIEF TAKING IN ZANZIBAR.

A Medicine Man's Way of Working the Third Degree on Suspects.

This story of thief taking in Zanzibar was told by a woman who was one of the guests at a luncheon.

"The English consul," she said, "was robbed of a silver dinner service, and the police advised him to call in a medicine man if he wanted to get it back. So he sent for the medicine man and invited his friends in to see the fun.

"The day came and with it the medicine man, who was a little, old, squat, repulsive looking negro, so small as barely to escape being a dwarf. The only things that the medicine man brought with him were four little sticks 12 or 16 inches long and as thick through as my little finger. He asked for a small low table, squatted down before it Turk fashion, held two of the sticks, one in either hand, and ordered the consul to sit opposite him and hold the other two sticks, allowing the tips to rest gently on the table. All the servants were in the next room, with the door closed. The medicine man rolled his eyes ceilingward and began muttering some gibberish that we took to be an incantation.

"I soon noticed that the consul looked distressed and uneasy, and, bending over him, I asked him the reason. He said: 'Why, I can hardly hold these sticks. They tug as if some one had hold of the other end and was trying to pull them away from me.' He was joked a bit about his vivid imagination. One of the men offered to and did relieve him, only to find that it was no joke. The magic power of the medicine man's incantation made holding the sticks a real physical effort. Did I try holding them myself? Yes, but I can tell you very little of that satisfied me. What do I think it is? Oh, I don't know—devil worship or something else. But let me go back to catching the thief.

"One of the servants was admitted and ordered to place his two hands on the table. He did it. Nothing happened. The medicine man kept on his incantations for a minute or more, then said to the servant: 'You can go. It is not you.' One after another was called, with no result. The performance was beginning to grow monotonous, when in came the coachman, a man who had been in the consul's employ for years. Scarcely had he put his hands on the table when the sticks held by his master gave a mighty tug and closed around one of his wrists, while the two sticks in the medicine man's hand snapped hold of his other wrist. The coachman did not wait to be accused, but blurted right out: 'I did not do it alone! There are others in it too.' Well, sure enough, there were others in it, who at once confessed. The dinner set was recovered.—New York Sun.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

True to his commands, she did not mention his name; but when the squire went to his room that night he found a little note, neatly folded, lying on the toilet-table. He opened it with trembling hands, guessing it was another appeal, and knowing he must refuse it.

"My own darling papa," the letter ran, "do you know my heart is breaking? Do you know that I shall die if you part me from my love? Oh, papa! be merciful to us. Try him—only try him. I will answer for him! He will be so good if you give me to him! And, oh! forgive me, darling! I would rather be miserable with him than happy without him."

He read the impassioned words, and could not rest until he had seen her again. "She must not sleep in false hope," he thought; "that would only make her task severer."

Squire Jocelyn went to his daughter's room; he knocked gently at the door, and she came to open it. Her golden hair was unfastened; and fell like a soft, shining veil around her. By the light of the taper her fair young face looked so pale her father was touched by her innocent loveliness.

"Sybil," he said, gently, "I had your note. I must stand between you and your fate. I must save you from yourself. It can never be, my darling—never. Bear the sorrow. Death could not part you from him more forcibly than you are parted now."

He heard her wild sobbing all the way back to his own room; and Squire Jocelyn, hiding his troubled face in his hands, wished he had died before seeing his darling thus.

She did not write to him again—she did not appeal against her fate—but, day after day, she drooped and faded. In vain did Irene persuade and remonstrate; in vain did she try to cheer or rouse her; the girl seemed to have fallen into the dull apathy of despair.

It was as though some one lay dead in the house, so deep was the gloom that had fallen over Glynn. The summer sunshine was a mockery, the singing birds were cruel, the flowers unkind—to shine, and sing, and bloom, while she who had made the light and music of home was sorrowful almost unto death.

Squire Jocelyn would have laid down his life to save her. He relaxed the rules he laid down so strictly. He would have taken her to London—she might have gone to every ball and party for miles round, but she did not care to go. Her languid face never brightened, no matter what was proposed.

He thought she must be ill at last, for she neither slept, eat, laughed or talked; and the squire called in one of the cleverest physicians in England, who told him he could do nothing—his daughter's mind was diseased, not her body.

Then the old man trembled, asking himself, "must she die as her mother did?" And then came to him a memory of Captain Ayrton's words:

"You will, perhaps, be glad to recall me. Many fathers have done that to save the life of a dear child."

Would those words come true? Must he, to save Sybil's life, give her to the man who would make that life a curse to her? No; a thousand times no! Better to die in her sweet, innocent youth, her love unsullied, her life unstained, than live to share the lot of Lyster Ayrton.

Day by day he watched her with a grief that knew no words; they were so tender of her, Irene and Violet, knowing that her life was ebbing away; and Sir Rupert, with the generosity that made him one of the noblest of men, refrained from visiting Glynn, although with his whole heart he longed to be there.

She never complained—the name of her lover never once crossed her lips; but she was not a woman strong to bear and endure. She was only a spoiled, willful child; her life seemed to have passed into her love, and, now that love was taken from her, her life went with it.

They are all at a loss to know what to do with her. They could not bear to watch her die before their eyes.

But the shadow was deepening over Glynn; the cloud that was to darken so many lives grew deeper: the cruel fate that was to bow the bright head of the squire's darling into the dust comes now apace.

The bright summer months were almost over, the end of August was near, when Irene one morning persuaded her sister to leave the room where she sat listlessly through the long days, and go out where the sun shone gayly on the blooming flowers.

She went—just as she did everything else—because she was told. Irene watched the slow, languid footsteps that had once been so light and buoyant; and the girl, turning round, saw her sister's eyes upon her. She went back and flung her arms round Irene's neck.

"I have tried to be good," she cried; "indeed, I have, Irene; but my heart is breaking!"

"I know," said the elder girl, kissing her tenderly—"I know all about it. Every one suffers in this world, my darling. Go now, and try to amuse yourself."

The sun shone, the birds sung, and the flowers lifted up smiling faces as the squire's darling went to her fate.

CHAPTER XIV.

SYBIL SAW HIM UNDER THE TREE.

Captain Lyster Ayrton had not the least intention of tamely resigning the richest prize fortune had ever placed within his reach. He never for one moment believed the kindly, indulgent old squire would keep his word. Once married, the mischief really done, he would pardon his daughter, and the gallant captain have nothing to do save enjoy what he had so boldly won.

He laid his plans with great skill and coolness, resolving that, in order to disarm all suspicion, he would not go near Glynn for two months at least. His long absence would also have another advantage. The fair, passionate child, whose pure, loving heart he had so completely won, would have found out what his absence cost her. She would have discovered what life was without him, and he would be able then to mold her to his wishes. All this he knew and felt certain of. When the two months were over he did not go near Glynn or Ling, but took apartments in a farmhouse near Woodale, where his retreat was safe, and he would be hidden from all eyes.

For several days he had wandered in the Glynn Woods; he knew that, sooner or later, Sybil would go to the spot where he told her he loved her. On this very morning she wandered there, and raising her wearied eyes, saw Lyster Ayrton standing under the trees.

She did not scream or faint—the shock of sudden joy was too much for that; but the beautiful flush of happiness that rose in the girlish face might have touched a better man. Her lips parted; her lovely eyes beamed upon him; she held out her tender hands, and he, rushing forward, clasped her to his heart.

Ah! he had guessed rightly; and the sorrow of his absence had weakened her; she hungered and thirsted for his love; she forgot all the world, everything save him.

"I have been so lonely," she murmured; "so lonely and so sad! I thought you had forgotten me, and I longed to die. Oh, my love! my love! do not leave me again!"

He knew—Heaven forgive him!—that she was but an innocent, loving child, and his vain heart beat high with triumph; he saw that he could persuade her to do as he wished.

"I never will," he replied. "Ah, Sybil, my darling, they were so cruel; they said I wanted your fortune and not you. Come to me, and show all the world how pure and true my love is."

She did not understand him. In the ways of the world she was all unversed, but her face brightened at his words.

"I knew," she cried;; "I have never doubted Heaven, and I have never doubted you!"

It is so sad a story. I shrink from writing it. Human nature is weak, or so wicked as when they take a cowardly advantage of innocence. Captain Ayrton did this—he tried to persuade the squire's darling to leave her home, and marry him without her father's consent.

He did not startle her—he was too wary for that. He painted the pain of absence in such vivid colors that the child clung to him, and showered her loving words upon him. He spoke of the cruel way in which he had been misjudged, until she was ready to defy father, sisters, friends, the whole world, and show that he had loved her, and not the miserable fortune that would one day came to her.

Then, in eloquent words such as women love, he painted their happiness if she would but consent. How he would take her abroad and show her all that was brightest and finest on earth; how she would be a queen of beauty and of grace, how men should admire her, and how proud he who loved her would be to see such homage paid to her.

Eloquent, specious words, in which she detected no flaw. He made his wishes known to her cautiously, and with such consummate care, that far from seeing he wanted her to do a base, dishonorable act, he made her believe she was a heroine, sacrificing herself to love.

"Never mind money," said he, who knew no other god. "We can be happy in poverty, if we are together. There will be no happiness for us apart."

And she, who had felt his absence so unendurable, clung to him again and smiled. She did not care to live without him. She could never go through that misery again. A cold, awful cloud fell over her as she remembered the dreary days, without hope, without

HARD TO PLEASE.

Why Mrs. Blumer Asked Her Husband to Stop Flattering.

"I am so proud of you!"

With eyes tenderly expressing the fond appreciation and tender love of a devoted husband John Blumer turned gently and imprinted a kiss upon his wife's forehead.

"Yes, my dear," he continued, "I feel somewhat conscience stricken when I think of how silent I am, as a rule, about all those qualities of mind and heart which you possess. As I go about among my friends and talk with the brilliant and cultivated women who shine with such splendor, how glad it makes me to think that you are not such as they! Give me the quiet, simple woman, who is content to stay at home, who lives but for her husband and who prefers the domesticity of the home circle to the artificialty of society. No one knows better than I do that when you go out you suffer greatly in comparison with other women, whose glamour of intellect blinds the senses. Beauty in women I can admire—indeed I do admire it—and yet, after all, I prefer you. What do I care if you are not beautiful when I know that you are good? What difference does it make to me if you cannot be bright and witty, no matter how hard you try, with others? Hello! What's the matter?"

"Don't you think," replied Mrs. Blumer as she took her handkerchief from her eyes and glared at him with a combined look of sorrow and anger, "that you have said enough?"

John Blumer rose from his chair with a despairing gesture and looked out of the window savagely, with a hard, set look on his face.

"That's just like a woman!" he muttered indignantly to himself. "Give her one word of praise and she turns on you!"—Kansas City Journal.

Effects Were Wonderful.

"I had been troubled for years with pains in my sides and kidneys and had aches in all parts of my body, owing to stomach and liver troubles. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and its effects were wonderful. In a short time I was entirely cured." Mrs. Francoise, 209 Ossington Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

MILNER-KRUGER CONFERENCE

British and Boer Representatives Start for Bloemfontein.

Mr. Conyngham Green's Letter Expresses General Sympathy With the Uitlanders, But Is Guarded in View of the Conference—Member of Cape Parliament Says Transvaal Government Has Distributed Rifles to Farmers.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, May 31.—Sir Alfred Milner, Governor of Cape Colony and British high commissioner of South Africa, and President Kruger of the South African Republic left Cape Town and Pretoria, respectively, yesterday morning, for their meeting here to-day to consider the demands of the Uitlanders. Great preparations for their reception have been made here. A triumphal arch has been erected outside the railway station, and addresses expressing hope for a successful result of the conference will be presented to the officials.

Boer Farmers Get Rifles.

London, May 31.—The Mail's Cape Town correspondent says Sims Secret, a member of the Cape Parliament, having recently toured Barkly District, Cape Colony, reports that a number of farmers there have received Mauser rifles and sealed parcels of ammunition from the Transvaal Government, and, in return, are pledging themselves to rally to the Transvaal flag at Christiania upon the signal from Transvaal.

Secret also says a detachment of Transvaal infantry lately inspected a bridge across the Val River, north of Kimberley, with a view to destroying it in the event of hostilities.

Conyngham Green's Letter.

London, May 31.—The letter addressed by Conyngham Green, the British agent at Pretoria, to Wynberg, the president of the Transvaal Province South African League, with reference to the petition signed by 21,684 British subjects resident in Witwaters Rand, and addressed to Her Majesty the Queen, reads as follows:

"I have instructions to inform your petitioners that their petition has been receiving the serious consideration of Her Majesty's Government, and, without expressing an opinion at this stage of the proceedings, on several allegations contained in the petition, Her Majesty's Government cannot but express a general feeling of sympathy with the memorial, and is earnestly desirous of seeing a speedy and substantial change effected in their position.

"That the Government refrains from further reply to the petition at this moment is due to the fact that a meeting is arranged between a high commissioner and the President of the Republic, at which it is expected these questions, with others now at issue between the two Governments, will be discussed in a conciliatory spirit.

"Her Majesty's Government regards the agreement of the President of the Republic to meet the high commissioner as an indication that both the Volksraad and the Government of the Republic are sincerely desirous of arriving at a solution which will satisfy the reasonable aspirations of the unenfranchised population.'

Decoration Day at Manila.

Manila, May 31.—Memorial Day was celebrated at Battery Knoll, where Scott's guns were planted against the Filipino trenches in the first day's fighting at Manila. Nearly 300 soldiers lie buried there on a bleak mound, surrounded by rice fields, rough boards marking the graves, which are ranged in five unbroken rows. The few soldiers who could be spared from the trenches came to Battery Knoll, dusty and bronzed, bearing flowers with which to strew their comrades' graves. A silk flag was placed above each mound. After taps had been sounded, the soldiers took the flags from the graves to send to relatives of the dead.

Similar services were held over the dead in the Paco Cemetery yesterday afternoon.

The graves of soldiers and sailors buried at Cavite and Iloilo were also decorated yesterday.

Death of Capt. Tilley.

Iloilo, May 31.—Captain George H. Tilley, U.S. volunteer signal corps, was killed at Escalante, east coast of the Island of Negros by insurgents Saturday, May 27, at 11 o'clock a.m. Captain Tilley's body was found floating in the river with marks of violence on the head. He was buried at Iloilo, May 30.

GOOD HEALTH FOR WOMEN

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food Restores Weak, Sickly Women to Robust Health.

Any irregularities in the monthly uterine action is sufficient cause for women to be alarmed about their health. Whether painful, suppressed or profuse menstruation, the cause can be traced to some derangement of the nerves.

A few boxes of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food will completely build up the exhausted nerves and restore the regular monthly action which removes from the body the clogged matter that would otherwise cause pain and serious disease.

It is as a restorative for pale, weak women that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has been singularly successful. It counteracts the debilitating diseases peculiar to women by feeding the nerves and creating new nerve fluid, the vital force of the human body.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has restored scores of hundreds of weak, sickly women to robust health. 50c. a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.
Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddon, February 28th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

The baseball club had an excellent practice last evening. There was a good turnout of the men and all showed speed. They are, indeed, putting up a first class snappy game and the match against Kingston on Saturday afternoon should be a splendid exhibition. McCabe is pitching in great shape and all the infielders are doing good work. The boys are working faithfully for the match and expect to win.

Christian Science.

Sir,—Christian Science is Christian knowledge. To know God in the full sense of the word is to be a child of God and joint-heirs of His grace. The Scientists claim that this means all that is contained in it. Salvation begins at once upon the belief of the person believing. Pagans call this self-delusion. Christians call it the saving power of the Saviour. He saves from sin and all its consequences. This must be borne in mind. His blood cleanseth from sin and its consequences (disease) as soon as the believer sees the purity and power of the atonement.

Purely Vegetable.

First the bud, then the blossom, then the perfect fruit. These are the several stages of some of the most important ingredients composing the painless and sure corn cure-- Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. The juices of plants greatly concentrated and purified, gums and balsams in harmonious union, all combined give the grand results. Putnam's Extractor makes no sore spot, does not lay a man up for a week, but goes on quietly doing its work until a perfect cure results. Beware of acid substitutes.

The Pipe of War.

Mr Jas Blaine has on exhibition at the Palace Hotel a famous and historic pipe. This interesting relic is none other than the pipe that was used by Dewey at Manila. It is, therefore, a pipe of war. It is the genuine thing as Mr. Blaine can produce documents to prove. It is said that it was not the smell of this pipe that killed all the Spaniards. In fact it is a most innocent looking pipe but greatness is known to lurk behind humble exteriors and this is the case with this pipe. It was admired by many at the Palace to-day and Mr Blaine showed it to his friends with a great deal of pride. The proprietors may secure Dewey to give an exhibition of smoking on his pipe but the people need not wait for that. They can see the pipe at any time.

A PIPE BURST.

Bursting of a Water Pipe in R. Fair & Co's Store.

When the clerks of R Fair & Co's dry goods establishment went to work at seven o'clock this morning they noticed that something was wrong. The second floor was in a state of flood and water was leaking down into the main store. On examination it was found that a water pipe had burst on the second storey some time during the night. Considerable damage was done upstairs, and downstairs a pile of dress goods was somewhat spoiled by the water coming through.

AN INVOLUNTARY BATH.

Don't Monkey with the Extinguisher Unless You Know the Combination.

It would seem that the unexpected is likely to happen about once so often, and it is now known that sundry views with reference to the functions of fire extinguishers have been unsatisfactorily settled. Last night, after the fire on George-st, one of the brigade was dilating on the usefulness of the fire extinguisher and its phenomenal clerity in getting down to work. He said he knew whereof he spoke. They had these infernal machines at the fire hall, and all the user had to do was to turn the concern upside down, pound once on a piston and things would fly. There is no stopcock on this kind of extinguisher.

Now mine host Snowden, of the Snowden House, had just received a new and improved variety of extinguisher, warranted to be several times more energetic and prompt and to dispense a more villanous acid fire, killing solution than any other. The peculiarity of this particular machine is that it only requires turning upside down when immediately its vitals set to work and hustle out the contents. The fire brigade man—who should have known better—seized the machine and turned it over to find the plunger and explain. Before he could locate what was'nt there the thing had begun to fizz, and having no stopcock, fired the contents around the hotel office, over the counter, and on the disinterested spectators, of which there were a few. A traveller sitting on one side got about two gallons of the solution squirted over his clothes and he ran out to escape the deluge. The thing was put out doors where it fired itself dry. This morning there was a suit of clothes to settle for at an advance on bargain day prices.

A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer, of 1125 Howard-st., Philadelphia, Pa., when she found that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption had completely cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. All other remedies and doctors could give her no help, but she says of this Royal Cure—"It soon removed the pain in my chest and I can now sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the universe." So will everyone who tries Dr. King's New Discovery for any trouble of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50 cents and $1.00. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough; every bottle guaranteed.

MEN DISMISSED.

Lindsay Bridge Carpenters Would Not Repair Tracks.

Lindsay, Tuesday, May 30th. — The discontent of the local G.T.R. trackmen has been accentuated by the attempt of the management to compel the bridge carpenters to perform their duties.

On Saturday the Lindsay men under Foreman John Rear, received instructions to patrol the line from Lindsay to Whitby, going one day and returning the next. They demurred, stating that they were willing to do anything connected with their own department, but that they knew nothing about track repairs, and did not wish to assume the responsibility. This morning Messrs. M. Mulvihill, Adam Switzer, W. Gannon and Geo. White, were notified by Mr. E. Brown, the local superintendent, that their services were no longer required. Their dismissal stirred the railway men to white heat, and they have the sympathy and warm approval of our business men and citizens generally.

Last evening a bad wash-out about two miles north-west of Orillia delayed traffic for over six hours. No harm was done on the Haliburton, Coboconk or Whitby divisions.

Lambs For Spanish Children.

Directly after Lent is observed a custom that is particularly interesting to children. It is what may be termed the sale of the lambs, for on Monday morning after Easter the shepherds have their lambs and goats on sale in all the cities. The animals are kept in temporary pens, and it is the rule for parents to permit their children, of from 5 to 12 years of age, to purchase a pet lamb or goat. After the animal is selected it is taken to the home residence and given the freedom of the courtyard and quite often the greater part of the house. It is every child's ambition to train the pet so that it will at least follow its owner like a dog, and if a few simple tricks are added to the lamb's or kid's education the master or mistress is proud indeed. Girls especially delight in these pets, and often the animals are so bedecked with bows and ribbons as almost to hide their bodies. The sale of the lambs is a very old custom, and is supposed to have originated through some form of the church.—Anglo-American Magazine.

How Bock Beer Got Its Name.

Maximilian of Bavaria, the first elector, consulted an English physician regarding his consort's sickness, who prescribed for her some "Buckingham Double (strong) Beer." After importing some several times at great expense, Maximilian decided to send his court brewer to Buckingham to become familiar with the production and manipulation of said unexcelled brew. Upon the brewer's return to Munich the Buckingham beer (then abbreviated in name to Buck, later Bock, beer) was henceforth brewed there and was for the first time served at the electoral family's table on Maximilian's day, Oct. 12, 1628.

At first only used as a medicinal potion, it soon became generally introduced as a pure food and was ordered to be brewed hereafter two weeks before the two weeks after Corpus Christi day.

Why She Was Black.

In describing her visit to one of the mission schools of Africa Miss Kingsley tells of a negro girl of 12 to whom she addressed the question, "What are you studying?"

"Eberyt'ing," replied the child.

"What do you know?" asked the young woman.

"Eberyt'ing," was the answer.

"You are the very person I've been looking for," said Miss Kingsley. "Now, tell me why you are black."

"Certainly. I'm black because my pa's pa's pa saw Noah without his clothes on."

Religious and Irreligious Fishes.

Fishes are supposed to have no religion. Probably they are greatly maligned in that as well as in other respects. St. Anthony, as you know, used to preach to them and make their eyes glitter and their hearts beat by his eloquence. A Jewish story is told—I cannot, unfortunately, lay my hands on the passage just now—of a fish which leaves the sea on Saturday and does not return until Sunday, so as to be able to keep the Sabbath.

Other fishes, unlike their puritanical brother, do not observe the sacred day. The Koran gives a story of some very naughty fishes in David's time. Knowing that the Israelites were forbidden to catch fish on the Sabbath, the wicked creatures came out of the Red sea in unusual numbers and kept in sight of the people all through the day in order to tempt them. On the approach of night they returned to the sea again. In a fatal moment some of the Israelites yielded to the piscine blandishments, caught several of them and had them for dinner. Whereupon David cursed the Sabbath breakers, and God, to show his displeasure, changed them into apes and pigs. For three days they remained in this unpleasant condition, when a violent storm arose and swept them into the sea.

The fish which brought the tribute money to our Lord is supposed to have been a haddock, which had strayed into the lake of Gennesaret. There are several legends which tell of miraculous finds in fishes.—Paris Messenger.

Ex-Secretary Sherman says that his brother, the general, once replied thus to a compliment on the honors fallen to the family: "Yes, John has done well. I do not complain of fortune. But the biggest and best of the Shermans was my brother Jim. If he had lived, the rest of us would have been thrown in the shade."

Petty Officer A. Gloyne of her majesty's ship Royalist, on the Australian station, is the crack marksman of the whole British navy, the best rifleman out of tens of thousands. In last year's rifle practice he scored 227 points out of a possible 240, a good record, being several points better than the naval champion of 1898 and 1897.

And now the question is, Will the women of Kansas City greet Colonel Funston at the reception sure to be given him as they greeted Hobson? We have an idea that if Mrs. Funston sees them first they will not.—Kansas City Journal.

Colonel Funston has uttered the finest phrase of the war. The Twentieth Kansas had pressed on to Caloocan, 1,000 yards ahead of the line. "How long can you hold your position?" was the message of General MacArthur. What could be more splendid than Colonel Funston's reply, "Until my regiment is mustered out!"—Kansas City Star.

ANIMAL LIFE.

The pretty little woodpecker of California is an energetic worker. It will carry an acorn a distance of 30 miles to store it away from sight.

The guinea pig grows more quickly than any other quadruped. It is fully grown when 6 weeks old and begins to bear young at 2 months.

The eggs of a terrapin are hatched in about 30 days. With her forepaws the female terrapin, in the middle of them, scratches a hole in the sand, and in it places her eggs, from 13 to 39. She then covers them and relies upon the sun to do the hatching.

When a heron flaps his wings, the upward and downward movements, it is claimed, number nearly 300 beats a minute. The bird consequently creates a considerable disturbance of the air for some distance in his vicinity whenever he thus exercises himself.

Emergency Sale of

Water Damaged Goods

AT THE GOLDEN LION.

By the bursting of a water pipe on the night of the 30th, ulto., a large quantity of our Reserve Stock in the Second, First and Basement Stories were damaged by the flood of water. These goods consist principally of 400 yards of DRESS GOODS and DRESS LININGS.

1500 yards of TOWELLING, together with quantities of TOWELLS, SKIRTS, LINENS, SHIRT WAIST SILKS, ETC.

A considerable portion of these goods are only slightly damaged by moisture and sustain little or no damage for general utility or wear.

As it is imperatively necessary that an immediate disposal of these goods must be made, we have decided to make a quick clearance by holding an Emergency Sale which will be continued during

Friday, Saturday and Monday

JUNE 2, 3 and 5.

This means that about HALF PRICE will have to be accepted in many instances and that we must be content to stand the loss ourselves. We can't afford to hesitate about the sacrifices that must be made in prices, no matter how severe the loss, in order to make a swift clearance as crowds are sure to take advantage of this sale. Capital chances for large buyers.

BUFFALO STRIKE ON AGAIN.

The Bison City Freight Handlers Again Quit Work.

They Claim That Contractors Are Violating the Agreement—Grain Shovellers Sympathize and Will Strike Also if Freight Handlers' Troubles Are Not Remedied—Montreal Moulders' Strike Settled—G.T.R. Trackmen's Strike.

Buffalo, N.Y., June 1.—The trouble on the docks here has broken out again. Last night at 6 o'clock 2,500 freight handlers quit work, claiming that the contractors were violating the contract which was signed when the men resumed work last week. The strikers held a meeting at 8 o'clock last night and it was announced that the grain shovellers would quit work to-day if the freight handlers' grievances were not remedied. Judging from the different stories told by the strikers they really do not know what they are striking for. The contractors claim that they have not violated their agreement, and that the men quit work just because it has become a habit with them.

Moulders' Strike Is Off.

Montreal, June 1.—As a result of a conference held last night between Vice-President Keough of the International Iron Moulders' Union and the striking moulders, it was decided to declare the moulders' strike off and the men will return to work to-day. The men gained substantial advantages.

Rioting at Kingston.

Kingston, Ont., June 1.—Shortly before midnight Tuesday night a crowd of about 50 citizens, sympathizers of the striking trackmen, attacked a car at the outer station here, containing ten "scabs" and two special constables. After a fight, in which revolvers were used on both sides, two freight trains arrived in the yards, scattering the attacking force and allowing the besieged to seek the shelter of the passenger station. The police were called out, but could not do anything against such a large force.

At Lansdowne the people refused food to the new men, and the company withdrew them.

The Napanee gang received similar treatment and were sent on to Belleville.

At Montreal.

Montreal, June 1.—The interest now centres with the Grand Trunk engineers, and although they are not inclined to talk, it has leaked out that there is a strong section of the committee of forty who favor aiding the trackmen, but it is not presumed they would go so far as to strike.

At Toronto.

Toronto, June 1.—Trackmen think the strike is almost ended. Freight is being shipped with all possible speed in all directions. It was spoken in railway circles yesterday that the engineers and firemen would soon join hands with the strikers, and a general strike be precipitated. The drivers will meet next Sunday to discuss the situation.

The officials of the Grand Trunk are growing more reticent every day. They refuse to give any information, but always say that everything is running smoothly.''

Pilots Out on Strike.

Chatham, N.B., June 1.—The pilots of the Miramichi are on strike over the question of rates, and as a result several vessels are in difficulty. Captain Bloomfield Douglas, R.N., has been ordered here by the Canadian Government to investigate the trouble.

GRAND ORANGE LODGE.

The Officers Elected for the Ensuing Year—Entertained by Toronto.

Toronto, June 1.—The 70th annual meeting of the Orange Grand Lodge of British America closed yesterday. Several grants were made as follows: Five hundred dollars to the True Blue Orphanage, $100 to Rev. R. Coburn, the blind preacher of Toronto, and $50 to the fund of St. James' Methodist Church of Montreal.

A resolution was passed which enacts that no man who is engaged in the manufacture or sale of spirituous liquors is eligible for membership in the Grand Lodge.

The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year: Most Worshipful Grand Master, Hon. N. C. Wallace, M.P., Woodbridge; Deputy Grand Master, Major A. J. Armstrong, St. John, N.B.; Grand Chaplain, Rev. W. F. Wilson, Hamilton; Grand Secretary, W. M. Lockhart, Alliston; Grand Treasurer, W. J. Parkhill, Midland; Grand Lecturer, Frank Schultz, Baldur, Man.; Grand Director of Ceremonies, R. H. Watson, Toronto; Deputy Grand Chaplains, Rev. Charles E. Perry, Toronto; Rev. R. P. Jones, Avening; Rev. J. C. Madill, Toronto; Rev. D. Wright, Springhill, N.S.; Rev. H. C. Dixon, Toronto; Rev. C. J. Wilson, Toronto; Dr. Sproule, M.P., Parkdale; Rev. W. Walsh, Brampton; Rev. W. C. Depraus, Consecon; Rev. H. A. Thomas, Lucan; Rev. A. B. Chambers, Toronto; J. J. Haylock, Baldur, Man; Deputy Lecturers, W. M. Fitzgerald, Toronto, Western Ontario; W. J. Wright, Brockville, Eastern Ontario; J. M. Mason, Montreal, Quebec.

The next meeting of the Grand Lodge will be held in London.

The City of Toronto entertained the delegates at a banquet in the Pavilion in the evening.

The Alien Labor Law and the Grand Trunk Trackmen's Strike Were Discussed—Government Bills Were Advanced a Stage—Sir Charles Tupper Moves to Have the Ministers Attend to Their Duties.

Ottawa, June 1.—Before the orders of the day were called yesterday afternoon, Sir Louis Davies, in reply to Mr. McDougall, said that the new regulations respecting the lobster fishery would not be put in force in such a manner as to affect this year's fishing.

Alien Labor Law.

Mr. John Ross Robertson asked whether the Government intended to enforce the alien labor law as regards the importation of aliens from the United States to take the place of strikers on the G.T.R. He then read Inspector DeBarry's statement telegraphed in the afternoon from Buffalo.

Mr. Robertson, continuing, said that this showed that the understanding which the First Minister spoke of yesterday as having been made at Washington for the suspension of the alien labor law on both sides of the line, was not being acted up to on the American side. He thought the Government should take some steps to prevent the Grand Trunk Railway from importing foreigners and aliens.

Sir Wilfrid Is Regretful.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier regretted that the member for East Toronto had used intemperate language while the strike was going on, and was afraid his hon. friend was looking for party advantage more than the interests of the strikers. He deprecated a discussion of the question without the side of the Grand Trunk having been heard, and said that while one's sympathy was naturally diverted towards the strikers, it was only fair that the other side should be heard before judgment was rendered. He thought before blaming the Government the hon. gentleman ought to have ascertained whether the men had made any application to the Government to put the alien law in force, and said that up to this afternoon no such application had been made. With regard to the law itself, he repeated what he had said the day before, that an agreement had been come to by the commissioners, and he believed that the law had been generally suspended in the United States, although there had been some exceptions like Mr. DeBarry at Buffalo.

Sir Charles Tupper defended Mr. Robertson, and said that he had only done justice to himself and constituents.

Mr. Taylor in his remarks said he would hold the Government responsible if there were accidents. He thought the Grand Trunk should be asked to repeat if the lives of passengers were safe.

Mr. Blair's Reply.

Mr. Blair went on to say the Government did not require to be dragged on to do their duty by gentlemen on other side. It might fairly and reasonably be taken for granted, if there were any way in which they could be satisfied they could effectively interfere in that matter, that they would only be too anxious so do it. He had not received any appeal from the Grand Trunk men to interfere, and he did not know it would be possible for him to interfere at the present juncture, except he could proceed in a friendly way to say to those people: "You ought to bring this controversy to a friendly and amicable end." In concluding, he protested against members making political capital out of such a question.

The debate was continued by Messrs Montague, Ives, McCleary, A. T. Wood, Bertram, Craig, McGregor, Ingram and Logan, the latter suggesting that the Minister of Railways and Canals offer his services as mediator.

Mr. Robertson's motion to adjourn was then withdrawn.

Read a Third Time.

The bill to amend and consolidate the acts relating to the harbor commission of Quebec was read a third time and passed.

House in Committee.

The act respecting the inspection of petroleum and naphtha passed through committee.

THE YUKON SCANDALS.

THE report of Commissioner Ogilvie's investigation into the Yukon charges, presented to Parliament, was as unsatisfactory as was to be expected under the circumstances. In the first place the limiting of the scope of the enquiry to occurrences prior to August 25th last was a serious handicap to begin with, because many of the witnesses had left the country, and it is not surprising that on becoming cognizant of the limited scope of the investigation most of the prosecutors refused to go on with their charges. In fact, it looked very much like an arrangement to ward off the charges for the proving of which witnesses were at hand.

Where charges could not be denied the actions of the delinquent officials are ascribed to "mistakes," "misunderstandings," and the exigencies of the press of business—anything but official crookedness.

One man was found guilty of accepting bribes for allowing people into the office by the side door out of their turn, but the report says no one else was implicated in this irregularity. The latter statement seems nonsensical on the face of it, because officials must have stood in with the doorkeeper and attended to the business of the men admitted out of their turn, or the bribers would have secured no advantage by gaining entrance to the office.

If the report of the investigation be read by any unprejudiced person it cannot fail to convey the certainty that the object of it is rather to explain away the charges than to expose the guilt of the officials charged.

SOUTH ONTARIO.

THE disclosures of the manner in which the Reformers conducted their side of the campaign in the election of Hon. Mr. Dryden for South Onrario have been so rank as to force even the Grit organs to try and offset public indignation by entering a protest. They forward the explanation of "unwise partizans" and moralize on the impossibility of even the most careful candidates keeping track of the conduct of such individuals.

These excuses are not of a nature to satisfy any one save those extreme Liberals who are prepared to say "Amen" to any outrage providing it is perpetrated by their own side.

They might have some weight if it were not for the fact that the evidence disclosed outsiders at work in the constituency—outsiders not animated by local enthusiasm, and who would not have been there and have spent money there except as the part of an organized plan.

The fact is self-evident, and it has been disclosed on more than one occasion that the Reformers have a central and a well organized method of debauching constituencies.

Strangers who have plenty of money do not go from one riding to the other for the pleasure of the thing, or because they personally possess more cash than they know how to spend, or because they desire to kill time or because they have the interests of the Reform party so nearly at heart that they feel impelled to leave home and work in order to help the cause of purity in some section of the Dominion in which they do not possess any interest.

The fact of the matter is that while these purists make long prayers and thank providence that they are not as the wicked Tories, they in reality practice the debauching of constituencies with a skill and facility calculated to incite even the envy of Tammany Hall.

A FAIRLY GOOD DAY'S WORK

Sir Henri Joly's bill to amend the Adulteration Act passed through committe and was reported.

Is Sir Charles After Sifton?

On the motion to go into committee of supply, Sir Charles Tupper, after a few remarks, moved the following amendment:

This House is of opinion that it is required by our Parliamentary system that every branch of the public service should be represented, directly or indirectly, in the Houses of Parliament, and this House is further of the opinion that the political heads who perform their duty are themselves solely responsible for every act of administration, down to the minutest details of official routine.

This House is further of the opinion that the Ministers of the Crown, having entire control over the public departments, are bound to assume responsibility for every official act. This House is further of the opinion that Ministers of the Crown should not permit blame to be imputed to any subordinate for the manner in which the business of the country is transacted, except only in cases of personal misconduct, for which the political heads have the remedy in their own hands. If Ministers find that the permanent officers of the department do not work well under them, then it is their duty to provide a remedy for this inconvenience; but the responsibility should not be divided; it should be imposed upon those who are able to answer for themselves in the Houses of Parliament.

Sir Wilfrid Pleased.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he was both pleased and surprised to find that when his hon. friend the leader of the Opposition had a really sound proposition to make to the House he could do it in a few words. He had no fault to find with the proposition, but could not see the utility of adopting it unless the Opposition intended to live up to it. He would not, however, oppose it.

After a few remarks from Sir Hibbert Tupper, the motion was passed unanimously, and the House went into supply. After passing a few items, the House adjourned at 12.18.

DYSPEPSIA, TYRANT OF BODY AND SOUL.

The Disease of the Day and How to Cure It.

Dyspepsia though Widespread is being Slowly Stamped Out by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. They Form the Only Immediate Relief and are the Only Radical Cure.

No disease is more common than dyspepsia.

It exists in more or less severe form in nearly every man, woman and child you meet.

How many people do you know who never have a Headache?

How many people do you know who never have a Bilious attack?

How many people are there who were never rendered miserable by Heartburn, Sour Stomach, Foul Breath, or Waterbrash?

Have you any idea of the extent of Catarrh of the Stomach in this country?

Indigestion — Dyspepsia — that's what all those symptoms mean.

It may be in the case of Headache and Biliousness only temporary, but it is very miserable while it lasts.

It may mean even in those symptoms if they are frequent, that the lining of your stomach is out of order, which is Dyspepsia.

In the case of Catarrh of the Stomach it means that permanent inflammation has secured a lodgement there.

But it all comes up to the same thing—Dyspepsia.

The stomach fails to secrete the juices which digest the food.

The food ferments and makes the inflammation worse.

The blood lacks nourishment gained from food, and cannot repair the stomach.

And so it goes in a circle, and the sufferer gets worse all the time.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets digest the food.

They give the stomach a holiday.

They keep the blood fed.

The blood repairs the stomach.

The stomach recuperates and finally starts work again strong as ever.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are fifty cents a box.

All druggists sell them.

THE IDEA OF COUNT NIGRA.

The Italian Moves Amendment to Russian Proposals.

When a War Cloud Is Looming Up, and All Attempts at Conciliation Have Failed, Then Mediation or Arbitration—Those Who Are Not in the Fight May Offer Mediation at Any Stage—The Peace Conference.

The Hague, June 1.—The amendment of Count Nigra, head of the Italian delegation to the peace conference, to the Russian arbitration scheme, proposes the following article:

1. In the event of the imminence of a conflict between two or more powers, after the failure of all attempts at conciliation by means of indirect negotiations, the contending parties shall be obliged to have recourse to mediation or arbitration of cases indicated by the present act.

2. All other cases of mediation or arbitration will be recommended by the signatory powers, but will remain optional.

3. Each of the signatory powers not involved in the conflict has in all cases, even during hostilities, the right to offer the contending parties its good offices for mediation, or propose that they have recourse to the mediation of another power equally neutral, or to arbitration. This cannot be considered by either of the contending parties as an unfriendly act, even in a case where mediation or arbitration not being obligatory, it would be rejected.

Mediation Before Arbitration.

4. A demand for or offer of mediation takes precedence of a proposal of arbitration, but arbitration may or must be proposed, according to the circumstances, not only when there is no demand for or offer of mediation, but also when mediation would have been rejected or would not have led to conciliation.

5. A proposal of mediation or arbitration, until formally accepted by all the contending parties, cannot, unless there be a convention to the contrary, have the effect of interrupting or delaying impending mobilization or other preparatory measures or military operations.

6. Recourse to mediation or arbitration, in conformity with article 1, is obligatory in the cases of——

The blank after the words "cases of" is to be filled in later on.

Disarmament Committee Disagreed.

Both sections of the disarmament committee met yesterday and failed to agree with regard to the question of new inventions in armaments.

Uncle Sam's Proposal.

The drafting committee of the arbitration committee made some advance in the afternoon. The American delegates submitted their scheme, relating to an arbitration tribunal. The plan differs from the British proposal. It provides that each country shall appoint a single arbitrator to be selected by the Supreme Courts of the signatory powers. The tribunals shall have a permanent central seat and be composed of at least three judges, who shall not be natives or residents of countries belonging to the powers in disacord. The general expenses shall be shared proportionally. In the event of new facts arising within three months of a decision, the same tribunal shall have power to try again the question in dispute. Recourse to the tribunal to be optional for the signatory powers. The tribunal shall not take cognizance of any dispute until assured that the parties concerned will accept its decision. The convention shall come into force and the tribunal be established when nine powers, eight of whom shall be European or American, and four of whom shall be signatories of the declaration of Paris of 1856, shall have adhered to the convention.

Scheme of Mediation.

Apart from the above project, the Americans proposed a special scheme of mediation, providing that, in the event of a difference arising between two powers each shall choose another power to act as its second. The powers thus selected shall do all they can to reconcile the opponents. These seconding powers shall, even when war has broken out, continue their efforts with a view of ending hostilities as soon as possible.

The British Proposals.

The British arbitration proposal is as follows:

"The court shall be called 'The Permanent Court for International Arbitration.' Its object will be to facilitate arbitration to nations whenever they fail to adjust their differences by diplomatic means.

"The court may be summoned at any time, its rules and procedure being established by a convention, which shall not override any special arrangements made by the litigants. A permanent bureau shall be established at Berne, at The Hague, or at Brussels, where the archives shall be kept, and whence all communications shall be dated.

"A permanent secretary and clerk, with the necessary staff, shall reside on the spot. Their duty shall be to summon the court whenever litigants demand it.

"As regards the choice of arbitrators, each of the signatory States shall be pledged to submit to the approval of the other States the names of two persons, with the necessary qualifications. These shall be ex-officio members of the tribunal.

"In case of a vacancy owing to demise or to other causes, a successor shall be appointed in similar manner.

"An application from litigants for the summoning of the tribunal must be sent to the secretary at the central bureau, who will communicate to the litigants a list of judges from which each litigant shall select as many judges as may be provided under the arbitration compromise. They shall have the further right of nominating one or more judges whose names are not on the list.

"The tribunal thus formed shall meet at a date appointed by the litigants. The court will hold sittings in the permanent bureau, with the option of removing its sessions to any other place according to the wishes of the parties or to circumstances. Parties not signatories of the convention may nevertheless obtain the services of the court under conditions established by the convention.

"The signatory powers will establish a permanent council of administration of five members and a secretary. The council shall enact the bylaws of the bureau and shall have cognizance of all the questions relating to the bureau.

"The council shall have unlimited power for the appointment or dismissal of officials and fixing salaries, and it shall appoint a president, having a casting vote. Its resolutions are to be carried by a majority.

"A contribution from each state to the expenses of the council shall be fixed by the same from time to time by agreement with the signatories."

LOAN COMPANIES BILL.

Hon. David Mills Brought Forward a New Measure Very Much Like the Old One.

Ottawa, June 1.—In the Senate yesterday afternoon a number of bills from the Commons were received and advanced a stage, after which Hon. David Mills introduced a bill respecting loan companies. This bill, he explained, was much the same as the bill introduced last session, and gives the Governor-in-Council power to incorporate loan companies by letters patent on the application of five persons. The bill provides that there must be a provisional board of directors, three of whom must be mentioned. It provides that a company may be formed by the amalgamation of one or more corporate companies in existence, and in all cases where sufficient capital has been subscribed the company shall organize and elect or appoint a permanent board of directors. It specifies the mode in which loan companies may invest, giving them wide latitude, but providing that no one loan company shall invest in stock of another loan company. It provides that loan companies may issue preference stock, but if so the stock must be charged as debentures; and contains provisions for the amalgamation of two or more loan companies established under the act, and for an increase or decrease of the capital of the companies. There had, he said, been some improvements suggested since last session. In the bill, and the provincial authorities had objected that their rights might be interfered with by the legislation. He had altered the bill in this connection. It was a proper thing to corporate loan companies, as they were allied to the banks on the one hand, and to trade and commerce on the other. If the bill became law he thought it would lessen the necessity for individual acts of incorporation.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell asked if the proposed bill would affect companies now in existence, or only those to be incorporated.

Hon. David Mills said the bill would affect companies incorporated under it, and those already in existence which chose to come under its operation.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell pointed out that several loan companies took deposits. How would that be affected by this act? Would the claims of depositors take preference?

Hon. David Mills said that the bill did not interfere with that.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell judged from what the Minister had said that it was provided in the bill for the amalgamation of several companies without their coming to Parliament. This he believed was a power claimed by the provinces. No doubt the Government had considered the question well. The bill was read a first time.

Hon. David Mills asked that the bill to amend the criminal code—Mr. Charlton's bill—be allowed to stand, as he expected to introduce a bill to cover that point. The two bills would be considered together.

The Dowling divorce bill was read a third time.

A Fair Statement.

We do not believe it is fair to find fault with doctors because they don't know much. Nobody knows much.—Atchison Globe.

The cut is after an old painting of a man gambling with Death with his life as a stake. Behind the man stands his good angel striving to save him.

This game with life as the stake is the every-day game of men and women. Behind the player stands the good angel Nature, striving to preserve the life. Even when the game is almost in Death's hands, the man who turns to Nature and lets her help him may yet save himself. Medical science knows this, and its highest authorities affirm that the utmost medical skill can do is to help Nature.

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of this fundamental scientific truth. "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body building, tissue repairing, muscle making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the strength to throw off diseases of the lungs, heal the sick stomach, re-establish the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purify and enrich the blood, and nourish the nerves.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better for him; it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

In a letter received from A. D. Weller, Esq., of Pensacola, Escambia Co., Fla. (Box 544), he states: "I have, since receiving your diagnosis of my case as stomach trouble and liver complaint, taken eight bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and must say that I am transformed from a walking shadow (as my friends called me), to perfect health. I value your remedies very highly and take pleasure in recommending them to any and all who suffer as I did. Four months ago I did not think to be in shape to assist our 'Uncle Samuel' in case of hostilities, but thanks to you, I am now ready for the Don's!"

Dead Men's Bones.

The most grewsome apartment in America is probably the demonstrator's room in the Flower hospital in New York, with its fantastic decorations of dead men's bones.

The name of the room is spelled above the door in letters made of finger bones. Upon the wall within appear in the same grewsome lettering the names of Dr. Howard S. Neilson and Dr. Northway Meyer, demonstrators. Besides these legends sits a grinning human skull.

Crossing and recrossing the room strings of bones interlace. Ribs alternate with the slender bones of fingers and toes. Up and down the walls, like ghastly white serpents, crawl coils of vertebræ. Arm and leg bones with highly polished surfaces are hung on the cupboard doors.

Everywhere the eye turns in this curious charnel house symbols of mortality start into relief. But it is on the large table against the south wall that death veritably sits enthroned. In the middle, heaped into a mound, bones from all parts of the human frame are surmounted by a skull. Here a hand, there a crippled foot, a cranium hollowed into a drinking cup—oddities of all grisly shapes surround the mound.

In a chair to the right sits a skeleton in leisurely attitude, leaning one arm upon the table as he watches the skeletons over which the sunlight dances.

The Sacking of the Tuileries, 1848.

The sight that presented itself was the strangest I have ever seen and has remained in my memory almost as vividly as if it were yesterday. The magnificent apartments of the palace were soon filled with as strange a set of ruffians as you could meet anywhere. It seemed as if they were all mad or drunk, and yet they were as jolly as sandboys. They seemed positively to revel in destruction and to yell with delight as they smashed and tore everything to pieces that they came across. There was scarcely a picture that was not cut into ribbons, and ornaments, however costly, were thrown down and broken to atoms.

While I was standing in one of the grand apartments, looking on in wonder, a little man, with a sword almost as big as himself, stood in front of a magnificent mirror that reached from the floor to the ceiling. He surveyed it for a moment, and then, as though he were about to storm a town single handed, went deliberately up to it and with one blow of his great cavalry blade shivered it to pieces. As they fell at his feet he put on a grand air and said "La!" as if this was one of the greatest deeds he had ever accomplished and the proudest moment of his life.—"Sketches From Memory," G. A. Storey.

A Vivid Description.

A short sighted and deaf old gentleman who was at an entertainment where a professor performed on a big bass viol, thus described the scene: "The professor carried on to the platform a gigantic beetle attached to the end of a sort of lamppost. He leaned over and fondly embraced it, tickling its back violently with a long comb.

"The spectators seemed much delighted at this display of scientific affection. The beetle was apparently quite unmoved. Then the professor gave a capital imitation of the drunken man and the lamppost. He swayed rapidly up and down, clutching quickly at all points.

"Sometimes his fingers quivered passionately upon one spot, like an ill tempered man struggling with an obstinate pair of braces. Sometimes he rested momentarily, as one rests after a contest with a stiff white tie.

"Finally, he gave a last convulsive tickle to the huge beetle, picked himself up from the lamppost and carried off the unresisting insect. The audience applauded vigorously."

IN "ROBESPIERRE."

SIR HENRY IRVING IN THE FINAL SCENE OF SARDOU'S NEW PLAY.

Vivid Description of This Marvellous Scene From the Pen of London's Great Theatrical Critic—Why He Did Not Begin at the Beginning of the Play in Writing of It.

SIR HENRY IRVING IN THE FINAL SCENE OF "ROBESPIERRE."

FINAL SCENE OF "ROBESPIERRE."

In the drawing here presented is seen Sir Henry Irving as he appears in the final and culminating scene of Sardou's new play, "Robespierre," now running at the Globe Theatre in London. The drawing is a copy of an excellent illustration in The London Daily Graphic which has just arrived in Canada. This is the scene in which the Sea-green Incorruptible sees the end of all his greatness. It is the scene in which the passions of the Assembly convert the Convention into a den of beasts, for no beast can be as bestial as man when his humor runs that way. The critic of The Pall Mall Gazette, in his consideration of the play and of Sir Henry's work, says: "A triumph of stage management, a seething, howling mob of madmen—mad with the passions of terror and revenge, yet, pictorially considered, orderly and well drilled to the last degree; it is a picture of the Convention before its final purification as startling and vivid as though the cinematograph and phonograph had been combined to produce it. The whole attention is centered on the political passions so ruthlessly displayed, on the wretched man's struggles to get into the tribune, on his enemies fighting to keep him out of it, on the passionate rhetoric of Tallien." The Pall Mall critic, while high in his praise of the play in some respects, points out certain weak places. He does not regard "Robespierre" as Sardou's masterpiece, as does Clement Scott. Indeed, The Pall Mall man says bluntly that the play will not confer new professional glory on anyone connected with it. But even this cool and self-possessed critic is moved with the great scene at the end of the play that is the subject of the illustration.

Clement Scott's criticism, which was cabled to Canada, spoke of this scene in terms of the highest commendation. As to its vividness and realism there seems to be but one opinion among the hypercritical play reviewers of London. That is well set forth in Clement Scott's vivid description of the marvellous scene:

"You will ask me to begin at the beginning. I cannot do so. I must begin at the end, for it is the very last scene of all—the wild tumult of the Convention, the huge amphitheatre filled to its utmost with a roaring, seething, gesticulating crowd of men and women, half mad, half beasts; the feeble tinkling of the presidential bell; the great, coarse, blustering voices of orator after orator, yelling, shouting and screaming and fighting in the tribune, and dooming to the scaffold the men who had incarnadined it with human blood; and as a contrast—for what is any drama in the wide world without contrast?—in the midst of this dirty, unwashed, blasphemous crew, the pale, livid face of the dandy despot, the green monster, the man incorruptible, the man in the knee breeches, silk stockings and pale blue coat, with the ghastly terror of death upon his countenance, the murderer of Danton and thousands of his countrymen—Robespierre. I have been a playgoer, man and boy, for over 50 years. I was at the Lyceum last night. My Lyceum record alone embraces the period from 1848, in the days of Mme. Vestris, down to 1899, the triumphant hour of Henry Irving, and I say to myself never have I seen on any stage in the world anything to equal this pulsing, astonishing and wonderful last act of 'Robespierre,' never, never."

This triumphal return of Henry Irving to the stage left logge a flood of recollection, one of which is worth recalling at some length. It was in 1870, says Clement Scott, in The Pall Mall Gazette, that the Lyceum stronghold, commanded by Colonel Bateman, was on the point of capitulating, but Henry Irving managed to "hold the fort." As good luck would have it, he had in his pocket a version of a play that had made some success at an outlying theatre in Paris. It was called "Le Juif Polonais." An amiable and eccentric solicitor, Leopold Lewis, had got hold of the play and translated it for Henry Irving. He named it the "Polish Jew," but at the clever suggestion of Irving he slightly altered the motive of the play to suit the weirdness and marked psychology that were ever part and parcel of Irving's artistic nature. He had just made an enormous hit by reciting in public with tragic intensity Hood's poem, "The Dream of Eugene Aram." He saw another Eugene Aram in Mathias of "The Bells." The original creator, Talien, played the part as a simple unimaginative bourgeois peasant—as Coquelin did afterward—but Irving saw in Mathias a higher development of character, and a finer conception of a conscience-haunted man. By one of those strange coincidences so common in the theatrical world another author had got hold of the same play and at the same hour. This was Frank Burnard. He called his version "Paul Zegars," and it was produced by Charles Harcourt at the Alfred, or Marylebone, Theatre a few nights in advance of "The Bells." It created very little impression, but Irving in "The Bells" took the town by storm. The house was small when the play was produced, but it soon drew all London. As old Oxberry remarked when Edmund Kean electrified a thin house with his Shylock, "How the devil so few of them kicked up such a row was marvellous."

SIR HENRY IRVING.

"Corpse Coins."

"Corpse coins" are treasured in the north of England. They are the coins that have lain over the eyes of their dead. By this means infection has been spread, but superstition causes the custom to continue. A poor collier or peasant would never think of doing anything important unless he had on his person coins that have been upon the eyes of his dead relatives.

MRS. W. C. WHITNEY DEAD.

Accident on the Hunting Field Defeats the Best Efforts of Physicians, Love and Wealth.

Mrs. William C. Whitney died on the 6th of May at her home, Wheatley Hills, L.I.

Mrs. Whitney's death was due to an accident which befell her at Aikens, S.C., on February 21, 1896. She was riding to the hounds and in passing beneath a bridge was struck on the head by a rafter. This resulted in the dislocation of the vertebræ, practically a broken neck. Paralysis followed, and although hope has been entertained that she would recover she has been in a dangerous condition since the accident.

In the spring Mrs. Whitney was removed to her Long Island home in a car specially constructed to provide for her case. Mr. Whitney spared no expense to make his invalid wife as comfortable as possible. He gave her yachting trips, he gave entertainments at his home and he laid out a race track and steeplechase in front of her window.

And, just as the world was opening up again for her with all its light and life and merriment, then she died; there really had been no rational ground for hope from the first. The doctors demonstrated that one may exist in living for a time with a broken neck and a husband had shown that a devoted love can put some color of life even into a living death. But that was all the love, the devotion and millions could do.

Mrs. Whitney was Edith, the daughter of Dr. William May, the well-known New York physician. As a girl she won the heart of Captain Arthur Randolph, an officer in the British army, who married her. He resigned his commission to do it. Two pretty children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Randolph. The Captain died about ten years ago in Canada. It was during her widowhood that the former Secretary of the United States Navy met Mrs. Randolph. She was then a sweet young widow—she was only 38 at her death—and Mr. Whitney's heart was caught in the sunny tangle of her golden hair. After their marriage it was believed that Mrs. Whitney would undoubtedly replace Mrs. Astor as the leader of New York society. This she probably had done had she not met with her fatal accident.

Two Little Stories.

Here are two stories from Sir M. E. Grant-Duff's diary. The first records the saying of Sir F. Doyle, when Lord Houghton's death was rumored, that "his exit is the result of too many entrees."

The second, concerning a definition which Gladstone gave of a deputation, is also given in the diary. It is "a noun of numbers signifying many, but not signifying much."

Birds' Nests.

Some Australian birds lay their eggs in black sand, as if aware of its superior power of absorbing heat; others select the neighborhood of hot volcanic springs, whose warmth plays an important part in the hatching.

The mound builders collect heaps of earth and leaves as much as 18 feet high and 80 feet in diameter, and in this hotbed their eggs are hatched.

A Lock of His Hair.

A venerable, white haired clergyman recently preached in the parish of a friend. He had hardly got back to the vicarage from the church when the doorbell rang and a charming girl of 18 asked to see him. He received her. They talked about the sermon and other things until finally she asked diffidently:

"Oh, won't you please give me a lock of your hair?"

"Certainly, my child," said the old gentleman, flattered at the request. "I'll send it to you tomorrow," and he did.

On his return to his own home he had five more requests of the same kind, and he proudly boasted to his wife that he was glad to see that he had not yet lost his power to please. All went well until his wife received this note:

"Dear Mrs. ——, won't you please ask your husband to send me just a little lock of his hair? We have all been taking lessons in making hair flowers. So many of the other girls asked him—and he sent it to them—that I thought I would rather ask you to get it for me. Won't you please do this for me? It is so hard to get white hair for lilies of the valley."

This was a terrible blow, and the less now said about locks of hair in that old gentleman's presence the better.

Marksmen in Battle.

The story of what marksmen can do in battle is written in red letters all over the history of war, remarks the Boston Herald. The famous English archers whose cloth yard shafts won so many fights at desperate odds against the mail clad knights of France, the embattled farmers whose deadly aim was so fatal on the Lexington road and the slopes of Bunker Hill, the grim slaughter which broke Pakenham's veteran regiments at New Orleans—all are proofs in point. Later evidence of the value of straight shooting is afforded by that strange war in which the Dutch Boers won the semi-independence which they now enjoy.

In this contest there was on one side a burgher force with slight pretensions to discipline, and none at all to drill, and on the other side a British force, hardened in battle and trained to the perfection of soldiership, yet the Boers were victorious in every encounter on the field. What is the explanation? Why, simply this: The Boers were splendid marksmen, who knew how to make every shot tell, while the British were, comparatively speaking, mere wasters of ammunition of the soldierly pattern.

A Good Scotch Story.

In Lanarkshire there lived 'a sma', sma' laird named Hamilton, who was noted for his eccentricity. On one occasion a neighbor waited on him and requested his name as an accommodation to a bit bill for £30, at three months' date, which led to the following characteristic and truly Scottish colloquy:

"Na, na, I canna do that."

"What for no, laird? Ye hae dune the same thing for ithers."

"Aye, aye, Tammas, but there's wheels within wheels ye ken naething about. I canna do't."

"It's a sma' affair to refuse me, laird."

"Weel, ye see, Tammas, if I was to pit my name tell't, ye wad get the siller frae the bank, and when the time came round ye wadna be ready and I wud hae to pay't. Sae then ye and I wad quarrel. Sae we mae just as weel quarrel the no as lang's the siller's in ma pouch."—Stray Stories.

THE WORK OF THE MISSIONS

Mrs. Platt, Branch President, was neatly introduced by Mrs. Shorey and delivered an address chiefly on branch work. She had attended several district meetings in this locality within the past week or so and gave short accounts of these. At Pickering the feature was that the meeting was presided over by a mere girl. At Hampton, where the Bowmanville district meeting was held, there was every evidence of good work having been accomplished. She was also present at meetings at Moira, Madoc district, Havelock and Cannington. She was at Lindsay on Tuesday and came on to Peterborough. The distinguished feature of the meeting at Peterborough appeared to be the free, intelligent and interesting discussion. Mrs. Platt went on to describe the great value and the need of prayer in connection with the work and closed her address by answering a number of questions that was sent in.

After a closing prayer the convention adjourned.

The names of Mrs. Wand and Mrs. Matchett, delegates from the Mark-st. st. church, were omitted from the list yesterday.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters'; and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts. a bottle, every bottle guaranteed. PETERBOROUGH CENTRAL.

General Business Considered at a Directors' Meeting.

The Directors of the Peterborough Central Exhibition met in the Town Council Chamber, Wednesday afternoon, those present being G W Fitzgerald, president, in the chair, and Messrs George E Elliott, R Vance, J Davidson, H C Garbutt and Jas Baptie.

After the minutes of last meeting had been adopted, the question of the date of the annual exhibition was considered. It was decided to change the date and hold the exhibition this year on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 26th, 27th and 28th of September. This change was considered to be advisable on account of the anticipated late harvest.

Mr. Terrell, secretary of the Peterborough Kennel Club, urged the advisability of holding a dog show as one of the attractions. The Board decided to do so, and the Kennel Club are to take the responsibility of making it a success.

The prize list of the previous year was accepted with the exception of an exhibitor showing two ewes instead of one.

The committee on the annual picnic interviewed Mr H Calcutt, when it was decided to hold the annual farmers' picnic at Jubilee Point, on Thursday, 15th of June.

The Directors are determined to make the show of 1899 the most successful on record, and no pains will be spared to accomplish that end.

Close Season May be Changed for Peterborough Lakes.

Toronto Telegram:—It is likely that the close season for bass and maskinonge in Stony lake and the lakes in the north of Peterborough county will be changed. The Cottagers' Association of Stony lake have for some time been asking that the close season be lengthened. At present the close season is from April 15th to June 15th. The Cottagers' Association have suggested that the close season be from December 1st to June 15th. Recently bass and maskinonge have been getting scarce, and those living near the lake say it is because Indians and others build huts over the fish beds in the winter and fish as long as the ice is strong enough to hold them. They ship loads away during the winter. By making the close season commence on December 1st this sort of fishing can be stopped. The inspector of the division is in accord with the suggestion. Mr Bastedo, of the Ontario Fisheries Department, thinks it would prevent the fishing out of the lakes, and there is every likelihood of the law being changed as suggested.

ROADS OF ONTARIO.

The Third Report of A. W. Campbell, the Roads Instructor.

The third annual report of the Provincial Instructor in road-making has just been issued. It contains considerable information. Mr Campbell says that progress is being made in building better roads of the country. The poor condition of the country roads is responsible for the business done by the railways. The feeling for better roads is increasing and the Provincial Inspector looks for great improvement. He suggests a system of state aid.

SUMMER MILLINERY OPENING.

A Despatch was Wrong.

A despatch was sent out from Lindsay Tuesday to the effect that a number of bridge builders had been dismissed there for refusing to take the places of strikers. Mr Sandy, G T R agent, states that this is wrong, that the men were laid off because there was no work for them and that some of them have been re-engaged.

The Tent Caterpillar.

Reports are coming in daily to the Ontario Government about the tent caterpillar. It seems that the pests are thick in all parts of the province. People ask what is to be done with them. Last year in some places the tent caterpillar was so thick that it was impossible to walk on the sidewalks under trees without crushing them. Various experiments are being made to discover exterminators.

THE WORK OF THE MISSIONS

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Proceedings at the Afternoon and Evening Sessions—Papers on Various Topics—Several Addresses in the Evening—Greetings from Societies—Free and Intelligent Discussion.

The annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was continued at Charlotte-st. church Wednesday afternoon and evening. Both sessions were interesting. Mrs. Shorey presided. The afternoon was opened with devotional exercises, after which the roll call of delegates took place, showing a fair attendance. An excellent paper "How to conduct Watch Tower" was read by a Pontypool delegate and was listened to with interest.

Miss Wasson, of Warsaw, read an essay on "Hindrances in carrying on auxiliary work." It was of a practical and helpful character. Discussion took place, remarks being made by Mesdames Sherin, Wand, Allum and Kendry.

"Proportionate and systematic giving" was the title of a paper read by Miss Udy, one of the Bridgenorth delegates. This important topic evoked an interesting discussion, taken part in by Mrs. Platt, Mrs. Jory, Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Dr. Hunter and Mrs. Matchett.

On motion of Mrs. Kendry, seconded by Mrs. Lightfoot, Mrs. Yelland, Miss Cade and Mrs. Wood were appointed a Courtesy committee.

Miss Udy rendered a very acceptable vocal solo "Never Alone."

Mrs. J. Dawson, Bailliebord, read a clever paper on "How to get members of auxiliaries interested." It contained a number of valuable suggestions. The resulting discussion was taken part in by Mrs. Platt, Mrs. Sherin and Mrs. Meharry.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening session was largely attended, the audience being almost altogether composed of ladies. The church choir was present and its music was much appreciated. Besides the hymns an anthem and a vocal quartette were rendered during the evening.

The meeting opened with a hymn followed by the reading of the minutes.

An address of welcome was then made by Mrs. Lightfoot, the secretary. On behalf of Charlotte-st. church she extended cordial greetings to all. She felt that these meetings are looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure and are interesting socially. But they are especially so because they are in the cause of missions, with which all present were identified. Both home and foreign missions are deeply interesting but China attracts the most notice. There will be no rest in the Church militant until the earth is made the Kingdom of God. She closed with words of welcome.

Mrs. Sherin, of Lakefield, replied on behalf of the visitors. She returned thanks for the kind words of the last speaker. Christian courtesy is always welcome. Although some present came from large societies there were other delegates from small ones and to these it was a great encouragement to assemble together in the work. In mission work God draws out the best in the human soul. All present must have felt the good of being active members of the missionary societies. Their reward would not be according to the largeness of the result but according to the use made of the means placed at the disposal of each. She urged all women to do what they could for the missions either by money or goods or by their moral support and encouragement.

The choir rendered the anthem "The King of Love My Sherherd is," Miss Stevens taking the solo.

Mrs. Morrow, a returned missionary who has spent three or four years in the Chinese Girls' Home in British Columbia, next gave an address. She described picturesquely the Chinese characters, dealing chiefly with their superstitions. They are great believers in luck and have strange ideas about the influences of food. The girls brought to the home are often so superstitious that they will almost starve themselves to death and will refuse all medicine. Ancestor worship is also a terrible superstition among these people. Their condition is such as to call for pity from all and Mrs. Morrow made a strong appeal for sympathy and assistance for them. The field affords ample opportunity for work.

After a quartette "Guard whilst I sleep," had been sung Mrs. Dr. Hunter extended to the meeting the greetings of the Women's Missionary Society of Murray-st. Baptist church. She made a few ramarks. All were united in working for the same end. The feeling was, in the words of the apostle "I am with you in spirit." This was the message of Murray-st. church. There appeared to be an earnest desire among all to help on the mission cause.

Mrs. McPherson extended greetings on behalf of the women of St. Paul's church. She emphasized the spirit of unity that marked the work. She had been much pleased with the papers, discussions and suggestions. She expressed Christian love, sympathy and co-operation.

CALDER WILL FIGHT S. O.

Mass Meeting of Conservatives to Be Held on June 10 at Whitby to Choose a Candidate.

Whitby, June 1.—A largely-attended meeting of the Liberal-Conservative executive of South Ontario was held here yesterday. Representatives of every section from the riding were present. It was decided to hold a mass meeting on June 10 at 2 p.m. here to nominate a candidate to oppose the Government's nominee. It is understood that Mr. Calder will accept the nomination if it is offered to him.

DEBARRY SAYS IT'S NOT SO.

He Denies Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Alien Labor Law Statement.

Buffalo, N.Y., June 1.—Inspector DeBarry was asked yesterday concerning the rumors in Canada that the alien labor law has been suspended. He stated most emphatically that the law was still in force, and that so far as he knew there had been no thought of suspending it. "I have heard the rumor from several sources," he said, "but there is not the slightest truth in it. The law has not been suspended. It could not be suspended except by a two-thirds vote of both Houses of Congress and the signature of the President. I do not know that there has been any talk of such a move in the country, and presume that the rumor started from the statement of some one in Canada, who might be interested in getting laborers over here to work. I understand from the labor people of this city that a bill is now being prepared, and will be sent to Congressman Alexander for introduction next session, making even more stringent the alien contract labor law."

THE DUST OF DAWSON.

More Evidence of a Wonderful Output—Waiting for the First Steamers.

Seattle, Wash., June 1.—Advices from Dawson, dated April 29th, state that there are evidences of the most wonderful output recorded. Five thousand men are in waiting at Dawson to take the first boats up the river. Half of them are miners, who have from $1,000 to $50,000 each in dust. The White Pass & Yukon Railroad Company has issued bills of lading on more than a million dollars' worth of gold that is to come out on one of the first river steamers.

There is every indication that the river from Dawson to White Horse Rapids is now open. The lakes will be free from ice by June 4th. Fully 2,000 people and thousands of tons of freight are at Lake Bennett waiting for the first steamers.

A Famous House and Lot.

An article entitled "Historic Homes In Washington," by Catherine Cavanagh, in Munsey's, gives an interesting narrative of the home once occupied by James G. Blaine. The lot on which it stood once belonged to Henry Clay, who won it at a game of cards, at which he was always very lucky. On his wife being asked if her husband's gambling did not make her anxious, she answered: "Why should I worry? Henry generally wins." After keeping the lot a short time he swapped it for a Maltese jackass that Commodore Rodgers brought home from a Mediterranean cruise. He built the house. In it once lived James K. Paulding, secretary of the navy under Van Buren. Secretary Seward bought it, and was living in it when his assassination on the night of Lincoln's murder was attempted. Secretary of War Belknap afterward resided there, and finally Mr. Blaine.

Bees and Their Baskets.

Every bee carries his market basket round his hind legs. Any one examining the body of a bee through a microscope will observe that on the hind legs of the creature there is a fringe of stiff hairs on the surface, the hairs approaching each other at the tips, so as to form a sort of cage. This is the bee's basket, and into it, after a successful journey, he will cram enough pollen to last him for two or three days.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

brightness—the living death, so full of anguish. Her eyes grew dim with terror; she held out her tender hands.

"Never again, Lyster," she said. "You must never leave me again."

He kissed the quivering lips—he kissed the tears from her eyes and vowed that, come what might, he would never leave her again.

She was very quiet under the great daze of her happiness. It seemed too good to be true. This morning a dark, funeral pall over the earth and sky—this morning a pale face and heavy heart, a chill, cold desolation and a longing for death. Now every pulse and nerve quivered with happiness; the healthy life-blood flushed her face—it was another and fairer world. Heaven pardon the man who sat by her side, and remorselessly urged her to her doom!

Still she would make no promise. The glamour of love was strong upon her—too strong for the voice of duty to be heard—yet she would not promise.

He asked her to meet him there on the day following; not in the morning, but in the evening, when the gloaming came, if she could steal from home. And then, when it was time to go, he covered with passionate kisses the fair, trusting face a better man would have held sacred.

And those caresses were like strong wine to her. She walked home through the park with light, dancing footsteps, her heart warm with the thought that he was near. When Irene saw her enter the hall, she looked at her in sheer amaze. The bright face, the beaming eyes, the glorious mass of tangled hair, the lips rippling over with smiles. Had Irene been a suspicious woman she might have saved much future misery; but she attributed the change entirely to the good effects of air and exercise.

The squire was delighted. Violet, less trusting, felt puzzled.

"She will be all right in time," said the master of Glynn. "Why, she looks like herself again!"

Irene listened and agreed, vowing to herself if Sybil once grew well again, she would watch her unceasingly.

When dinner was over, the squire asked her to sing, and she went to the piano. There, with the first notes of her song, it came to her with a sudden rush she was deceiving these dear ones, who loved her so well; that she must leave them if she wanted to be happy; that her father, had he known the truth, would have wept rather than have laughed. For the first time in her life, she had a secret, and, despite the kisses that still burned on her lips, she knew it was a shameful secret.

In one rush of sorrow, all these thoughts came to her. The clear voice faltered, the lips grew white, a sudden darkness came over her eyes. She rose, and stretched out her hands with a great cry, then fell, as one stricken with death, upon the ground.

Loving hands raised her; and while she lay unconscious, the three spoke, with bated breath, and wondered what had made her ill.

"We have deceived ourselves," said Irene, quietly. "She has never been really better, papa. We must take her away from here. She is dying by inches—my poor Sybil! Let us take her abroad, papa. She may recover then."

"We will start the day after to-morrow," cried the squire, who was dreadfully alarmed.

Then the violet eyes opened; and the girl, looking up, tried to smile. But when her father bent over her, and would have touched the lips where Lyster Ayrton's kisses still burned, she shrunk back, shuddering, from him, and hid her face in her hands.

"Leave her to me," said Irene; "she is worn out and tired."

He bade her good-night. Oh, dear Heaven; had he known what the next night would bring! He laid his hands on her bowed head, and blessed her: but the squire could not forget that gesture. What had he done that his darling should shrink away from him?

Before she left the room, he came back to her.

"Do you know what we are going to do with you, Sybil?" he asked. "Irene proposes that we go abroad at once, and I think it will be the wisest thing to do."

She almost sickened with terror. She must see him again! they should not take her anywhere without that.

The squire had expected a pleasant smile, but the face she raised to his had in it nothing but despair.

"Abroad," he repeated; "do you hear that, my darling? We will start the day after to-morrow. Now cheer up: a week in Paris cures everything. Let me see one smile before you go."

She smiled, but he could better have borne her tears; then, with Irene, she left the drawing-room, and went up to her own chamber.

The squire detained Violet and Irene late that night; he was planning their journey, arranging where to stop, what to see, what Sybil would like; everything must give place to Sybil.

Long after midnight sounded, Irene Jocelyn stood by the window of her room, thinking of her sister. She could not understand. It was certainly happiness that brightened her face when she came in from the park.

Like the squire, Miss Jocelyn had not the least fear of seeing Captain Ayrton again; they both believed that, disappointed over money, he had left Sybil, and would never care to see her again. The idea of his being near, and of her meeting him, never struck these honorable-minded people.

"I will tell her all about it," said Miss Jocelyn; "it will help her to bear her own sorrow."

She went to Sybil's room; it was long past midnight—deep silence reigned over the castle, yet she sat where Irene left her three hours ago—her eyes bright with excitement, her face full of thought.

The elder sister entered with quiet steps. She went up to the younger woman, and half kneeling, half sitting by her, told why she had come.

"There is something about your face to-night," she said; "that I can not understand; perhaps you think your trial greater than you can bear. I have come to tell you my sorrows, little sister, so that you may see others have to suffer and live on. Your trial is no greater than mine was, years ago, when you were a child."

Her object was gained. Sybil looked earnestly at her, roused out of herself by her sister's words.

"You!" she cried. "Did you ever love any one, Irene?"

"Yes," was the calm reply; "better than I loved my life. Yet I sacrificed love to duty. I will tell you my story, Sybil, if you will listen to it."

CHAPTER XV.

"HER SISTER'S SACRIFICE WAS IN VAIN."

"It is neither a long nor a tragical story," said Irene. "Ten years ago you were a little child only just seven, and I was in the first bloom of girlhood; not beautiful—all the beauty and grace were your dower, my sweet Sybil; but my face had the charm of youth. We had neighbors then living at Wood Grange; it is closed and solitary now; but in the time of my youth, Mr. and Mrs. Ryder lived there with their only son, my lover, Alan.

"They were wealthy people, belonging to a good old family. The father, Frank Ryder, had made his fortune in India, and his property all lay there.

"Ah! Sybil, if I could paint Alan for you! So frank, so fearless, so fond of me! As I speak to you the years fall from me and I see again the bright blue eyes and the careless hair, the boniest and kindest face that ever smiled on me.

"I knew he loved me long before he said so. Few words passed between us, but my heart went with them to him, and it has never come back to me. We were engaged. Ah! darling I know what happiness is; the sky has been flushed with a golden dawn for me as well as for you.

"We were engaged for two whole years, without much thought of marriage, we were both so young. Then old Mr. Ryder died, and Alan was obliged to go to India to look after the property. There had been some heavy losses, the overseer left in charge proved false to his trust, and when Alan spoke of going we knew he could not return for many years.

"Now, listen, Sybil. Alan came and asked me to go with him. My father was willing, and I loved him with all my heart. Yet I did not go; and oh! my darling, it was for your sake—all for you. My mother left you to me when she lay dying to be my charge. She whispered to me that when we met in heaven she should ask me for her little child; and those solemn words never left my ears.

"You loved me very much then; I was sister and mother to you, both in one. More than that, I was afraid for you; you were so pretty and imperious—so charming and wilful! Our dear father spoiled you, Sybil; and when Alan asked me to go to India with him, I should have gone, but I was afraid to leave you. You were my charge; I had to answer for you; and it seemed to me more my duty to stay and watch over you than to go to India as the wife of the man I loved.

"Little sister, I gave him up for you; my heart was torn with sorrow. I sent him from me, and remained with you. Nay, do not cry; the pain is all over now; but, Sybil, do not let my sacrifice be in vain. For the memory of what I did then; by the memory of my long, constant love; by the thought of that time when I must tell our mother what has become of her child, send this unworthy love and unworthy sorrow from you."

The white arms were clasped round her, the drooping head was laid upon her faithful breast, and the loving appeal was not made in vain.

USES BRUSH AS WELL AS CLUB.

Leeds Policeman Among the Art Exhibitors at London Academy.

It does not fall to the lot of every policeman to have a picture painted by his own hand "hung" in the exhibition of the Royal Academy of London, but such a man is P. C. Jones of the Leeds (England) police force. The announcement has just been made that Mr. Jones has been successful in getting a favorable decision from the jury of critics who accept or reject paintings. He is a policeman with a decided talent for the brush, and there is no doubt that the jury was in no wise influenced by the fact that the artist was a "bobby." The painting went through on its merits.

A Very Smart Lad.

A lad sent to London as an apprentice took a bedroom in the same house as several medical students—who, as usual, were anxious to play a joke of some kind on the "green 'un." For this purpose they put a fine human skeleton into his bed one night with an idea of frightening the youngster, and waited at a distance to see how things went after the lad had retired, expecting every minute to hear a yell or call for assistance.

After waiting patiently for more than an hour they went to the boy's room, and found him, quite unconcerned, sitting on the side of his bed eating a fine supper. As he didn't seem at all upset the leader of the jokers asked him if he hadn't seen a skeleton in his bed.

"Oh, yes!" responded the ought-to-have-been victim, "and I took it to the surgery along the road, and the doctor gave me 40 shillings for it, and I am having a bust-up with some of the money."

DAINTY TRIFLES.

An odd mirror for the dressing table is framed in silver and supported on polished stag horns.

Fresh water pearls figure largely and effectively in belt clasps. The central ornament of pearl is framed in various ways, but perhaps most strikingly in richly shaded gold.

An aigret to be commended and admired consists of finely drawn silver wire thickly set with rhodolites. This being mounted upon a gold wire spring vibrator, sparkles with every movement of the body.

The new gold and silver alloy has a fine manifestation in sleeve links set, as are the pins, with small rhodolites, olivines, spinels or pearls. With the white shirt waists of summer or any other dainty toilet few things could be prettier.—Jewelers' Circular.

PEN AND BRUSH.

Rudyard Kipling's favorite headgear is a golf cap.

Hall Caine says he is laying up for himself a stupid old age, as he plays no games, cards, chess or does anything beyond walking and riding.

Toulouse-Lautrec, the poster artist, has gone mad and is now in an insane asylum, according to The Pall Mall Gazette. He is a brother of the Russian adventurer who has repeatedly got into trouble with the New York police.

William Dean Howells, the novelist, goes to his desk at 10 o'clock every morning and works uninterruptedly until 1 in the afternoon. He is not afraid of "giving out," but maintains that as one grows older "life widens and deepens."

Effects Were Wonderful.

"I had been troubled for years with pains in my sides and kidneys and had aches in all parts of my body, owing to stomach and liver troubles. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and its effects were wonderful. In a short time I was entirely cured." Mrs. Francke, 209 Ossington Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

Hood's Pills are non-irritating and the only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

MANAU DEFENDS DREYFUS.

Declares His Belief That Devil's Island Prisoner Is a Martyr.

Paris, June 1.—The surroundings of the Palace of Justice were almost deserted yesterday when the Court of Cassation resumed hearing the arguments in the application for a revision of the Dreyfus trial.

The Procurator-General's analysis of the secret documents was very close, and he wound up with an emphatic declaration that there was nothing in the secret dossier to incriminate Dreyfus, saying: "We do not understand why there was any such delay in submitting them to investigation." This statement caused a sensation. Continuing, M. Manau remarked: "Of the three secret documents by which M. Cavaignac, formerly Minister of War, sought to justify the condemnation, two were forgeries, and the third did not apply to Dreyfus."

This declaration, uttered with impressive solemnity, had an immense effect upon the audience. In conclusion, M. Manau said: "We assert that several new facts exist of such a nature as to prove Dreyfus' innocence. Therefore, may it please the court to quash the judgment of Dec. 22, 1894, and send Dreyfus, as a defendant, before such court-martial as the court may decide." This statement caused applause, which the president suppressed by ordering the court to be cleared. Later the court adjourned.

Deroulede and Habert Acquitted.

Paris, June 1.—MM. Deroulede and Marcel-Habert, who have been on trial before the Assize Court here on the charge of inciting soldiers to insubordination in connection with the election of President Loubet, were acquitted yesterday.

SEVERE FIGHTING.

Zamboanga, on Mindanao Island, Bombarded and Ruined.

New York, June 1.—A special to The Journal and Advertiser from London says: A special despatch from Labuan announces that severe fighting is reported between Americans and Filipinos on the island of Mindanao. The principal city on the island, Zamboango, has been bombarded and burned and is in ruins.

The same despatch reports trouble in Sulu. The Americans have blockaded the port. A British steamer was denied admission and was escorted seaward by the United States gunboat Castine.

First News of Gilmore.

Washington, June 1.—The following despatch, received by the Navy Department, is the first direct news of Lieut. Gilmore that has been received for over a week. It is taken by the department as a hopeful indication of his situation:

Manila, May 31.—To Secretary Navy, Washington: Escaped Spanish prisoner reports seeing Gilmore and some sailors well. Gilmore allowed horse. (Sgd.) Barker.

U. S. OFFICERS CAPTURED.

They Were Out on a Pleasure Sail and the Filipinos Took Them.

Manila, June 1.—Details regarding the capture by Filipinos of two officers of the United States hospital ship Relief yesterday have just been obtained. The Relief lies in the harbor in front of this city. Third Officer Fred. Heppy and Assistant Engineer Charles Blandford rigged a sail on one of the ship's boats and went sailing along the shore, on the south, opposite the insurgent lines. The boat became becalmed near the shore and some native canoes with Filipinos on board put out and captured the two men, who were unarmed, and took possession of the boat. The U. S. turret ship Monadnock quickly sent a boat with a landing party ashore, under cover of her guns and shelled the shore briskly. The natives, however, rushed the prisoners into the woods before the Monadnock's boat reached land. Persons on board several other ships saw the affair through glasses, but were unable to prevent the capture of Messrs. Heppy and Blandford.

Thirty Thousand Enough.

Washington, June 1.—The Post yesterday said: General Otis has informed the War Department that he will be satisfied if the army under his command is kept at a maximum of 30,000. The President will give him this number.

Dewey Leaves Hongkong June 5.

New York, June 1.—The following is from The World:

Hongkong, May 31.—Admiral Dewey, on the Olympia, will sail from this port June 5. The vessel will call first at Singapore, where she is expected to arrive on the 11th, and will remain there for two or three days.

UITLANDERS' DEMAND.

President Kruger and Sir Alfred Milner at Bloemfontein.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, June 1.—President Kruger, on his arrival here yesterday to attend the conference with Sir Alfred Milner, Governor of Cape Colony and British high commissioner for South Africa, arranged for the purpose of considering the demands of the Uitlanders, was received by a guard of honor at the railroad station, which was decorated in his honor. He was welcomed by the President of the Orange Free State, M. T. Steyn, and the Cabinet. Salutes were fired and the Transvaal national hymn was played.

Replying to an address, President Kruger said he had come here to work for the welfare of the whole of South Africa, and to discuss all questions, except the independence of the Transvaal.

Death Before the Launching.

Berlin, June 1.—The director of the German shipbuilding yards at Kiel, Herr Hagen, fell yesterday from the baptismal platform of the Ersatz Kaiser Wilhelm, which is to be launched to-day, and was instantly killed. One of the engineers, a man named Krasich, was killed by the falling of an elevator.

THE MARKETS.

Wheat Futures Up Two Cents—Both Liverpool and Chicago Futures Are Very Strong—The Prices.

Liverpool, June 1.—Wheat futures yesterday advanced strongly, closing 1¼d to 2d per cental above Tuesday's final figures.

Chicago, June 1.—Wheat futures yesterday were strong, on the strong cables, the good decrease in the American visible supply, and the continued blue reports from the crop belts. The July and September options advanced 2c a bushel yesterday over the previous final figures, and closed with a net gain of nearly 1½c for the session.

VISIBLE AND AFLOAT.

DR. GAUTHIER ENDORSES

The statement that Mr. Major owes his life to . . . . DR. CHASE'S Kidney Liver Pills

Dr. J. T. A. Gauthier, of Valleyfield, Que., writes: "I, the undersigned, certify that the contents of this letter, in regard to the cure of Mr. Isadore Major, by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, is correct."

Here is Mr. Major's letter: "After so years of suffering from backache and kidney disease I owe my life to Dr. A. W. Chase. I had tried an endless variety of remedies to no avail, and on the recommendation of a friend began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Two pills that night and two next morning gave great relief, and I continued their use until now I am completely cured. My friends are surprised and pleased to see me well again, for I spent hundreds of dollars in vain trying to get cured. Before using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills my back ached so I could not put on my shoes and couldn't lift so lbs. My shoulders were sore, I had headaches and a bad taste in the mouth. These troubles are now entirely gone and what I say I am ready to prove. I have told my friends of my wonderful cure, and many have been greatly benefited by using these pills."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the greatest kidney cure the world has ever known. One pill a dose, 25c. a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE ODORLESS

CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddon, February 20th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

from near centre put the ball through the Otonabee goal. In 28 minutes more Campbell scored another goal for the Y M C A. In another six minutes McDonald scored a goal for the Otonabees and Simpson scored another in one minute.

As the match was only to have been fifty minutes the last two goals were scored after the time was up, but they were allowed to go. The utmost friendliness existed between the two teams. The Otonabee team showed lack of practice, but with practice they would give a good account of themselves as they are all heavy. Their best player was Simpson, who did some excellent work.

The star of the Association team was Mc Pherson. Edwards also did good work. The combination of the Y M C A was better than that of the Otonabee men, but neither team played a very scientific game.

Lacrosse.

The Seaforth Lacrosse Club, of Seaforth, have withdrawn from the senior C.L.A. series. The Tecumsehs were to have played them on July 12th and 29th. They will now go into the intermediate.

Base-ball.

The baseball team has had some good afternoon practices this week and will be in fine shape for the match on Saturday afternoon. Kingston plays in Bowmanville the day before and then comes on to Peterborough. The match will begin at 3 p. m.

Mr. R. A. Hay, secy.-treas. of the baseball club, to-day received an offer from the great original and only genuine Cuban Giants, of New York city "colored champions of the world." They offer to play here on July 7th. They are evidently an enterprising lot. Their agreement blank is a wonder. It is not likely the offer will be considered, although it shows that Peterborough's fame as a baseball town is spreading.

The bargain has been closed with the Argyles, of Toronto, for a game here on Saturday, June 10th, a week later than the appearance of Kingston here. A despatch says that the Argyles have signed a new and strong pitcher.

Why Not Celebrate?

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—What is the matter with the people of our town? They do not seem to make any effort to get up any sports to keep the money in our own town on public holidays. So far this year on all the holidays the majority of people have left town to enjoy themselves. Now, Mr. Editor, we have a good town and lots of good hotel accommodation for any number that may come and we want to bring people into the town instead of letting them go out of town to spend their money. We have good bands here and I hope that they or the firemen or some of the different societies will take the matter up at once and let us have a celebration on the 1st of July that will be a credit to the town and a standing advertisement.

Thanking you for the space, I remain, yours truly,

CELEBRATION.

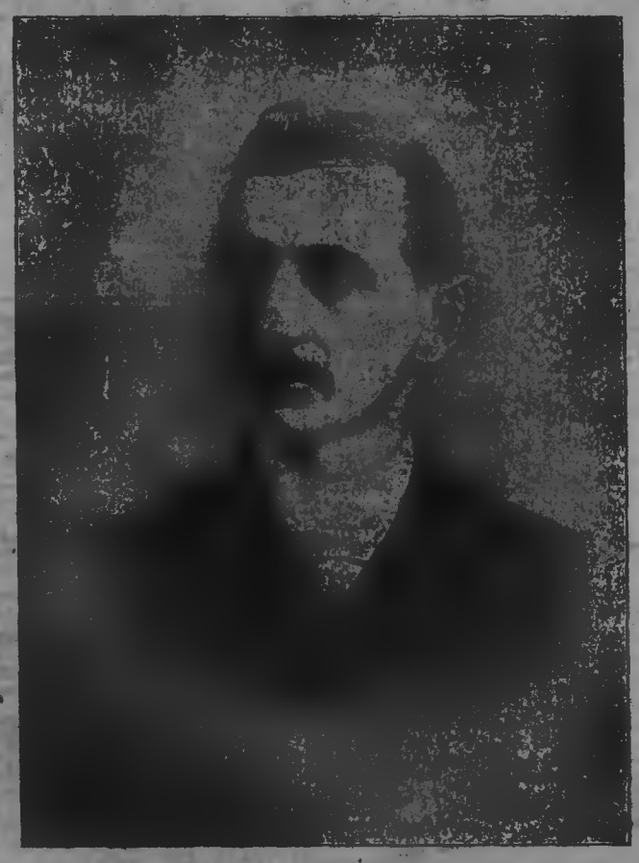
REV. W. R. YOUNG PRESIDENT

George Street Church's Former Pastor Honored by Conference---Elected to the Presidency---Rev. J. J. Rae is the new Secretary.

His Peterborough friends will be pleased to learn that at the session of the Bay of Quinte Conference in Belleville this morning Rev. W. R. Young, B.A., formerly pastor of the George-st. Methodist church, was elected President of the Conference. Rev. Mr. Young is a clergyman who will grace the high office to which he has been elected with dignity and marked ability. As a preacher he is a man of power and as a pastor he is a laborer who is faithful and beloved. A scholar and thinker besides, he has not failed in years past to make himself felt in the deliberations of Conference, and that this is true is shown by the action of the members of Conference in choosing him for the office of President. His Peterborough friends will extend hearty congratulations. The affairs in the Bay of Quinte Conference will be able and faithfully presided over this year, for Rev. Mr. Young will be a worthy president.

He was received into the ministry as a probationer in 1877, and afterwards attended the Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal, for two years. He was received into full connection and ordained in 1881. In 1891 he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Victoria University, having prosecuted his studies while at work on circuit. His first pastorate after ordination was at Newburg, and he was successively stationed thereafter at Adolphustown, Wellington, Little Britain and Millbrook. From Millbrook he came to the George-st church, Peterborough, where he enjoyed a most successful pastorate for four years, and he left beloved by his congregation and respected and esteemed by his fellow citizens of other denominations. From here he went to Port Hope, where he has labored with great success and where the people have paid a high tribute to his ability as a preacher and his worth as a pastor.



REV. W. R. YOUNG, B.A., the new President of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Rev J J Rae, a former pastor of the Charlotte-st. church, was elected secretary of the Conference this morning, and his Peterborough friends will also extend congratulations. Rev Mr Rae, now of Bowmanville, labored here with the greatest acceptance, and Conference has made no mistake in recognising his ability by placing him in the responsible position of secretary.

Rev W R Young, B.A., is a Canadian by birth, having been born near Kingston in 1854. His father was the late Wm Young.

Mr. Bert Kindred left on Tuesday for the Northwest.

Mr. John Smithson has returned to his position in Toronto, after a long vacation at home.

Mrs. James Anderson, of Campbellford, has returned home from visiting friends in Coboconk.

Miss Cox, of Lakefield, is the guest of Miss Greystock.

PILES FOR 15 YEARS.

Mr. Jas. Bowles, Councillor, Embro, Ont., writes: "For over 15 years I suffered the misery of bleeding, protruding piles. The many remedies I tried all failed. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and must say that the first application gave relief, after the third day the bleeding stopped and two boxes cured me completely."

J P WHITE GETS THE PRIZE

The Bean Guessing Contest Closed Last Night at the Spot Cash.

The great bean-guessing contest, which has been going on at the Spot Cash grocery, has closed, and Mr. J. P. White, son of ex-councillor, J. M. White, is the lucky winner of the lady's gold watch and chain. The contest has been going on for some time and no less than 6,628 guesses made. The jar of beans weighed 16 pounds, and contained 7 1-2 quarts. The actual number of beans contained in the jar was 7,976, and the extraordinary part of the whole affair was that Mr. White guessed the exact number. Some of those who came near to this number in their guesses were: R. J. Winch, 7,974; Miss Birdie Dawson, 7,980; Mr. H. Crossley, 7,967; Mr. E. Bradburg, 7,962. Mr. H. Crossley, 2nd guesses, 7919; Mr. Fred Dallis, Baillieboro, 7,991; Thos. Raymond 7,997; Miss May Sawyers, 7,998, and Miss Sara Cochrane, 7,980. For every 25 cents worth of goods purchased, the purchaser was entitled to one guess. The jar was sealed by Mayor Davis at the time the competition commenced, and the beans were counted last night by Mr. Wm. Menzie, of the Examiner, and Mr. W. H. Robertson.

The prize is an elegant gold watch and chain, the former being beautifully decorated in gold, 22 karats fine, with a small diamond in centre of back case. It is of the Waltham movement and stem winder and stem setter.

The last competition was at Christmas last, when a beautiful dinner set was the prize.

Purely Vegetable.

First the bud, then the blossom, then the perfect fruit. These are the several stages of some of the most important ingredients composing the painless and sure corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. The juices of plants greatly concentrated and purified, gums and balsams in harmonious union, all combined give the grand results. Putnam's Extractor makes no sore spot, does not lay a man up for a week, but goes on quietly doing its work until a perfect cure results. Beware of acid substitutes.

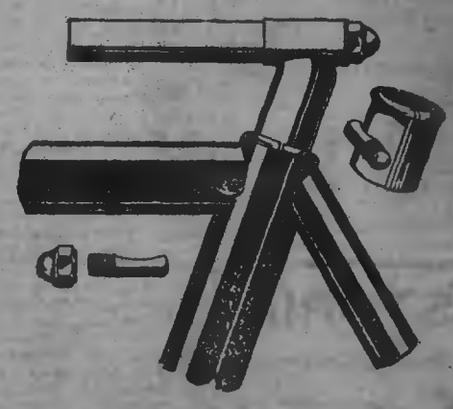
A Seat Post Feature

Found on Only the Peerless Red Bird...

In the Seat Post, as in the other features of construction, the Red Bird Special, Model 51, differs radically from any other bicycle on the Canadian market.



The working principle of this seat post fastener is shown in the accompanying illustration. The cotter key, milled away on one side, to fit over expanding ring, is tightened so as to give the friction required to hold the seat post securely.

When found necessary to raise or lower the seat post, a turn or two of the blind nut at the end of cotter key allows the ring to expand and all friction is off.

It is simple, safe, and so neat in appearance as to attract the admiration of critical riders wherever shown.

Have your nearest Red Bird Agent show you how nicely it works.

Emergency Sale of

Water Damaged Goods

AT THE GOLDEN LION.

By the bursting of a water pipe on the night of the 30th. ulto., a large quantity of our Reserve Stock in the Second, First and Basement Stories were damaged by the flood of water. These goods consist principally of 400 yards of DRESS GOODS and DRESS LININGS.

1500 yards of TOWELLING, together with quantities of TOWELLS, SKIRTS, LINENS, SHIRT WAIST SILKS, ETC.

A considerable portion of these goods are only slightly damaged by moisture and sustain little or no damage for general utility or wear.

As it is imperatively necessary that an immediate disposal of these goods must be made, we have decided to make a quick clearance by holding an Emergency Sale which will be continued during

Friday, Saturday and Monday

JUNE 2, 3 and 5.

This means that about HALF PRICE will have to be accepted in many instances and that we must be content to stand the loss ourselves. We can't afford to hesitate about the sacrifices that must be made in prices, no matter how severe the loss, in order to make a swift clearance as crowds are sure to take advantage of this sale. Capital chances for large buyers.

MAJOR MARCHAND.

The Gallant Frenchman, Prominent in the Fashoda Incident, Welcomed to France—Telegraphic Briefs.

In the House of Commons on Thursday Mr. William St. John Broderick said the Anglo-American commission had adjourned until August, and that the negotiations are proceeding.

Gen. Lawton has been given command of the defence of the city and troops forming the line around Manila, which will be his division. Gen. MacArthur commands the outlying garrisons and the troops holding the railroad and river.

On Thursday afternoon Loretto, aged 6 years, twin daughter of Dr. Lanthier, dentist, fell over the cliff from the ramparts opposite Laval University into the rear of Sault au Matelot street, Quebec, some 75 or 80 feet. The unfortunate girl lived but a couple of hours.

One of the oldest preachers of the Presbyterian Church in Canada died on Thursday at Toronto in the person of the Rev. Robert Dowie Mackay. He was born in Thuso, Scotland, in 1807, and educated at St. Andrew's and Edinburgh. In the early fifties he came to Canada.

Marion Clark, the 21-months-old infant kidnapped from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clark of New York City, on May 21, has been found two miles south of Skaneateles, a village about eight miles from Garnesville, N.Y. She was found at the farm house of Charles Youmans, and was in the custody of Mrs. Jennie Wilson, who was arrested for the abduction.

Major Marchand, the little Frenchman so prominent in the Fashoda incident in Egypt, arrived at Lyons, France, on Thursday on his way to Paris, and was received with immense enthusiasm. He arrived in Paris later, and was given a reception worthy of a Bonaparte. He was dined at the Military Club and made the recipient of medals, swords of honor and decorations. The Chamber of Deputies, too, adopted a resolution of thanks to the Major.

What London Drinks.

Londoners consume 275,000,000 gallons of water a year. They do not drink all of it, and what they do drink is not always taken clear, as they use 25,000,000 pounds of tea as well. They do put down 158,000,000 gallons of beer, however, as well as 4,400,000 gallons of spirits, besides 50,000,000 gallons of mineral waters.

HAVE REACHED A DEADLOCK

Milner and Kruger Have Some Hard Nuts to Crack.

Their Conference at Bloemfontein Will Not Be a Bed of Roses—The Dynamite Monopoly—Blue Book, Just Issued, Indicates From the Boer President's Reply to Chamberlain That There Will Be Warm Controversy.

Bloemfontein, June 2.—Among the most important points that President Paul Kruger of the Transvaal Republic and Sir Alfred Milner, Governor of Cape Colony and British high commissioner for South Africa, will have to discuss at their conference here in regard to the demands of the Uitlanders, will be the question of the dynamite monopoly, under which the Uitlanders are groaning, and which the British Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, has used his utmost endeavor to remedy. But a blue book on the subject, issued last night, shows that matters in this connection have practically reached a deadlock.

The blue book opens with a letter from Mr. Chamberlain, dated Jan. 18, reviewing the whole question and protesting that the monopoly was inconsistent with the London Convention. To this the Transvaal Government replied, under date of March 9, controverting the arguments of Mr. Chamberlain, and stating that Her Majesty's Government was not entitled to a protest.

Mr. Chamberlain, on April 21, however, renewed the British protest, adding that Her Majesty's Government reserved its rights. In answer to this the Transvaal Government replied, on May 29, with two court sentences, to the effect that it abided with the views expressed in its communication of March 9.

THE HAGUE CONFERENCE.

American Mediation Scheme Adopted—Explosive Bullets Prohibited—There Are Tangles.

The Hague, June 2.—The American mediation scheme was unanimously adopted at yesterday's sitting of the sub-committee, which embodied as article 7 the scheme prepared by the sub-committee, with few alterations.

The first commission, by a vote of 18 to 3, has adopted a resolution prohibiting the use of Dumdum (or flattened bullets). Italy, Austria and Great Britain formed the minority.

It was also resolved to prohibit the use of explosives from balloons and explosive bullets.

An agreement was found to be impossible on all the important proposals and the conviction is growing more than ever that the work of the first commission is doomed to failure.

The second section of the Red Cross committee is also encountering difficulties, as the American and British members are opposing the proposed regulations as being too stringent.

A Steamer After Dreyfus.

New York, June 2.—The Journal's correspondent at St. Pierre, Martinique, telegraphs: "I am informed on the best authority that the steamer Lafayette, which arrived yesterday, brings officers and men who will take Captain Dreyfus home from his prison on the Isle du Diable, off French Guiana, to a new trial in Paris.

"The Lafayette will not go to Cayenne, the capital of Guiana, but will proceed on her usual course to Colon. The guards for Dreyfus, members of the Republican Guards and four gendarmes, will be transferred, I am informed, to the steamer Ville de Tangar for Cayenne."

Esterhazy Wrote the Bordereau.

London, June 2.—The Rome correspondent of The Daily Mail says: "Lieut.-Col. Panizzardi, military attache of the Italian embassy in Paris when Dreyfus was condemned, informs me that the Italian embassy always knew that Esterhazy wrote the bordereau."

Du Paty de Clam Arrested.

Paris, June 2.—Lieut.-Col. Du Paty de Clam, seriously implicated by the recent proceedings before the Court of Cassation as the probable instigator of some of the forgeries that have figured in the Dreyfus affair, was placed under arrest at half-past 7 last evening and taken to the Cherche Midi military prison.

Hamilton Firemen Hurt.

Hamilton, Ont., June 2.—At 12.40 this morning a disastrous fire started in the stables of Charles Swenzer, which were destroyed. While endeavoring to cope with the blaze, five firemen fell from the second story of the stable—which is a three-storied structure—to the ground floor. Their names are John Woods, Sam Brewster, T. Glover, Hilyard Walsh and Theodore Smith. Brewster's right eye was gouged out and his head badly cut. The others were more or less injured, some of them badly. The injured firemen, when they fell, were promptly dragged out of danger by their comrades.

OPPOSITION CAUCUS IN NO. 6

Indignation Expressed Over the Gerrymander Bill.

The Opposition Dislikes the Manner in Which Ontario Is Being Corked—It Will Be a Long Fight—The People of This Province Will Thus Be Made Cognizant of Its Unfairness—Mr. Tarte Will Travel by Tugs.

Ottawa, June 2.—The storm centre, which has been over the Commons Chamber for the past few days, changed its location for a couple of hours yesterday morning, and hung over room No. 6, where the Opposition caucus was being held, and for a while thunders of applause were heard echoing about the corridors outside, as the storm of indignation against the infamous gerrymander bill raged within. The caucus was largely attended and most enthusiastic. Mr. F. H. Hale, M.P., presided, and there was a very full and free discussion of the redistribution bill, Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Foster and many others participating.

Will Fight It Out.

While there was no disposition towards anything like obstruction, and great reluctance was shown to prolonging the session unnecessarily, it was felt that it was a duty bound of the Opposition to have an exceedingly full discussion of the measure, and of other questions indirectly connected with it, which will occupy considerable time and dispel any hope of a speedy prorogation.

Indignation Expressed.

Great indignation was expressed at the carving-up of Ontario by the Government in such a way that whereas 15,000 Liberals shall have a representative, only one representative is allowed to 50,000 Conservatives. The opinion was expressed that the bill should not be allowed to pass until it had been very fully discussed, and the people of Ontario made very cognizant of its unfair and partisan provisions, disguised under a thin veil of fairness by nominally referring the subdivisions to judges, while arranging the main divisions or counties in such a manner that the judges could not, even if they tried, make an equitable distribution.

Tarte Travels by Tugs.

Hon. Mr. Tarte leaves for Montreal this morning, and will take a trip in one of the Government tugs down the St. Lawrence, inspecting works at the ship canal and other places. Mr. Tarte will leave for Europe in the course of a few days. This trip of inspection down the St. Lawrence may be about the last departmental work he will do until his return from Paris.

Increased Trade Shown.

The customs receipts for May are stated by the Customs Department to have been $3,162,635, as against $1,797,867 last year. The receipts from customs for the 11 months of the fiscal year are given as $33,260,634, as compared with $30,123,726 for the same period last year, an increase of $3,137,784.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Bill to Make Possible the Appointment of a Canadian Major-General—G.T.R. Lease Resolution Passed.

Ottawa, June 2.—In the House yesterday afternoon Sir Hibbert Tupper moved that the returns recently brought down with reference to the Manitoba election case be referred to the public accounts committee. The Prime Minister thought that the papers might have been left with the public accounts committee last year, but promised to look into the matter.

A Canadian Major-General.

Col. Domville introduced his bill to amend the Militia Act of Canada. In explanation he said that the bill was a very simple one and merely provided for a slight change in section 4 for the purpose of settling the question as to the relative positions of the Minister and the Major-General, and to section 2 by adding the words, "or any lieut.-colonel of the Canadian militia," so as to admit of a Canadian officer being appointed to the command of the Canadian militia. The amendment did not make it compulsory to appoint a Canadian officer, but left it optional with the Government. The bill was introduced and read a first time.

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, JUNE 2, 1899.

THE Grand Trunk will not make friends in refusing to come to terms with the striking trackmen. The public like to see a fair day's wage paid.

IT is reported that General Manager Hayes, of the Grand Trunk, has received an increase of $10,000 a year in his salary, and the striking trackmen did not fail to make a strong point out of this when discussing the refusal of their demand for $1.25 a day.

THE striking trackmen have done well to conduct themselves while "out" in an orderly manner, refraining from violence or interference with the company's property. They will advance their cause and make warmer friends of the general public by continuing in well-doing in this respect.

PUBLIC sympathy is with the striking G T R trackmen simply because it is not considered unreasonable for the men who work ten hours a day—not to mention overtime without extra pay—rain or shine, to ask that they be paid $1.25 a day. This is the wage of the ordinary laborer with pick and shovel, but the trackmen must be more or less experienced and skilled in their calling, while their responsibility is by no means small. The wage of 97 or 90 cents a day is not a fair day's pay for any white man working ten or twelve hours a day who is expected to give faithful and efficient service on a railway track, ensuring the safety of life and property rusing over the same.

THE correspondent in the REVIEW who urged that Peterborough shake off its indifference in regard to local celebrations on public holidays was writing along the right line. Peterborough of late years has not shown that enterprise in the matter of public demonstrations on holidays that it is capable of or that it has in the past. Two reasons only need be advanced in urging the citizens to undertake home celebrations. First, a celebration at home keeps the people at home to spend the money that under other circumstances will go to some other enterprising town. Second, a celebration will bring visitors here to spend their holiday coin, and will allow these outsiders to see for themselves why Peterborough claims to be the premier town of the province.

Questions and Answers.

Hon. Mr. Tarte, in reply to Mr. Casgrain, who asked "Is the Government aware that Donahue contracted for the said timber for Beberval bridge at 10c per foot with one Larouche of Kaapgami, and that the contract has been cancelled because the said Larouche is a Conservative?" said that the timber had been rejected because it was not good.

In reply to a question put for Mr. Maclean, Hon. Mr. Blair said that the special mileage tariff on hay, straw and grain at present enforced on the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, had not been approved by order-in-council, as it was not necessary to do so, only maximum tariffs being submitted for approval.

Hon. Mr. Blair stated, in reply to Mr. Macdougall, that Frank A. Gillies, formerly station agent on the Intercolonial Railway at Truradie, N.S., had been transferred from that station to another and consequently dismissed because he was short in his cash.

G.T.R. Terminals at Montreal.

Hon. Mr. Blair laid on the table blue prints of the terminal facilities of the Grand Trunk Railway at Montreal covered by the arrangement recently made in respect to the Intercolonial having terminal facilities at Montreal, and other papers relating to the lease of a portion of the Grand Trunk to the Government.

The House went into committee on the resolution authorizing the loan of the Grand Trunk terminals at Montreal for 99 years at $140,000 a year.

Mr. Blair said it was impossible to give in figures an exact statement of the receipts and expenditures of the extension to Montreal. However, he could say that for the current year, estimating for the two months of May and June, the revenue of the I.C.R. would be $2,660,000. In the year ending June 30, 1897, the revenue was $2,360,000, a gain of $300,000, or 38 per cent., but, of course, allowance must be made for increased mileage. The receipts per mile were $2,740 and $2,490 respectively, or 14 per cent., due to the extension to Montreal. Receipts and expenditures for the ten months of the current year showed a surplus of $62,000, an improvement of $170,000 over the same period of 1898. This could only be accounted for by the extension. He said he considered the proposition now before the committee comprised the "very best, cheapest, wisest, most effective and most satisfactory" method of extending the I.C.R. to Montreal that could be devised. In acquiring a half-interest in the road between St. Rosalie and St. Lambert, the Government was getting half-ownership of a road 25 miles long, passing through the "most fertile, most productive, most thrifty and most promising piece of country in Canada, through which the I.C.R. would have equal rights with the Grand Trunk to pick up business. Moreover, it was one of the best pieces of roadbed on the continent, and the use was also secured of the Victoria Bridge, which cost $10,000,000, and of terminals in Montreal of simply inestimable value, because their value could not be estimated in dollars. It was objected that the I.C.R. could not use all the terminals. Of course they couldn't use them all at once, but it had the use of all for the receipt and discharge of freight. These terminals had cost $90,000,000. If the I.C.R. could not be got into Montreal in close connection with the C.P.R. and Grand Trunk he would not be in favor of getting them at all. It was necessary to get right into the centre of the city and work with other railways. Just now he was making arrangements to do passenger business right from Ottawa. His plan was to attach a Pullman to the Canada Atlantic train, so that a passenger for St. John or Halifax could get on board his car at Ottawa and go right through.

As to the charge that the Government had been extravagant in its lease, and that a new road could have been built at less capital cost, that was Col. McLennan's estimate. Where was that practical contractor who could touch the button and build cheap railways as will when the Conservatives were building their expensive roads. The Mail and Empire figured that $140,000 a year was equal to a capital of $4,500,000 paid up in 99 years. He thought that was an extraordinary calculation, but, nevertheless, $4,500,000 would not begin to build the line and give terminal facilities equal to what the I.C.R. was to have. As a matter of fact, to construct a railway from St. Rosalie to St. Lambert, 25 miles, would cost $1,500,000; to build another bridge across the St. Lawrence would cost, say, $6,000,000. But suppose it were even proposed to use the Grand Trunk bridge, it could not be had for less than on a traffic basis of $77,000 a year, instead of $40,000, under the present arrangement.

Then, when the I.C.R. did get to Montreal, how was it going to get terminal facilities in the centre of Montreal? The cost would be enormous. Supposing it were proposed to build a road from St. Lambert to Caughnawaga, bridge the St. Lawrence and come down to Point St. Charles, and thence into Montreal city, the cost would be simply stupendous, of not less than $6,250,000, without a station, shops or anything of that sort. Mr. Blair instanced the case of the Canada Atlantic and Grand Trunk, the former being desirous of making a bargain for a term of years to go into Montreal over the Grand Trunk, 25 miles, from Coteau to Montreal, without an expensive bridge to cross, and the best terms the Grand Trunk will give is $150,000 a year. In fact, he said in conclusion, so good a bargain was his with the Grand Trunk that he was sure it would be renewed at the end of the 99 years.

Mr. Haggart.

Mr. Haggart said Mr. Blair's valuation of the property of the Grand Trunk was simply ridiculous; somebody had evidently imposed on him. In all his long speech Mr. Blair had not explained the vast difference between the present arrangement and the former bargain, a difference which at least showed the stupidity of the previous agreement. He would not charge corruption in connection with the Grand Trunk lease, whatever might be his opinion of the Drummond deal, but if this lease did not bear the marks of rascality, it certainly bore the marks of stupidity. This was a more hopeless case. A rascal might reform, but there was no remedy for stupidity.

Mr. Powell said that every dollar of additional traffic gained by the Montreal extension had cost $1.82. Even then the gain of traffic by the Intercolonial was not up to the growth of business of other roads in Canada. Then, when Mr. Blair said there was no general increase of trade in the Maritime Provinces, he was in conflict with the Finance Minister, who spoke only the other day of revival of business from one end of the Dominion to the other.

Mr. Fielding interrupted to state that he had not claimed the same amount of prosperity in the east as in the west.

Mr. Powell—But he claimed that there was an increase.

Mr. McMullen followed in support of the measure.

Mr. Gibson spoke at some length in support of the resolution, which was put and carried on division, and the House adjourned at 11.50.

C.P.R. Throws Down.

Ottawa, June 2.—The C.P.R. bill was amended by the railway committee yesterday expunging the clause to permit the building of a line from Foxton, Man., to a point near Sifton's Landing, on the east side of Lake Manitoba, on the ground that this line paralleled McKenzie, Mann & Co.'s.

Peace Proclaimed Once More.

Buffalo, N.Y., June 2.—An agreement was reached yesterday morning between committees of the striking freight handlers and the employers. The agreement was ratified later at separate meetings of dockmen and housemen, and the men voted to return to work this morning.

Mrs. Maybrick to Be Liberated.

London, June 2.—The Daily Chronicle announces that Mrs. Florence Maybrick is likely to be liberted shortly, as the result of the pressure brought to bear by Mr. Joseph H. Choate, United States ambassador, in favor of repealing the case.

STRIKE OF THE TRACKMEN.

From Present Appearances It Is Yet Anybody's Battle.

Grand Trunk Officials Say Their Tracks Are Kept in Good Condition—No Settlement in Sight, But the Toronto Strikers in the Fight Claim That They Will Ultimately Win—G.T.R. Sending Men Out on Specials.

Toronto, June 2.—The striking Grand Trunk trackmen in Toronto say they are still confident of winning the fight with the company. Word was received by the men from Port Erie to the effect that two men were engaged there to work on the tracks. When they learned of the condition, however, they refused to start. Two more men were secured later on, but they followed suit, and would not engage with the company.

A small accident was also reported from near Brighton. It is said three cars were derailed, and badly smashed up. A portion of the track near Port Perry has also been washed out, so the men say. Another small mishap occurred at Trenton last night, but only trifling damage was done.

Supt. Jones Is Satisfied.

Supt. Jones of the middle division, who has been out on his district since Sunday, returned to the city yesterday. When asked as to the condition of affairs since the strike, he said he was quite satisfied at the manner in which the road is being patrolled and kept by the men now in the employ of the company. The rains, he said, had not done any great injury to the tracks, and rather proved an advantage, as the warm weather would have made the rails warp, and also caused great danger from fire from the sparks from the engines.

Brotherhoods Meeting.

The local representatives of the Brotherhood of Engineers and Firemen have not as yet received any news from their committees in Montreal.

At a joint meeting held at York by the engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen and telegraphers employed on the G.T.R. system, it was resolved: "That, owning to the dangerous condition of the tracks, that some steps must be taken by the company at once to put the track in a safe condition to run over, as we, the said employes, consider our lives and limbs and those of the travelling public to be in danger; also resolved: That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to General Manager Hays."

The Situation at Brantford.

Brantford, June 2.—The sectionmen of the G.T.R. now on strike at this point are determined that the plans they have formed to bring about a settlement with the company shall not be interfered with by outsiders. Wednesday a number of men belonging to Brantford were engaged by the Grand Trunk and went over the road to Paris, the strikers being ignorant of the move that was being made until later in the day. When the men returned to the city in the evening they were met by a deputation from the striking sectionmen and advised to leave the work alone. The men said nothing and did not heed that warning. They showed up yesterday again, but their determination was anticipated by the strikers, and being again warned they returned to the city, not caring to run the risk of being roughly handled. This is the first attempt of the G.T.R. to fill the positions of the sectionmen, and, as will be seen, it was unsuccessful.

Living on Special Trains.

St. Thomas, Ont., June 2.—At 8 o'clock yesterday morning a special train left for the east with 14 men from St. Thomas. Sixteen more men were picked up between here and Cayuga. It is claimed that all these men but four are former sectionmen. At 12.10 another special train went out, going out with six St. Thomas trackmen, and 20 more will be picked up between St. Thomas and Windsor. Three special constables went with this train, and the men will be in charge of John R. Minshall, former yard foreman of the G.T.R., who has been promoted to the position of assistant roadmaster over the division from St. Thomas to Windsor. These trackmen were engaged to work on extra gangs, and will be paid at the rate of $1.25 per day and foremen $2 per day. Unlike the ordinary trackmen, who were paid only $1 a day, they will have no regular beats, but will be called upon to work upon any part of the division for which they are engaged. It is understood that no sectionmen are working on regular beats yet. The men will live in boarding cars, which accompany each special train, especially for their accommodation. Special constables will be sworn in in each county to see that they are not molested at any point at which they may be sent to work.

Garment Workers' Strike Settled.

Hamilton, June 2.—The meeting yesterday afternoon resulted in a settlement of the garment workers' strike, and the various employes of the contractors will go back to work on Monday. Mr. Copley represented Mr. Calder at the meeting, and he agreed, on behalf of the firm, to give the eight contractors employing the strikers all the finer work and not to employ any imported foreigners. The Hebrews brought from New York last week are to be hived in separate shops and kept at inferior work, it also being agreed that the firm will not import any more foreigners. The contractors agreed to employ none but union hands. A meeting of the strikers will be held tonight to confirm yesterday's agreement.

Hamilton Jockey Club Races.

He Was Not Shot.

North Bay, Ont., June 2.—Herbert Macleod, son of Mr. M. Macleod of Barrie, Ont., was not shot in a street riot at Butte City, Montana, as erroneously stated in Thursday's papers, but was accidentally killed by a train.

Alex. Jackson Drowned.

Enfield, N.S., June 2.—Alex. Jackson was drowned at Long Lake yesterday. The young man and Steele, a companion, had been fishing, when their boat upset. He was I.C.R. yardmaster at Halifax.

The Discovery of an Artist.

In the Cathedral of Nantes, France, there is a monument to Francis II of Bretagne and his wife Margaret which is considered one of the masterpieces of French sculpture. It is over 300 years old, and until twenty odd years ago no one knew to whom to ascribe it. Then by chance an old stone slab was discovered in the same cathedral bearing the following inscription:

"I, Michel Colomb, was a poor forsaken boy whose only home was the high road, where alone God and our Bretagne saints watched over me. I often forgot to eat and drink while looking at the stonecutters who made the beautiful stone crosses for the holy place in the diocese of Leon, and I myself carved small images with a wretched knife, when worthy priests took compassion upon me, fed me and said to me: 'Work, thou little one, and look as much as thou pleasest at the carved belfry and at the beautiful work of the guild (sculptors). Look at all this, love the good God, the mild Saviour and the blessed Virgin Mary. Then thy name shall be honored in the diocese of Leon and in the beautiful Bretagne.' This I did for a long while that I might become a good workman, and then our Duchess Anna gave me an order to cut a monument to our gracious Duke Francis II and the Duchess Margaret."—Harper's Bazar.

Theaters In New Zealand.

A New Zealand correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes:

"The first floor of their theaters is flat, supplied with plain, unpainted wooden benches, with open backs. The balcony, the fashionable place, contains only cheaply upholstered benches, and is badly ventilated. Early door tickets at 12½ cents extra are sold, admitting the holder an hour before the regular doors open, that he may obtain first choice of the unpainted benches. Five minutes before the orchestra appears a big bell, suspended in the theater, is violently rung, making all but the dead jump. Then all knowing ones understand that order is wanted—the stranger probably thinks it a fire alarm bell.

"Every Saturday night in all New Zealand towns the people crowd their leading street. They walk chiefly in the street in preference to the footpath. The girls, women, men and boys, young and old, promenade up and down the one street, meet friends and stand in groups in the street. An occasional cart, cab or tram, driven at breakneck speed in their midst, makes the people scatter for a moment, with many narrow escapes. Vehicles, trams, cycles, etc., turn to the left instead of to the right."

STOP WOMEN

from exercising common sense? You can't do it. As the old rhyme runs:

"The man's a fool who tries by force or skill
To turn the current of a woman's will
For if she will, she will, you may depend on't
And if she won't she won't, so there's an end on't."

Common sense tells a woman that when she's sick she needs a doctor.

Common sense tells a woman that in disease the first question is not of man or woman, but of recognized medical ability.

Common sense applied to advertisements which invite women to "write to a woman because she is a woman and understands women," will show the women so appealed to, that it's no use to write to any woman about disease unless that woman is a physician.

Common sense used in the reading of advertisements will discover that no claim is made in them to a physician's knowledge or diploma. And that is not because the claim would be morally culpable as a lie, but because it would be legally punishable as a fraud. The law permits you to masquerade as a doctor in an advertisement, just so long as you don't actually claim to be a doctor, or put M. D. after your name. That's why the advertisement is worded "write to a woman" instead of write to a doctor.

Common sense has brought more than half-a-million women, afflicted with some form of female disease, to Dr. R. V. Pierce as one of the most expert physicians in the United States in the treatment of female diseases. Dr. Pierce is a specialist. He has given more than thirty years of active practice to the treatment of female diseases. Dr. Pierce is not a "physician" by courtesy. He is a physician regularly graduated, legally empowered to practice and with thirty years of experience in the treatment of diseases of women, which he has made his specialty.

The offer of free consultation by letter made by Dr. Pierce is a real offer, an honest offer. It is an offer backed by a medical institution, with a world-wide reputation, a staff of nearly a score of regularly graduated physicians, a practice which reaches every state in the Union and a record of more than half-a-million women treated and ninety-eight out of every hundred perfectly cured.

Write to a doctor. That's the first thing. Write to the doctor. That's the next thing. The woman's doctor, is Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Sort of Sherlock Holmes.

"Gentlemen," began the proprietor of the only hotel at Basswood Corners, "I've run this here institution for over 20 years. It's given me a first rate chance to study human nater. An now in some respects I think I'm a sort of Sherlock Holmes. I've had married couples come here in all stages of their matrimonial careers, from the blushin, cooin things that hain't got the rice off 'em yet to the couples where the man let the woman carry most of the luggage, an I tell ye, gentlemen, I can tell purty straight how long a couple has been married by watchin the husband get his wife a drink of water."

"Go ahead," we said. "What's your discovery?"

"Well, when the tender young honeymooners come here an the feller gets the bride a drink of water, if there's any left in the glass after she gets through—why, he drinks it. If the couple has been married a year or so, the feller will throw out the water that his wife leaves in the glass and go himself some fresh. Ain't that purty straight?"

"Yes, but it doesn't go far enough. How can you tell if they've been married several years?"

"Very easy, very easy. Then the feller not only throws out the water his wife leaves, but rinses the glass out before he gets any for himself."

Brusque Brahms.

A young Hungarian violinist, who was continually talking about his wonderful skill and great fame, had his flatteries addressed to Brahms cut short with the brusque remark, "More finger exercise and fewer phrases, young man!"

A young woman who played the pianoforte asked the composer as to the advisability of giving a concert in Vienna.

"Are you all ready?" inquired Brahms.

"Certainly, dear master! May I play something for you?"

"Oh, no, no! I meant only have you a new gown and gloves?"

"Yes, sir."

"Pity; otherwise I should have advised you not to give the concert."

SUMMER FASHIONS.

White Promises to Be the Leading Favorite.

White continues to enjoy great consideration in the fashionable world. Aside from the white wash costumes prepared for summer, toilets of white cloth, wool or silk are well represented. The revers and pocket flaps of jackets of light or dark cloth are also frequently white, white gloves retain their vogue and white trimmings in the form of folds, pipings and applications are lavishly used. White shirt waists promise to preponderate over all others during the summer, and although there are many comparatively plain ones of lawn or pique there are some which are shirt waists only in shape, being sometimes simply a mass of open embroidery in contiguous bands or separated by lines of lace insertion. A favorite means of introducing a touch of white into the costume is to wear a plastron of white silk, cloth or guipure under an open fronted bodice.

Two shades of the same color are now often combined, and when the plastron is not white it is frequently another tone of the color of the gown. Dark and light shades of brown, green and blue are thus used, also gray and black. Gray and white are always a peculiarly refined and pleasing conjunction, especially when the gray is of a medium or light tone.

The gown illustrated is of bright red cloth. The skirt is cut with a redingote effect, having a circular flounce which is extended to form a tablier. The redingote portion is bordered with black embroidery. The bodice consists of three superimposed boleros, each embroidered with black and parting over a plastron also embroidered with black. The sleeves have black embroidery at the flaring wrists. The belt of red grosgrain is fastened with a gold buckle, and jet buttons ornament the bolero. The cravat is of white tulle with black satin lines secured by a gold buckle. The toque of embroidered black straw has a spray of red azaleas at the side.

NEW MATERIALS.

Light Goods and Light Colors For Warm Weather.

The new materials are all light in weight not merely because they are meant for warm weather wear, but because the increasing amount of tissue used in skirts makes it necessary to diminish heaviness as much as possible. Thin cloths with a glossy finish are favorites and are much used in decided colors and pale tones. Beginning with the tints verging on white, there are chalk, putty, pale suede and pearl shades, which are at the very head and front of fashion and are sufficiently delicate and unserviceable to please the most expensive fancy. Fineness and brilliancy are combined with extreme lightness of weight, and the result is charming. After these tints beige, gray, blues and violets claim fashionable [illegible], and the violet tones are [illegible] from the deep Russian shade to lavender and a pale pinkish lilac. Reds and greens are also seen in new shades and will compose some effective gowns.

Satin de bengale, a new fabric, is having a decided vogue for entire costumes and for elegant bodices and is displacing taffeta, as it lends itself more kindly to the tucks, puffs and shirrings demanded by fashion. Taffeta is not abandoned, however, and has been brought out in wider widths and new designs.

The cut shows a costume of sky blue and white glace taffeta. The plain skirt is covered over the hips with guipure embroidered with silver, which extends downward in long points. The tight bodice has a horizontal drapery in front bordered with a band of embroidered guipure and gathered at the right side under a chou. The yoke of embroidered guipure extends to the waist in a long point at the back. The close sleeves are plaited at the top and have guipure points at the wrists. The collar is of white mousseline de soie.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

The Capital of Holland.

A gentleman—to the best of our recollection a retired linen draper—went into school one day with the intention of putting the fifth standard through their facings in the geography of Europe. He began, "What is the capital of 'Olland?" "Capital H," was the crushing rejoinder from the smart boy of the class. The ex-linen draper did not pursue his geographical inquiries further.—Cornhill.

Well Answered.

In the early part of this century there lived in Nantucket a young Quakeress whose wit caused many a ripple in the demure circle of the Friends.

When this pretty Martha attended yearly meeting in Newport at the age of 16, her youthful spirits brought her occasional grave looks from the elders, although her real goodness of heart was never questioned.

One evening, during the session of yearly meeting, Martha was the center of a group of young people gathered near the windows of the parlor in the boarding house where some of the Friends lodged for the time. The young people were playing the simple and amusing game of "humorous definitions." Martha's wit caused such frequent laughter that a solemn faced person rose from his seat at the other end of the room and asked, in a loud, stern voice:

"Martha, can thee give me the definition of gravity?"

The pretty Quakeress colored at this public and unnecessary rebuke, but after scarcely perceptible hesitation, she answered demurely:

"I am not able to give thee a definition of my own, Friend Brown, but perhaps that of De la Rochefoucauld will suit thee. He says that 'gravity is a mysterious carriage of the body, invented to cover the defects of the mind.'"—Youth's Companion.

"Going Out to See a Man."

"Going out to see a man" was the invention of Artemus Ward. One night in the winter of 1865, when the humorist was about half through his lecture, he paralyzed his audience with the announcement that they would have to take a recess of 15 minutes so as to enable him to go across the street to "see a man." H. R. Tracey, the editor of the Washington Republican, was in the audience, and, seeing an opportunity to improve upon the joke, penciled these lines and sent them to the platform:

"Dear Artemus—If you will place yourself under my guidance, I'll take you to 'see a man' without crossing the street."

Artemus accepted the invitation, and while the great audience impatiently but with much amusement awaited the reappearance of the humorist the latter was making the acquaintance of Aman, a well known restaurant keeper at that time, and luxuriating at a well laden refreshment board. Of course everybody "caught on to" the phrase, and men became fond of getting up between the acts and "going out to see Aman." The restaurateur's business from that time forward boomed. Men who would ordinarily sit quietly through an entertainment and behave themselves allowed themselves to be influenced by the contagion.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

These Modest Japanese!

Here is a matrimonial advertisement that is hard to take seriously. A lady who calls herself Hosuijoshi seeks a husband in the Kanazawa Shimbun, a Japanese paper. She describes herself thus:

"I am a beautiful woman, with cloudlike hair, flowery face, willowlike waist, and crescent eyebrows. I have enough property to walk through life hand in hand gazing at flowers in the day and the moon at night. If there is a gentleman who is clever, learned, handsome and of good taste, I will join with him for life and share the pleasure of being buried in the same grave."

To this an answer comes from a gentleman who signs himself Ariwara Mitsunji, whose advertisement runs as follows:

"I am the greatest genius of the present time, and people regard me as the handsomest man in Kanazawa. If the lady sees me but once, she will be unable to restrain her love for me. I will fix any place and time for our meeting."

THE FASHION PLATE.

Many of the newest yokes, guimpes and blouse fronts to wear under basque bodices are made with minute tucks across the yoke or guimpe, a style very becoming to slender forms.

Very handsome costumes of vicuna, lightweight ladies' cloth or soft kid cloth are made of two distinct shades of the fabric and decorated with straps of the darker shade and small round tailor buttons.

Models of summer toilets show fine tucking employed in diagonal, diamond shaped and horizontal forms. Epaulets are tucked, as are cuffs, the edges of tunics, peplum ends and tiny applied basques.

Polka dots, small diamond shapes, vermicelli and coral designs predominate among the blue foulards for cool traveling, beach and walking costumes. They are trimmed with frills of the silk and have a plain silk vest and stock collar.

Some pretty shirt waist models have been designed for the coming summer, some of them showing a deep sailor collar joined to pointed revers that reach the belt in front; the entire piece of woven guipure lace, with cuffs and girdle to match.

Among the latest compromise styles in dress skirts designed particularly for those who cannot or will not adopt the extreme models is one formed of graduated box plaits that reach from belt to hem, tapering to about two inches in width at the top.

Considerable use is made of machine stitched bands of the costume fabric on tailor suits of pique and linen. These are arranged upon the gown after the manner of the bands on cloth gowns, small white pearl buttons being substituted for those of gimp or bone.

Blue, white, pink and other daintily colored organdies, muslins, barèges and grenadines are effectively trimmed with ruches and ruffles of the dress fabric edged with black lace. On the bodice is a mixture of these decorations with bands of lace insertion, or very often there are yoke and sleeves of net matching the lace in design.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Mme. Bernhardt has played "La Tosca" 795 times.

Georgia Cayvan may reappear in Washington in a reproduction of "The Charity Ball."

E. S. Willard is still in bad health, and he has canceled his time in America for next season.

Upward of a million of pictures of Anna Held have been distributed in America during the past three years.

Dan Daly, David Warfield and Marie George may be seen in a new review which is to be produced in London.

David Belasco's two forthcoming plays are to be entitled "The Queen's Drawing Room" and "The Widow's Husband."

George W. Lederer has leased the Prince of Wales theater, London. The new Morton-Kerker production will be seen there.

Joseph Hatton's novel, "The Dagger and the Cross," is being dramatized for Robert B. Mantell, who expects to produce it before his present season ends.

From London comes the announcement that Mrs. James Brown Potter has been engaged permanently for Beerbohm Tree's company at Her Majesty's theater.

It is said that Bessie Tyree will leave the Lyceum company, where she has been for the past nine years, and will probably be with John Drew's company next season.

Rudyard Kipling is claimed by the drama as well as by poetry and romance. An adaptation of his book, "The Light That Failed," by Courtenay Thorpe, was produced during the Rosina Vokes era.

THE COOKBOOK.

Add a teaspoonful of sugar to every pint of milk when the milk is to be thickened with cornmeal.

The sweet red Spanish peppers cut into narrow strips are an excellent addition to celery salad and add both to the appearance and flavor.

If in using sour milk for cookies, griddle cakes or muffins it does not foam as it should when the soda is added, a teaspoonful of vinegar added to the milk will usually produce the desired result.

Bananas make delicate fritters used in combination with rice or cornstarch and served with lemon sauce. They may be combined also with pineapple, which furnishes the acid the bananas lack.

You can make the nicest piece of corned beef that was ever "corned" tough and indigestible by cooking it fast in water made to boil hard. If you want it as tender as it is possible for it to be, let the water come to a boil, skim and set the kettle on the back of the stove, where the contents will simmer gently, but constantly.

WRITERS AND PAINTERS.

General Lew Wallace is something of an orientalist and is just now improving himself in the language of modern Persia.

Vassili Verestchagin, the Russian painter, has opened in London an exhibition of his works in dealing with Napoleon's invasion of Russia in 1812.

An odd memorial is proposed for William Black. It is that a life saving station bearing the novelist's name be established on the west coast of Scotland.

Asked how he pronounced "Chanty" in the title of his poem, "The Last Chanty," Rudyard Kipling replied, "The really elegant pronounce it as it is spelled, but those who know what they are talking about call it 'Shanty.'"

William Henry Millais, elder and only brother of the late Sir John Everett Millais, president of the Royal academy, has just died. He was in his seventy-first year. Several of his pictures have been exhibited in the Royal academy.

Scotland seems a strange place to find a statue of Abraham Lincoln, and yet there is one there. It adorns a monument erected in old Calton burying ground, Edinburgh, to the memory of the Scottish Americans who fought in the American civil war.

Neither Could Read.

The late Mrs. Keeley, the actress, used to tell an anecdote of Queen Victoria on the occasion when she had the honor of being received by her majesty. On being presented she excused herself from making a low courtesy by saying, "Your majesty, I have rheumatism in my knees, and I cannot courtesy."

"Mrs. Keeley," replied the queen, "I can't, either." And the veteran actress was put at her ease by the homeliness of the remark and its common touch of nature, which made the two women kin.

Another Question.

"Pa, what sort of a house is that?"

"That, my son, is the blind asylum. Blind people live in there."

"They can't see, can they?"

"No, my boy."

"Then what has the house got windows for if they can't see?"

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters'; and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts. a bottle, every bottle guaranteed. COMING TO PETERBORO'.

The Toronto Civic Employees will Excurt to Peterborough on the First.

Peterborough is again to be the objective point of the annual excursion of the Civic Employees Association, of Toronto, and today a deputation from the committee which has the event in charge is in town to make arrangements for the outing. They will come on July 1st, and, as last time, will have sports and games, etc. The place where the programme will be run off has not been selected. The deputation which is here is composed of Messrs Thos Hilton, E J Hopkins and J Jordan, of the city commissioner's department.

Football.

WAS A GREAT DAY FOR AN OUTING

AND THE OLYMPIC EXCURSION WAS AN IMMENSE SUCCESS.

Fine Weather, Beautiful Scenery and Delightful Music Made Up All the Requisites for a Day's Outing—It Was a Jolly Party.

The tenth annual outing of the Olympic club was held yesterday, and, notwithstanding some of the jolliest and most pleasant days have been enjoyed in years past, yesterday's excursion was counted one of the best that has yet been held. There were about one hundred in the party, and all went in to enjoy the day. The excursion took its name from the Olympic club orchestra, under the auspices of which organization it was frist held. The Olympic club went the way of many other organizations, but its name still lives by reason of these successful annual excursions, which have been organized and managed by Mr. W. E. Lech. The business men of the town make this their annual outing, and throwing business to the winds for the day they go out for a day of fun and frolic.

Music has always been one of the features of the excursion, and this year it was indeed a pleasant factor in the success of the day. The 57th Battalion band, under Bandmaster Gliddon, accompanied the party, and they were not stingy with their music, which was of an excellent quality. A harper and violinist were also on board to vary the musical programme.

The party left here for Lakefield on the regular train. At Lakefield they boarded the steamer Majestic, which is spick and span and ready for the season with the popular Capt. Sutherland in command. The bright sunshine and balmy air made the sail delightful, the fresh verdure lending unusual beauty to the landscape. The islands of Stony lake were also looking their prettiest. At Young's Point the band awoke the reveries with inspiring music, and the populace turned out to give the excursionists a passing salute. From Young's Point the steamer ran to McCracken's Landing where a short stop was made. The Majestic then turned her head for Burleigh, which was reached about 12.30 o'clock. Host Frank Gretton had a most tempting bill-of-fare, excellently served, awaiting the appetites sharpened by the morning sail. Dinner over a jolly hour was spent before the party embarked for Buckhorn, where a short but pleasant stay was made. Returning to Burleigh tea was served, after which an hour of the greatest enjoyment was spent listening to a concert by the band. Here, too, His Honor Judge Weller took occasion to voice the sentiments of the entire party by referring to the debt they were under to Mr. W. E. Lech for arranging such a pleasant outing. His Honor moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Lech, which was seconded by Mr. A. P. Poussette, Q.C. The sentiment was carried with great enthusiasm and three hearty cheers for the "Chief Agitator," The homeward sail was then begun, and it was enjoyed immensely. Lakefield was reached about 10.30 and Peterborough about 11 o'clock, every one of the party voting the day one of the jolliest in his experience.

And the Little Boy Died—A Case in Durham County Where Christian Science Figured—A Coroner's Jury Find a Verdict on the Case.

There has been a great deal of interest in the death of the three-year-old son of Mr. Richard F. Beatty, year-ole son of Mr. Richard F. Beatty, of Elizabethville, near Garden Hill in East Durham, which occurred on Friday, May 26th, while under Christian Science treatment. The inquest was held at Elizabethville on Monday, May 29th, before Dr. R. A. Corebtt, Coroner, and an unusually intelligent jury.

The evidence, which is given in full, from the Port Hope Times, is certainly worthy of close attention, and the belief expressed by some of the witnesses is very remarkable.

Richard Francis Beatty sworn, said that he was the father of the deceased child, Henry Victor Beatty. The child was four years old in March last. He took ill on Thursday morning with croup. It was a mild form, and in the morning he was all right. He did not vomit and was not in a fever. Thursday night he coughed again aften the family was in bed, likely after twelve o'clock. The child was sleeping with the parents. On Friday morning he did not rally as he had the previous morning. He coughed a great deal. The witness did not notice he was red in the face particularly, but the child craved for drink. He did not vomit. No rash was noticed. In reply to the coroner's question, what was done for the child on Friday, he, witness said, that he telephoned for Mr. Brundrette but did not get him. The Mr. Brundrette referred to was Jos. Brundrett, tinsmith, of Port Hope. He then drove to Port Hope, arriving there in the forenoon. He saw Mr. Brundrett and returned here. He told Mr. Brundrett the child had croup. He told Mr. Brundrett to treat the child for croup. Mr. Brundrett did not come out to see the child. The child was not very sick but had a sort of bound up cough. He did know that he believed in disease. But the child made a noise and he thought it was croup. When he arrived home the child was worse. He did not know what he expected Mr. Brundrett would do, but thought that he would heal the boy. He could not say exactly how but through the power of truth. In reply to the Coroner's question what he meant by truth, the witness answered, "God." He expected Mr. Brundrett to heal the boy through God. He thought Mr. Brundrett had power to heal through God. The power did not heal the boy and he died. The child died after six o'clock. He could not say just when. He asked his wife how the boy was and she said he was sleeping. When the witness returned from Port Hope the child was worse, but no great change was noticed until he died. He coughed a great deal. Nothing was done for the child. When he found the child was worse he telephoned to Mr. Brundrett. He wanted Mr. Brundrett to relieve the child, and told him to come at once. Mr. Brundrett arrived about dark. Mr. Brundrett asked how he was, and the witness examined the child and found it dead.

Coroner—So the treatment was effectual. It cured him. Do you think you did your duty by that child?

Witness—I did the best I could. I would have spent my last cent to save him.

Coroner—Have you had this treatment before?

Witness—His three boys were all subject to croup, and Mr. Brundrett had treated and cured them. He supposed he did this through prayer.

Juror Lawson asked—Were friends allowed to do anything?

Witness—I do not know that any offered to do anything. The witness did not know really just when the child died within an hour or so. The mother was also with the child when it was dying. She could not realize that he was dead.

Witness further stated that when he returned from Port Hope the disease had turned into inflammation, as he supposed afterwards.

Mr. H. Beatty sworn, said—He knew his deceased nephew, Henry Victor Beatty. He saw him once during his illness, about nine o'clock on Friday morning. When he saw him his mother was nursing him. The child was in his mother's arms and breathing heavily. He coughed once while he was there and was relieved, breathing easier. He did not notice that the child was much flushed. He did not think the child was very sick. He fancied the child was suffering from an attack of croup. He did not see anything being done for the child. He did not know when the child died.

Jos. Brundrett sworn, said—I reside in Port Hope. I was interviewed by Mr. Beatty, who told me that he had telephoned for me and could not get me. He asked me to give the child treatment for croup. I did so. I came out but the child was dead. I gave the child Christian Science treatment—Christian Science absent treatment.

Coroner—Tell the jury in your own words just what you mean by the Christian Science absent treatment.

Mr. Brundrett—It would be very difficult to do that in a few words. It

LETTER FROM KIPLING.

His Touching Letter to a Friend Who Had Lost a Child.

Now that Rudyard Kipling is rapidly recovering from his terrible illness and is again making strides toward recovery his mind is said to revert almost too often for his physical welfare toward the child who passed through the gate of death while the father lingered on the threshold. What that father's keen grief must be it is not for the public to inquire, except in so far as to see whether the loss will give the author a new note of tenderness to his many-stringed lyre and add a much-needed tone to his songs.

The lovers of Kipling's works will not fail to recall the vivid picture drawn of Mulvaney's grief for the little one he had lost so many years before; an impressionistic picture given us in "The Courting Dinah Shadd."

Here, however, is a picture we may be sure is near to the life:

The little child of a gifted writer whom Mr. Kipling has aided to gain a place before the public, died, just when his father's success was won. Mr. Kipling immediately wrote a letter to the sorrow-stricken father, of which this is an extract:

"As to the matter which you have done me the honor to tell me, I can only sympathize most deeply and sorrowfully. People say that this kind of wound heals. It doesn't. It only skins over; but there is at least some black consolation to be got from the old and bitter thought that the boy is safe from the chances of the after years. I don't know that that helps, unless you happen to know some man who is under deeper sorrow than yours—a man, say, who has watched the child of his begetting go body and soul to the devil, and feels that he is responsible. But it is the mother that bore him who suffers most when the young life goes out."

The turning of the wheel of Time has given to these words a new and stronger significance.

A Novelist's Memory.

A characteristic of the late William Black was his ignorance of his own books, and it was very difficult to get him to talk about his novels. It seems that as soon as the proof-sheets were returned to the printers Mr. Black forgot all about his own creations. "In talking to my husband the other day," Mrs. Black once said to a visitor, "I suddenly remembered an anecdote in one of his novels which illustrated what I was saying. Mr. Black laughed heartily at the story, and then turned eagerly to me: 'But where did you hear so good a story?' My husband wouldn't believe it was in one of his own books until I found it for him."

Compressed Flour Bricks.

In England much interest is taken by the army and navy authorities in a new method of preserving flour by means of compression. With hydraulic pressure apparatus the flour is squeezed into the form of bricks and experiments are reported to have shown that the pressure destroys all forms of larval life, thus preserving the flour form the ravages of insects, while it is equally secure from mold.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Moths dislike the printing ink on newspapers, so woolen goods, furs, etc., should be enveloped in them when put away for the summer.

Lemons can be kept a considerable length of time—a couple of months even—in dry sawdust or sand. The sawdust must be inodorous.

Sprinkle salt immediately over any spot where something has boiled over on the stove, and the place may be more easily cleaned. This also counteracts the bad odor.

Hanging carpets on a line and beating them is declared by the economical to shorten their period of usefulness more than a month of ordinary wear. Lay them on the ground, wrong side up, and beat and sweep thoroughly on that side, then turn and do the same with the other.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

"There are higher, better, nobler things in life, Sybil, than the indulgence of first, wayward love. Little sister, you have been a careless, willful child; let sorrow make you a thoughtful, earnest woman. Do not let it close the gates of Heaven upon you; rather let it open them wide, for your mother waits you there. Look above it; stand on the heights where the air is calm and cool—where the breath of human passion never comes. Trample on it; learn the grandest lesson life teaches—to suffer and be strong."

The kindly, earnest face was sublime in its rapt expression of trust and endurance.

"What became of him—your lover?" asked Sybil, suddenly.

"I have never heard his name for six years," she replied. "His mother died in my arms, and the Grange has been closed ever since. Alan was very angry with me, Sybil. He could not forgive my refusal. He never wrote to me, or sent me any message. We have been strangers all these years. Sybil to-night, all night through, remember my words. Do not let my sacrifice be in vain."

And as the door closed behind that noble sister, Sybil knelt in the moonlight and prayed.

Knowing the fate that hung over her, angels might have wept as the golden head was bent in supplication.

It was a child-like prayer, and the innocent face grew peaceful when it was ended. Her resolve was taken. She would tell Lyster that she could never deceive her father; he must go away again, and leave it to time. Then she would tell her father how they had met, and so found peace. Irene's sacrifice should not be in vain. She fell asleep with prayers on her lips—the last happy sleep she was to know.

She did not quite remember how the next day passed. She was weak and worn with the long struggle—the vibration between brightest joy and deepest sorrow. She firmly believed that the resolve to do her duty lay deep in her heart, yet she must see him once more, tell him to wait patiently, and bid him good-bye.

They were very gentle to her on this the last day she spent in her father's house. The squire went out to dine, and Irene sat by the sofa, reading and talking the greater part of the afternoon.

As the evening came on she grew strangely restless; her face flushed, then turned deadly pale. She hated the deception, yet said to herself it was for the last time; it was to end all. The golden flush of the setting sun faded out of the sky, the flowers closed their dewy eyes, the birds with folded wings called the wanderers home to their nests, the south wind died away in sweet murmurs, when the unhappy girl went out to her doom.

She kissed the sister who had watched her all day, saying that she was going out for a short time and should go straight to her room when she returned.

"Say good-night to papa for me," she said; "and, Irene, mind you come and see me the last thing. I shall not sleep without."

As Irene saw her then, she remembered her for years afterward. Her dress of dark-blue silk, with its pretty trimmings of white lace—the golden chain around her slender throat—the golden bracelets on her rounded arms—the tender smile on her beautiful face.

"Put on a cloak if you are going into the gardens," said Irene; "the evening air will be damp."

Then the door closed—and long years passed before the sisters looked upon each other again.

Sybil went hastily up into her own room, and took from the wardrobe a bonnet and a purple cloak. As she was going down-stairs she met one of the servants, who noticed her dress, but made no comment upon it.

The south wind came whispering to her, the dew lay thick upon the grass and flowers as she walked with rapid steps through the gardens, across the park, and into the Glynn Woods.

Was there no warning in the solemn night skies, or in the murmur of the trees? The giant arms might have been fingers upraised to warn her; but she went on, resolved to do right—to say good-bye to Lyster and then return.

He who reads all hearts knows she had no other intention. She went down the broad glades, trampling the dew-laden grass and flowers under foot, until she saw him.

He came forward to meet her with a glad cry. She stayed him with her uplifted hand.

"Lyster," she said, "I am come to tell you it can not be. I must not leave my father and Irene. So we must part again; and, in time, with faith and hope, it will all come right."

He gave a little sigh, thinking to himself that he had all the weary way of persuasion to go over again, swearing that she should not escape him.

He knew his own power over her. He feigned submission; looked broken-hearted for a few minutes; then spoke of bidding her farewell. Any one but a child must have seen through his artifice. He kissed her and caressed her with all the passion he knew so well how to feign. He called her by every endearing name. He used such loving words to her, that her heart thrilled as with sweetest music. Then he spoke of what he would do—go abroad, and do his best to die there. Life had no charm for him; and he would not cause dissension between her and those who loved her. She should not sacrifice home and wealth for him.

He touched her there, and she broke down, crying that he was her love, and she would sacrifice the whole world for him. Then she told him of the squire's resolve that they should travel together; and Lyster Ayrton saw if he did not win her that night she was lost to him forever.

It was a sad, pitiful story—the fair, passionate child, so weak, yet so strong; so fond of him, yet so anxious to do right. Little by little, long before she knew it herself, he saw that she was giving way.

The night was falling around them, dark and still; they had walked through Glynn Woods, and the high-road lay before them. She forgot how late it was—forgot that she was far from home and everything else, save with her whole heart she loved the man by her side!

Let him answer for it when all men shall be judged—for the persuasions, the entreaties, the passionate caresses, the burning words, that led her astray—that made her deaf to the voice of her own heart—forgetful of everything save him!

He won her at last—he bewildered her with his love and his prayers. There, at the turn of the road, he showed her a chaise waiting for them. A drive of sixteen miles would bring them to the Molesworth—the busiest junction far or near. There they could take the train for London, and be married in the morning. They would return, if she liked, to-morrow, to Glynn. Once married, he told her, the squire would be certain to forgive them.

She went. The dew lying upon the flowers might have been tears, the whisper of the wind might have been sighs. Half shrinking, wholly irresolute—his strong will overpowering hers—the squire's darling turned from her home, to link her fate with that of one of the most worthless of men! Weeping as though her girlish heart would break, yet smiling through her tears—thinking of the father she was leaving and of the sister whose sacrifice had been in vain—yet clinging with her tender hands to the strong arm holding her—she passed from Glynn Woods and went to her fate.

CHAPTER XVI.

THEY WERE MARRIED.

Was it chance that led the squire to stay out so late that evening—a most unusual thing for him—and gave to Irene a book that beguiled time so quickly for her that for the moment she forgot the sister so seldom out of her thoughts? Believing Sybil to be in her own room, she did not disturb herself until the squire's loud ring at the outer door startled her. His first inquiry, as usual, was for Sybil; and the elder sister told him she had been in her room some time.

"I am determined to start to-morrow," said the squire. "I met Charley Neville about five minutes ago; he was coming home from Molesworth; and he tells me he saw Captain Ayrton to-night, driving in a chaise. He must be going to Ling, for Charley says he had a lady with him."

To the last day of her life Irene could never account for the impulse that made her leave the squire and go at once to her sister's room.

She rapped once at the door—there was no answer. She went in—it was quite empty! By the light of the taper in her hand, she saw that no one had disturbed it that night.

"Sybil!" she said, gently.

Then waited for an answer.

None came save the tapping of the ivy-leaves blown against the window. She looked round the pretty white chamber—there was no trace of her sister's presence. She opened the dressing-room door—no Sybil greeted her.

Then a cold horror fell upon Irene Jocelyn as she stood in the lonely chamber—a cold, awful terror that made her heart beat wildly, and clinched her hands in fear.

"Merciful powers!" she cried. "Am I dreaming or mad? Where is she gone?"

There was no sign of disarray. The toilet-table, with its pretty jewel-case, was untouched.

"Sybil!" she cried again, her voice weak with dismay.

And again the tapping of the ivy was the only sound.

She walked back to the drawing-room with steady steps. The squire looked up with a smile as she entered and then cried out as he saw her face ashen white, her eyes full of unutterable dread. She went up to him and laid her hand upon his arm.

"Papa," she said, "I am much frightened. Sybil is not in her room! She went out after dinner—out into the grounds—and told me she would go straight to her room; and asked me to go in to kiss her before I went to sleep."

He answered never a word, but took the taper from her hand and went straight to her room. No, she was not there. Loving voices called her, loving eyes searched for her—all in vain!

"I will go out into the grounds," said the squire. And they went together, the terrible fear lying like a cold dead weight on both—yet neither dare put it into words. The moon shone out clear and bright while father and daughter trod the green path where her light steps would stray no more.

Carefully as they looked there was no sign of her. Once when a moonbeam fell on some tangled golden gorse the squire started, for he thought it was Sybil's hair. They went into every room trying to hope she might have fallen asleep—it was all in vain!

Then the squire and his daughter looked at each other, and the terrible fear found vent in words.

"Is she gone with him, Irene?" asked the squire, hoarsely, "Was she the lady Charley Neville saw with that cursed villain?"

She tried to soothe him, to stop the burning torrent of rage that seemed driving him to frenzy. She had better have tried to stop the flowing of the tide. He was mad with wounded love—with outraged honor—with sorrow and despair. The first foul blot of shame had fallen on his house, and it was his best-loved child brought it there.

He did not speak again to the pale, weeping woman who followed him. In less than ten minutes the groom was aroused, and the squire was riding for dear life on the road to Molesworth.

There he learned the truth. One of the porters knew Captain Ayrton, and described accurately the lady with him, who wore a purple cloak. They had gone by the mail train to London, and no other train left the junction until morning. It was too late for pursuit—for anything but despair.

Hours afterward the squire opened his eyes, and found himself lying in bed, his right arm bandaged, his head aching, and stiff with a severe wound. Sir Rupert stood by him, and Irene knelt by his side.

"You fell," said Sir Rupert, in answer to his look of surprise and interrogation. "You fell on the platform and they fetched me."

The whole sense of his calamity rushed over him.

"Is it true?" he cried. "Tell me—is it true?"

"You have a daughter left," said Sir Rupert: but the squire turned his face away, weeping, as one who had no hope, for the best-loved darling he had lost.

He recovered slowly, but Squire Jocelyn was never himself again after that fatal night. Time neither healed nor softened his wound. There, where he had garnered all his hopes, he was stricken and betrayed.

Gloom, that never lessened, settled over Glynn. It was as though the sun had ceased to shine. Servants went about with noiseless steps, and spoke in whispers. Friends and neighbors rarely intruded on grief each one held sacred.

They had not been long in suspense. Two mornings after, a long letter came from Sybil—a long, loving letter, all blotted with tears.

She was married; they had been married at St. Pancras's Church, and all she wanted to make her the happiest of all human beings was her darling father's love, blessing and pardon, and Irene's forgiveness. She pleaded for it with sweet, earnest words, but the squire's face never softened as he read.

"She chose between us," he said, "and she preferred him. She must keep to her bargain; write and tell her so, Irene."

No kindly words of pardon went from Glynn to the girl who longed for them. The squire bade his daughter repeat his vow—that no money, no help, no aid should go from him to the wife of Lyster Ayrton.

At intervals long letters came from her, but the squire never read or answered them. He sat much alone, disliking all conversation, brooding over the wrong done him by the man who had stolen from him his darling child. What he suffered in those lonely hours none will ever know. He grew more feeble—deeper lines came on his kindly face. Once or twice Irene, bending over him, heard a muttered curse as he slept.

So weeks, months, and years passed, bringing no change or gladness to Glynn.

* * * *

In a pretty little villa on the Highgate hills Lyster Ayrton had taken apartments for his wife. She wanted to be in the city, nearer to his club, and the barracks—thinking, poor child, she should see him oftener; but he persuaded her that he liked Highgate best, and she consented.

They had been married a week, and Lyster Ayrton began to weary of domestic bliss. He had been very attentive during that week, never leaving Sybil, lavishing love and kisses upon her.

AUSTIN'S SENSATION.

Ex-Principal of Alma College, St. Thomas, Comes Out Flat-Footed in Favor of Modern Spiritualism.

Windsor, Ont., June 2.—The trial of Rev. Dr. B. F. Austin, ex-principal of Alma College, St. Thomas, on a charge of heresy, before the London conference, in session at Windsor yesterday, proved to be very sensational. Dr. Austin threw a bomb into the conference by declaring himself in unequivocal terms an ardent believer in modern spiritualism. Four charges of heresy were some time ago preferred against Dr. Austin by Rev. A. H. Going of Port Stanley. The most important charge was upholding a fraudulent system of spiritualism, and on this and two others Dr. Austin was found guilty by a committee of the St. Thomas district, and suspended until the next meeting of conference. Dr. Austin did not appear before this committee, but sent a brief written defence.

Defends Modern Spiritualism.

At yesterday's session he was on hand, and delivered a three-hours' address in his defence. He dismissed with a few words the minor charges brought against him, and proceeded with an elaborate explanation and defence of modern spiritualism. He quoted authority after authority in support of his plea that spiritualism is sanctioned by Bible teaching. He gave a number of his own personal experiences, which he claimed had converted him to the doctrine.

Saw a Mindreader.

He had, he said, visited a woman mindreader in Detroit, and the information she gave him concerning himself convinced him that the science was not to be lightly treated. "You may say that spiritualism is the work of the devil," said Dr. Austin. "That's an easy disposition to make of the matter, but it does not prove anything."

His concluding words were: "I may fall in this fight, I may have to abandon the old religion for a broader one, but the truth that I advocate will soon be recognized by the world."

Interrupted With Ridicule.

Throughout his address Dr. Austin was continually interrupted with words of ridicule by some brother minister, and several attempts were made to have him discontinue his remarks. The chair had a difficult time maintaining order, so great was the opposition to the speaker. When he had finished, one or two ministers, personal friends of Dr. Austin, started a mild applause, but were met with loud hisses and cries of "Shame!" from all over the building.

Austin Deposed.

After some deliberation the conference, with but two dissenting votes, passed the following resolution, proposed by Revs. J. R. Gundy and Joseph Deacon: "That the charges preferred against Dr. Austin, having been sustained and proved, that he be deposed from the ministery of the Methodist Church."

Dr. Austin made a brief address, in which he said he had but voiced the convictions of an honest man. He declared that he had no enmity against any member of the conference, and wished Methodism every success.

MOTHER KILLED BABY.

Mrs. Jewitt of Toronto Junction Committed Murder and Then Suicided.

Newmarket, Ont., June 1.—Mrs. S. Jewett of West Toronto Junction has been in bad health for a length of time, and, with her three children, has been visiting with her brother, Mr. Bert Starr, living near Pine Orchard, about five miles east of Newmarket. On Thursday morning the sister, Miss Starr, went to the cellar to attend to her ordinary duties, and left Mrs. Jewett washing her baby. When Miss Starr came out of the cellar she went into the woodshed, and was horrified to find the body of the child, which was about six months' old, lying with its head crushed. The blow had evidently been given by the axe, which lay near by. Miss Starr immediately ran to her brother in the barn, and found that Mrs. Jewett had sent the other two children to the barn to hunt eggs, saying that she would soon follow them. Search was then made for the mother, but it was not until noon that her body was found under a bridge over a small creek behind the barn. She had drowned herself in a few inches of water. Temporary insanity is supposed to be the cause of the tragedy. Coroner Scott of this town has received instructions to hold an inquest on the body of the child to-morrow.

Who Mrs. Jewitt Was.

Mrs. Jewett was the daughter of the late James Starr of Pine Orchard. She had been married about 12 years, and was Mr. Jewett's second wife. She had three children, all girls, the eldest being five years old. Ever since the birth of the youngest child Mrs. Jewett has been very melancholic. She was known to sit for hours and gaze intently into the child's face.

A SAD DROWNING.

Little Current, Ont., June 2.—A boat containing Mr. Fred. Willis, his wife, two children and John Griffith capsized near the mouth of the Whitefish River yesterday morning, drowning Willis and both children. Griffith and Mrs. Willis clung to the upturned boat until the tug Maggie May picked them up, after being in the water an hour and a half. The children's bodies were found on the beach some time after.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.
Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheldon, February 28th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

Children Cry for CASTORIA.

took me years to study it. It would be like giving in a few words the effect of a medical education. Further questioned, he said he prayed for the child. He believed that prayer would cure disease. He believed in disease. If he did not believe in disease what would be the use of trying to heal it?

Coroner—You believe that you can heal disease?

Mr. Brundrett—No. I believe that God has the power to heal through human agencies, through the power of prayer. He had been practicing Christian Science for some time. He believed he had the power to heal through God. His experience gave him every reason to believe this. In this case his prayers were not answered apparently.

Lawson—Do you believe in medical treatment?

Mr. Brundrett—No.

Lawson—Do you believe in this Christian Science in case of a broken limb?

Mr. Brundrett—I have proved it in my own case. The "absent" and "present" treatment were the same. Sometimes the present treatment seemed to be more effectual.

Mr. Tamblyn, foreman of the jury.—Do you receive remuneration?

Witness—Sometimes I do.

Juror—Did you in this case?

Witness—Mr. Beatty gave me a dollar, but he said he owed it to me.

Juror—Was it for similar work?

Witness—Yes. I have no knowledge of disease.

Coroner asked if he would treat a broken limb the same as brain fever.

Witness said he would not in his business do one job the same way he would do another. He would treat it mentally. He treated the deceased boy once at noon on Friday. The fact of his getting money had nothing to do with the treatment.

Juror Lawson—Was it through your influence that Mr. Beatty became a Christian Scientist?

Witness—Through his being healed by a Christian Scientist. We ought to know that God is always the same, the witness replied to a juror who asked if he knew whether a treatment would be effective or not. Mary Baker G. Eddy, of Boston, was the originator of the Christian Science doctrine. He did not know whether she was a Yankee. She was the discoverer of the science of Christian healing. She published a key to the Bible. He did not believe the key was greater than the Bible. The key could not be greater than the door. He accepted her teaching on Christian Science.

Juror Lawson—If Mr. Beatty had other children ill would you treat them in the same way. If the results were fatal would you continue this treatment indefinitely?

Mr. Brundrett replied to this by asking if medical treatment failed in his case would he condemn it.

A juror asked why he had not given the child a second treatment.

Witness said he came out to do so.

Juror—In croup there is a material substance in the throat—can it be removed by prayer?

Mr. Brundrett—God is all-powerful.

A juror asked if belief was a necessary factor in a cure?

Witness—No.

A juror thought that a child knowing nothing about Christian Science, might not be controlled by it.

Witness—The treatment has always proved more effective in the case of children.

Coroner—Do you not know that this child's life was thrown away by neglect and carelessness?

Mr. Brundrett—I am not aware of any such thing.

Coroner—You must be aware of it. The child was allowed to die without anything being done for it. If your prayers could save it, why did you not pray unceasingly?

Mrs. James Wilson sworn, said—She knew the deceased child, Henry Victor Beatty. He was her grandchild. She saw him on Friday between three and four o'clock when he was dying. She had not seen him before during his illness. He breathed with difficulty, making a noise. She was not there when the child died.

Juror—Did you propose anything for the child?

Witness—No.

Coroner—You are not a believer in this humbug.

Witness—No. When my children have croup I send for a doctor.

Juror—Do you think you could have saved it.

Witness—I thought the child was dying but I did not ask to send for a doctor because I knew it would be no use.

Mrs. John Beatty sworn, said:—The deceased Henry Victor Beatty was a grandson of mine. Sometime on Friday afternoon and the previous evening I saw the child. Thursday the child seemed to be choaking. Friday it appeared to be breathing heavy as if the disease was in its lungs. I had not seen much croup but thought that was the disease which affected the child. Friday I did not think the child was very bad. I did not examine his throat. I left for home about five o'clock on Friday. I did not see the child again until Saturday. I did not hear of the child's death until Saturday morning. I did not think the child had inflammation. I did not suggest any treatment.

Dr. Beatty sworn, said he knew, the deceased Henry Victor Beatty and examined his body after death on Saturday afternoon. It was his opinion that the child died of scarlet fever, complicated with other diseases.

The verdict was as follows:

It is the opinoin of your jurors that the child, Henry Victor Beatty, died through neglect, caused by a belief in Christian Science and under the treatment of Joseph Brundrett, tinsmith, of the town of Port Hope, a Christian Scientist; and it is also the opinion of your jurors that the Government should enact a law to prohibit the practice of this so called Christian Science.

The Conference Elections.

The election of the president at the Bay of Quinte Conference, the result of which was reported by the REVIEW yesterday, was a matter of great interest, but it was speedily settled, only one ballot being necessary. The election stood :—W R Young, B A, of Port Hope, 113 ; Dr Crothers, Napanee, 54 ; Dr Dyer, Belleville, 12 ; and J C Wilson, Brighton, 11 ; with a few scattering votes.

Rev J J Rae was elected secretary on first ballot. Rev S J Shorey and Mr R W Clarke are assistants for Peterborough.

PILES FOR 15 YEARS.

Mr. Jas. Bowles, Councillor, Embro, Ont., writes: "For over 15 years I suffered the misery of bleeding, protruding piles. The many remedies I tried all failed. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and must say that the first application gave relief, after the third day the bleeding stopped and two boxes cured me completely."

First the bud, then the blossom, then the perfect fruit. These are the several stages of some of the most important ingredients composing the painless and sure corn cure-- Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. The juices of plants greatly concentrated and purified, gums and balsams in harmonious union, all combined give the grand results. Putnam's Extractor makes no sore spot, does not lay a man up for a week, but goes on quietly doing its work until a perfect cure results. Beware of acid substitutes.

They Looked Alike.

A prominent South Side minister relates an experience which he had the other night in a street car while he was returning home.

There was but one other passenger in the car, a jovial looking man, who sat in one corner with his hat pulled down to shade his eyes. The minister felt that the other man was watching him, but every time he turned his eyes in that direction the passenger was looking out of the window and smiling. Finally their glances met, and the pleasant looking passenger kept his eyes fixed on the minister's face, scrutinizing him carefully. The minister coughed and looked embarrassed, and then the other man, looking a little sheepish, came over and, sitting down beside him, extended a hand at the same time saying:

"Stranger, I've been thinking that we look so much alike we'd ought to get acquainted." The minister smiled and shook the hand, and they soon were chatting like old friends. As the stranger rose to leave the car he passed out a card, saying:

"Come around when you're down my way."

After he had gone the minister glanced at the card and read after the man's name: "Wines, liquors and cigars. The coziest place on the South Side."

He Was Careful of His Voice.

Brignoli, the famous tenor, was very susceptible to flattery, and it is said that once in New York, when the orchestra vigorously applauded one of his favorite songs, he was so touched that he came down to the footlights and invited them all to a champagne supper at the Everett House. The supper cost him $500.

Brignoli was very careful of his voice and was terribly afraid of drafts.

It was once stated that during the winter it always took him three-quarters of an hour to get from his room to the street.

First, he would, on leaving his room, pace the hall for ten minutes to get acclimated. He then descended to the lobby, where the temperature was a little lower, and spent 20 minutes there. He then ventured to the vestibule, from which the door opened into the street. He would parade the vestibule for 15 minutes, occasionally opening the door to let in a little cold air. Being now accustomed to a cool temperature, he would button up his coat and sally forth.—National Magazine.

Where the Funds Went.

As an instance of the happy go lucky character of the early darky the following extract from the Albany city records may prove interesting:

"In 1826 the trustees of the African Baptist church applied to the common council for permission to circulate a public subscription paper in aid of the funds of the church. It was moved to lay the petition on the table, pending investigation, for the reason that the principal part of the funds secured by a previous subscription for the African church had been used by the trustees in 'treating themselves to hot suppers.' "—Albany Argus.

A Professional Opinion.

"That young Pellet has altogether too exalted an opinion of his profession. When old Borax was out of town, the Gridleys called Pellet. Jane Gridley asked him if he thought he could pull her father through. 'I trust, madam,' he severely replied, 'to be able to parry the shafts of death!' "

"Parry the shafts of death! Say, that's good. Why, Pellet couldn't parregoric!"

Palpably Unjust.

"Millie, dear, what is your papa's objection to me?"

"He says you don't seem to have any definite object or purpose in life, Harry."

"Yet he knows I've been coming to see you for five straight years!"—Chicago Tribune.

It is customary in the town of Quito, when a visitor takes off his hat upon entering a room, to beg him to put it on again, and, in the absence of permission, leave is generally requested. This, it is said, arises from apprehension that cold will be taken by remaining uncovered.

Emergency Sale of

Water Damaged Goods

AT THE GOLDEN LION.

By the bursting of a water pipe on the night of the 30th, ulto., a large quantity of our Reserve Stock in the Second, First and Basement Stories were damaged by the flood of water. These goods consist principally of 400 yards of DRESS GOODS and DRESS LININGS.

1500 yards of TOWELLING, together with quantities of TOWELLS, SKIRTS, LINENS, SHIRT WAIST SILKS, ETC.

A considerable portion of these goods are only slightly damaged by moisture and sustain little or no damage for general utility or wear.

As it is imperatively necessary that an immediate disposal of these goods must be made, we have decided to make a quick clearance by holding an Emergency Sale which will be continued during

Friday, Saturday and Monday

JUNE 2, 3 and 5.

This means that about HALF PRICE will have to be accepted in many instances and that we must be content to stand the loss ourselves. We can't afford to hesitate about the sacrifices that must be made in prices, no matter how severe the loss, in order to make a swift clearance as crowds are sure to take advantage of this sale. Capital chances for large buyers.

FILIPINOS WERE AT THE BALL

Many Beautiful Ladies Arrayed in Gorgeous Attire.

The American Ball One of the Most Brilliant Social Functions Ever Given in Manila—The Chief of Jolo Professes Friendship for the Americans and an Annual Subsidy—The War Far From Over.

Manila, June 3.—The United States Philippine commission last night gave one of the most brilliant balls Manila has ever seen. It was one of a series of entertainments intended to foster friendship between the Americans and the natives. The commission has the handsomest residence in Manila, overlooking the harbor. The grounds surrounding it were illuminated, while the house itself was decorated with the American colors. The newly-appointed judges, General Otis, a number of other American officers and many wealthy natives were present. There was a display of gorgeous native toilets and many jewels were worn, and the array of handsome women surprised the Americans. There was a long program and Filipino dances, followed by the rendering of several intrumental selections.

Waste $12,000 Annually.

Manila, June 3.—United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, who came to the Philippines some time ago, has made a fortnight's trip in the southern islands, visiting Iloilo, Negros and Cebu. During his tour he talked with the chief of Jolo, who has 2,000 fighting men under his command and who professes friendship for America, which friendship, he hinted, might be strengthened by the continuance of the annual subsidy of $12,000 formerly paid by the Spaniards. Senator Beveridge will leave here on Saturday. He intends to travel in China.

The War Far From Over.

San Francisco, Cal., June 3.—Brigadier-General Charles King, who returned home from Manila on the transport City of Puebla because of ill-health, in an interview says: "The situation in the Philippines is most serious. The people of those islands will keep up a guerilla warfare and there is no telling when the hostilities will cease. When they are whipped they retire to the jungles. Subsisting on practically nothing, they have no need for a base of supplies. It will necessitate a large force of men to subjugate them completely. The war in the Philipines is by no means ended."

NEW SPANISH CORTES OPEN.

The Speech Referred to "Sorrows Which Have Wrenched Our Hearts."

Madrid, June 3.—The Queen Regent yesterday opened the Cortes with the usual ceremonial, and in the speech from the throne announced that the Marianne, Caroline and Palaos Islands were ceded to Germany by the late Spanish Cabinet.

During the course of the speech Her Majesty said: "At the opening of the Cortes all the sorrows which have wrenched our hearts, through the disasters which have visited our country, are reawakened. We must preserve sadness in order to derive experience therefrom, but the woes of our country are of such nature that reticence and silence avail better than complaints. When peace with the United States was concluded Parliamentary troubles caused a change of Cabinet, and the present Cabinet was formed. Under the constitution it belonged to me to ratify the treaty by laying it before the Chamber. There remained under our control the Carolines, Palaos and most of the Marianne Islands. But the former Cabinet believed it useless for Spain to retain such minor appendages of our ancient empire and signed with the German Emperor a convention offering to cede those territories under the law which will be submitted immediately to the Chamber.

Foreign Relations Friendly.

"Our foreign relations are cordial and friendly. We specially owe to the Pope recognition of the many times he has given us his moral support.

"The most important, most urgent and most difficult task before you is to balance the budget and liquidate the debts resulting from the war, through ordinary and permanent sources of income. Thanks to the severely economic policy projected, the Government will not ask fresh sacrifices of the country, except such as can be equitably divided among all classes.

"With the ordinary budget will also be presented schemes to liquidate the charges created by the loss of possessions and colonial campaigns."

The Financial Burdens.

The Queen Regent then referred to the financial measures and expressed confidence that the nation would show the same resignation during peace as it showed during the war, adding: "For the times are critical and it is impossible during the present session to do all that is necessary, but during the next session there will be projects for the reorganization of the army and navy, based on obligatory service; for improving the public services, decentralizing the provincial and municipal administrations, and reforming the penal code and electoral laws, etc., etc."

American Journals Still Slating the Dominion of Canada.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in His Reply Says They Have Been Apprised of the Progress of Home Office and Washington Negotiations Concerning the Alaska Boundary, and He Will Be Glad When Daylight Will Be Permitted to Shine on Them.

Ottawa, June 3.—Sir Charles Tupper in the House yesterday said that with the permission of the House he would read a telegram which had just been received from London on a very important question which he was sure would interest the House. He then read The Montreal Star's special cable from London:

Still Abusing Canada.

London, June 2.—(Montreal Star Special.)—The Times and other New York and Washington telegrams continue to abuse Canada for daring to reject the agreement between Lord Salisbury and Mr. Choate regarding the Alaska boundary, after the rising of the joint high commission in February. What the British public would like much to know is whether Canada was fully consulted in the negotiation of this agreement. If not, Canada will receive much sympathy here. As The Outlook says to-day:

"The British public feel that the day has gone by when any self-governing British colony can be dragooned into a settlement in which it has no say. Canada is no serf, is not even a child. She is a junior partner and has a junior partner's rights, the last word being always with the senior partner.

"Mr. Smalley and his Washington friends would ignore this if they could, but it remains a central fact in the administration of the British Empire."

A full official Canadian statement is greatly needed to meet the allegations with which Washington telegrams are prejudicing opinion against Canada.

Sir Wilfrid's Reply.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—I am happy to say, and, indeed, I will surprise nobody in this House by stating that the British authorities, the Foreign Office, through the Colonial Office, has kept us fully informed of the negotiations between the Foreign Office and the American ambassador at the Court of St. James. Nothing would give me greater pleasure than to be in a position to place before the House and the Canadian public the whole of the negotiations and the views we have expressed upon the questions referred to us. But, as my hon. friend knows, I am not in a position to state anything at this moment. I noticed particularly the ending words of the quotation from The Star which has just been read by my hon. friend, that a full official statement coming from the Canadian side of this question would be much appreciated in England. I can fully appreciate that sentiment, and wish we were in a position to make such a statement, and I believe if we were, a good deal of the anxiety which prevails in some quarters would be relieved at the same time. I believe, also, that a good deal of the clouds which apparently surround this question, and the sentiment more or less unfriendly which has been elicited in some quarters, would also be removed. But so long as the negotiations continue it is quite certain I will not be in a position to give out anything to the public. I may say, however, that, as the question of the Yukon boundary has been removed by the conference itself from the questions with which it had to deal, and referred to the respective Governments, British and American, and that, therefore, so far as the commission is concerned, that matter is no longer pending before the commission, I am not without hope, before the session is over, that the last protocol on the conference may be laid on the table. Of course, I need not remind the House, with all the other questions which are pending before the conference at this moment, it would not be possible to give in publicity what took place, but this one particular question, as it is no longer among the subjects to be treated by the conference, and, therefore, or so far as it goes, the negotiations are closed, that is so far as the conference is concerned, I may say, for my part, I have no objection. On the contrary, I see a good deal to be said in favor of having the true position placed before the public as it was when we adjourned the conference.

Tips In Austrian Cafes.

The head waiter institution is among the odd customs of Austria. In every hotel, restaurant, cafe or other resort where food or drinks are sold there is a functionary who goes about among the guests, as they summon him with the word "bezahlen," and collects the pay for what they have drunk or eaten. Each man tips him to the extent of 5 or 10 per cent of the bill. No other waiter can receive any money except a personal tip. The head waiter gets no salary for his services. On the contrary, he often pays the proprietor a good sum for the place. He is held responsible for everything—eatables, drinkables, crockery, glassware, silverware; in hotels, even for room rent, carriage hire and broken windows. His compensation comes from the tips, which sometimes amount to many thousands of guldens a year (a gulden or florin is equivalent to 40 cents).

For many years the Indians of the Yaqui (Mex.) gold country have sold gold to traders, but it has been impossible to determine how rich the deposits are.

Purely Vegetable.

First the bud, then the blossom, then the perfect fruit. These are the several stages of some of the most important ingredients composing the painless and sure corn cure— Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. The juices of plants greatly concentrated and purified, gums and balsams in harmonious union, all combined give the grand results. Putnam's Extractor makes no sore spot, does not lay a man up for a week, but goes on quietly doing its work until a perfect cure results. Beware of acid substitutes.

Water In the Eucalyptus Tree.

A death from thirst was recently reported in one of the Sydney papers. The following day a correspondent wrote pointing out that in the eucalyptus forests of Australia no one should die of thirst, as all the young trees contain, even in the hottest and driest season, a never failing supply of very drinkable water. This can be obtained by cutting them into convenient lengths, say 12 feet to 15 feet, and standing them perpendicularly with the small ends down, a vessel being placed underneath to catch the water. From a quarter to half a pint may be got in this way in 15 minutes from a sapling or young tree of three inches or four inches in diameter.—Westminster Gazette.

Smoking Vampires.

Henry Adams of Wichita, Kan., tells this story of the favorite amusement of Americans at the clubs in the City of Mexico:

Frequently in the evenings the vampires, or blood sucking bats, fly into the open windows of the clubrooms. The Americans then close the doors and catch the bat by throwing a shawl over it. One of the men lights a cigarette, opens the bat's mouth and inserts the cigarette therein. The creature is then turned loose. Its soft mouth contracting closely, the cigarette is immediately seized firmly.

Every time the bat breathes it draws in the smoke and then exhales it. Thus, flying around the room, smoking the cigarette wildly and puffing out clouds of smoke, it presents a strange appearance. The smoke generally kills the bat before the cigarette is all smoked up.

ONTARIO'S DISGRACE.

If ever a province was in need of a change of rulers it is Ontario. Ontario would benefit in a dozen ways from a cleaning out at Toronto. The men who are in power are not only bungling in their policy, but they are adding to their iniquitous machine system the most outrageous organization for corruption and fraud in election campaigns.

Ontario's condition has called forth the following strong reference from the Montreal Gazette :—

Judicial disgust with Ontario's rotten political system is increasing. Last summer more than one member of the Bench, when called by duty to preside at the farce of a saw-off, spoke out his mind in a manner that should have awakened whatever sense of shame lay dormant in those responsible for the travesty of the forms of law. Another kind of corruption was dealt with by Justices Osler and Rose, who presided at the South Ontario election trial. In the course of the proceedings the veil was lifted from a corner of what seemed to be a wholesale scheme of corrupting the venal voters, and then the case was dropped under circumstances which caused Mr Justice Osler to declare that it revolted him "to be obliged "practically to stop where the investigators "choose to stop, with the reporting of a few "trifling creatures who would take $5." Mr Justice Rose said :—

"In the present case it is manifest that those that controlled the fund and manipulated the transactions are not brought before the court, and will probably escape punishment unless some other proceedings are instituted. But we are powerless. The statute gives us no inquisitorial powers, and it has not placed at our command any funds for the investigation, and when the stage has been reached when it is apparent that the seat must be declared vacant, it seems to me that it would be cruel to continue the trial at the expense of the parties immediately concerned. Where the candidate is shown to be guilty personally, then of course a severe punishment falls upon him for the acts of others, and that punishment becomes greater every hour the court sits."

Mr Blake, who appeared as one of the counsel, intimated that, though the case in its then present phase would close with the unseating of the respondent, other proceedings could be taken to punish the bribers, which brought from the bench the retort : "The court has frequently reported that the "gravest reason existed for making an in-"quiry, and their report was stuffed away "in a pigeon hole in the Parliament build-"ings."

The judges of the Ontario High Court of Justice are rightly regarded as among the foremost men in the Canadian judiciary. When they speak in such terms it is because there is grave reason for the reproach. What they have said, both in this South Ontario case and others that have been brought before them, is the cumulation of testimony that the sentiment which should enforce the law against corrupt elections is either entirely absent or so weak as to be ineffective. Otherwise reports of judges calling for the punishment of election bribers would not be "stuffed away in a pigeon hole in the Parliament buildings" at Toronto. Not only this present case, but scores and scores that have preceded it, during the last twenty-five years, establish that the Ontario electorate is the most corrupt in Canada, and that is one reason why the present Ministers, who refuse to do their duty in punishing corruption, have been so long in power.

THE SOUTH ONTARIO CASES.

THE Toronto Globe has an editorial article dealing with "corruption in elections," called forth by a letter from a correspondent who refers to the South Ontario cases, where first a Tory and then a Grit was unseated for corruption by agents. The correspondent and the Globe put both parties in the same list as far as corruption is concerned and the Toronto organ preaches a very nice and high-sounding sermon on corruption and the corrupting "one-tenth" ruling the pure and honest "nine-tenths." Now, we are ready to admit that there is undoubtedly bribery practiced in elections by friends of both the political parties, but no better case is required than that of Hon. John Dryden's election in South Ontario as viewed in the light of the disclosures made in court to [illegible] that the Or-of boodlers and corrupters travelling from one constituency to the other where bye-elections were held. This being the fact, the Globe's editorial sermon on election corruptions is pure hypocrisy, for if our contemporary was animated by a desire for honest reform in election methods it would fearlessly hit the men who have kept this organized gang of boodlers in order to bolster up the Government which had had all its props knocked from beneath it in the general election. The Globe fails to mark the difference in the facts shown in the two South Ontario election trials. In that of Mr Calder, the Tory, it was the acts of local men that were brought to light, and that friends of a candidate are liable in their excessive zeal to offer money to a needy voter to secure a vote is explainable, although not excusable. But in the case of Hon. Mr. Dryden, the Grit, the bribers were shown to be outsiders, strangers who were in the riding in the Government cause, not spending their time for nothing nor yet spending their own money. They were agents of the Government, imported to corrupt the electorate, and the powers that be must have handled the gang, instructed them and supplied the funds. Here is evidence of an organized gang of boodlers sent out from Government headquarters, and this indicates a far more serious state of affairs than do the acts of local men. The Globe must see the point, and if it would cease to be a hypocrite in its professions of a desire to bring about purity and honesty in elections, let it deal with the facts in a straightforward manner.

No. Under the present Hardy Government there has been organized boodling. The agents of the Government have gone into every bye-election with an organized gang and plenty of money. The machine system was corruption enough, but this organized boodling is so flagrant, so disgraceful that the people are disgusted and will wipe out the discredited combination when opportunity offers. The Globe should not preach on corruption in elections unless it is ready to deal with the facts as exposed in Mr Dryden's election.

the Drummond County Railway.

The debate was continued by Mr. Kaulback, who opposed the purchase of the road; Mr. Rufus Pope spoke in favor of the bill, and Sir Charles Tupper said he had agreed that the bill should be read a second time without division, the division to be taken on the third reading. The bill was read a second time, and the House went into committee on the bill.

After some discussion the bill passed through committee, was reported and stands for a third reading.

The bill founded on the Grand Trunk lease resolution was read a first time.

After a number of private bills had been read a third time,

The Judge Spink Investigation.

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, on motion to go into supply, brought up the matter of the charges made against Judge Spink of British Columbia, and ordered by the Department of Justice to be investigated. At some length Sir Charles detailed the history and result of the case, which resulted in a report by the commission appointed to investigate "That although ample opportunity had been afforded, none of the charges had been substantiated by the evidence," and moved "That no charges against a judge of the County Court except such as those upon allegation of misconduct that would be sufficient if proved to justify his removal from the bench, should be entertained by the Government.

"That before providing for a commission of inquiry into the charges of misconduct on the part of a judge of the County Court, it is the duty of the Government to secure full and complete particulars of the same and to submit them to the judge for his consideration and reply; and this House is further of opinion that the action taken by the Government in the premises was ill-considered and injurious to the usefulness and dignity of the judiciary and involved a scandalous waste of public funds."

The Solicitor-General defended the appointment of the commission, as the investigation had cleared the character of the judge and restored public confidence in him. The money was, therefore, well spent.

After Messrs. Bennett, Morrison and Bostock had spoken, the motion was lost on division.

The House then went into committee of supply, rose after some progress with the estimates, and adjourned at 1.10 a.m.

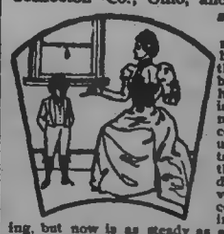
Reciprocity Negotiations.

New York, June 3.—Among the passengers of the steamer Britannic, which arrived here yesterday, was Sir Cavendish Boyle, K.C.M.G., and Sir R. I. and Lady Musgrave. Sir Cavendish Boyle, who is Government Secretary for British Guiana, comes to this country to assist Reginald Tower, charge d'affaires for the British embassy at Washington, in negotiating a reciprocity treaty with Commissioner Kasson covering British Guiana. Mr. Tower will endeavor to secure a similar measure covering the Barbadoes, apart from the one in the interest of Jamaica.

For more than four years Mrs. Bender has been using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as a family medicine.

Mrs. E. A. Bender lives in Keene, Coshocton Co., Ohio, and from there she writes:



"As a cough remedy and blood purifier there is nothing better, and after having the grip is just the right medicine for a complete bracing up. Our boy has taken three bottles for St. Vitus's dance. He was very nervous and constantly jerking and twitching, but now is as steady as any one; in fact seems entirely cured."

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is a medicine that will help you no matter what ails you. This is true because it works directly at the roots of all disease—the digestive system, the blood, the nerves. Keep these in healthy condition and you cannot be sick.

Many of the cures of the "Golden Medical Discovery" seem almost miraculous. Its effect is almost immediate. It takes hold at once. It tones up the stomach, invigorates the liver, regulates the bowels.

It gets right into the blood and carries strength and comfort to every fiber of the body. It nourishes and invigorates the weakened, irritated nerves and puts the entire system in perfect tune.

It is a safe medicine. Safe for adults—safe for children. It contains no sugar, syrup, whisky, alcohol or dangerous opiates. Therefore, it does not create a craving for stimulants. It is distinctly a temperance medicine.

If a medicine dealer tries to substitute some other preparation when you ask for "Golden Medical Discovery"—look out for him. He is either ignorant or dishonest and you can't trust him.

SPRING FEELING.

Why Do You Feel Lazy in the Spring?

An Interview with a Man who Knows —His Idea of it—Dodd's Kidney Pills.

TORONTO, June 2.—Do the generality of folks know what's the matter with them in the spring? They call it "tired feeling" and spring languor, and if they're too young to resist their mothers give them nasty sticky stuff to "cool" their blood. But do you know what is really occurring inside you when you have that "tired feeling?"

A reporter interviewed an authority and asked him what it was that made him (the reporter) want to quit work and go and lie down under a tree somewhere.

"Your blood," said the authority, "is composed of two elements, a heating element and a building one. They can only be distinguished separately under a microscope. During the winter a great part of the food you eat is converted into this heating material. In the spring when the weather is warmer the blood does not need to keep the fire up. So a great part of this heating material has to be thrown off. This is easy if the kidneys are in order. If, however, they have suffered from cold during the winter, or from any other cause they fail to do this, then this unnecessary matter clogs up or remains in the blood. It is then forced to escape through the skin, and boils, pimples and eruptions of various kinds is the result. The blood is overloaded, becomes less brisk in its work and we feel correspondingly languid. In this case the kidneys should receive attention for theirs is the work of straining the blood. For toning and wholesomely stimulating the kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills is the only medicine that can be relied upon."

of the Alpine glow is seen here to great advantage. Alpine glow is the name given to the rich glow seen on the snowy peaks and rocky summits of the Alps a few minutes after the setting sun has disappeared from view, while the valleys are already in twilight.

The streets in Bern are broad and the names of them are quite charming. How much more musical and highfalutin is Gerechtigkeitsgasse when compared to George-st. The fountains likewise have some pretty names such as the Schutzenbrunnen or Archer Fountain, the Kindlifresserbrunnen or Ogre Fountain and the Gerechtigkeitsbrunnen.

There is a curious clock in Bern on the east side of the Zeitglockenthurm one of the gates of the town. The approach of each hour is proclaimed by the crowing of a cock, and as the clock strikes the hour a troop of bears marches in procession round a sitting figure. Being the heraldic emblem of Bern, the bear frequently appears.

On the right bank of the Aare is the den where bruin is maintained, according to immemorial custom, at the cost of the municipality. Bread and fruit are the only offerings tourists are permitted to give. A similar custom prevails at Venice where the sacred pigeons are fed by the city, and at Rome a den of wolves is maintained at the expense of the public.

The Bundeshauser or Federal buildings are very handsome edifices and contain the chambers of the two legislative assemblies.

There are said to be some interesting museums in Bern, but we did not visit them. The bridges which span the Aare are splendid structures. Steam tramways afford the means of seeing the different parts of this interesting city.

We had occasion to visit one of the banks to draw some money. Customers on entering a bank there are supposed to take off their hats and preserve a religious silence.

Leaving the Swiss capital we journeyed by rail to Thun, a quaint old town charmingly situated on the rapid green Aare. 3-4 of a mile below the point where it flows from the lake. Here we took the boat for Interlaken. After ascending the river the boat enters Lake Thun. The sail up the lake, which is 11 miles long and two miles broad, is exceedingly fine. The view from the steamer is magnificent. Here and there appear pretty villas with their gardens, and woods above them. Mountain villages cling like eagles' nests to the face of the cliffs; and down the mountain sides leap foaming torrents "like tears of gladness o'er a giant's face." Glittering snow fields crown the summits of some of the mountain peaks and present a beautiful sight. After a very delightful sail of two hours we reached Interlaken.

The low land between the lakes of Thun and Brienz, which are 2 miles apart, is called the Bodeli. Beautifully situated on this liliputian plain is Interlaken basking in the dazzling rays of Jungfrau's ice crowned brow. It is a favorite summer resort noted for its mild and equable temperature and is a good starting point for excursions to the Berner Oberland.

The chief resort of visitors is the Hoheweg, an avenue of old walnuts flanked with large hotels and tempting shops. It commands a beautiful view of the Alpine mountain Queen the Jungfrau, whose snowy summit especially at sunset presents a magnificent spectacle.

The Kursaal on the Hoheweg with cafe-restaurant, reading, concert, and billiard rooms, garden, etc., is the great place of attraction at night. We listened to a fine musical concert given there by an orchestra of about 70 pieces.

One of the most delightful days we spent in Switzerland was passed in taking a trip by rail from Interlaken to Grindelwald, thence up the Wengernalp to the Kleine Scheidegg at the foot of the Jungfrau. The return trip is made by descending the mountain to Lauterbrunnen and thence back to Interlaken. This makes a delightful day's outing and should by no means be missed. The train proceeds along the romantic valley of the Black Lutschine and after a run of 12 miles in which there are two short sections on the rack-and-pinion system arrives at the charmingly situated village of Grindenwald, with its glaciers and Lutschinen Gorge, its sublime heights and rustic church. Here we change cars and take the Wengernalp railway to climb the mountain to Scheidegg. Each ascending train consists of an engine and one carriage. The maximum gradient is 25 ft. in 100. We make a climb here of over 3,000 feet. This part of the journey is especially fine. The iron-road leads into the immediate presence of the wide famed mountain giants, the Jungfrau, Monch and Eiger, from the brows of which avalanches descend with the thundering sound of distant artillery. Except the solemn stillness of these desolate regions is broken by the echoing thunders of the falling masses, the spectacle can hardly be called imposing. The avalanche as it descends from rock to rock on the mountain side, to disappear at its foot, resembles a huge white cascade.

We stopped a couple of hours at Scheidegg where we had lunch. We picked some specimens of the beautiful Alpine flora and climbed up the Jungfrau to where the snow commenced. The projected Jungfrau electric railway starts from this point and after reaching the margin of the glacier is carried through a constant succession of tunnels to the terminus elevator at a height of 13428 ft. The summit will thence be reached by an elevator 242 ft. high with a winding staircase on the outside. The line was begun in 1896 and will be finished in 1903 at an estimated cost of 10 million francs. The panorama of the Alps exhibited at the World's Fair at Chicago was photographed from this point.

The descent from Scheidegg to Lauterbrunnen a drop of 4148 feet is also al snowy peaks and the lovely valley at the foot. Lauterbrunnen is a pretty village in a rocky valley, into which in July the sun's rays do not penetrate before 7 and in winter not till 11 a.m. It derives its name ('nothing but spring') from the numerous streams which descend from the rocks, or from the springs which rise at their base. One brook descends from the jutting rock in a leap of 980 ft., most of it, before it reaches the ground, being converted into spray, which bedews the meadows and trees far and near. There is a cable railway here with a maximum gradient of 60 in a 100 ft., which mounts straight up through meadows and woods for over 2000 ft. en route to Murren. From Lauterbrunnen we came back to Interlaken along the valley of the White Lutschine and were delighted with our trip up and down the mountains.

After dinner we had an interesting chat with the landlord's daughter, who gave us a lot of information about the Swiss and their customs. She was much interested about Canada and said she had heard it was a big country nearly as large as all Switzerland. We tried to enlighten her on this point but she thought we were only joking. She had been in England for a time but said she did not like that country as it was too flat. She thought Switzerland was god's own country. We found the Swiss fondly attached to the giant mountains of their native country. They delight in rambling through their wild solicitudes, and their sturdy hearts swell with patriotic pride when they rest their alpenstocks on the summit of one of their mighty glaciers. Oliver Goldsmith sings of the Swiss peasant.

"Cheerful at morn, he wakes from short repose,
Breathes the keen air, and carols as he goes,
At night, returning, every labor sped,
He sits him down the monarch of a shed.
Dear is that shed to which his soul conforms,
And dear that hill that lifts him to the storm,
And as a child when scaring sounds molest,
Clings close and closer to his mother's breast,
So the loud torrent and the whirlwind's roar
But bind him to his native mountains more."

We left Interlaken by boat and sailed up the beautiful Lake of Brienz 9 miles in length. It is enclosed by wooded rocks and mountains. We disembarked at the village of Brienz and thence proceeded by rail to Lucerne.

Lucerne, with a population of 26,000, lies picturesquely on the Lake of Lucerne, at the efflux of the Reuss and is enclosed by well preserved walls with nine watch towers. Its amphitheatrical situation, facing the Rigi and Pilatus and the snow-clad Alps is very striking.

The clear emerald green Reuss issues from the lake with the swiftness of a torrent. Its banks are connected by 5 bridges. Two of these are interesting mediaeval bridges. Each has a roof, which, in the case of the former, is painted with numerous scenes from the lives of the patron saints of Lucerne.

The Schweizerhof Quay and the Quai National with their avenue of chestnuts, extend in front of the large hotels along the north bank of the lake and afford a delightful view.

Of special interest is the famous Lion of Lucerne, executed in 1821 to the memory of 28 officers and about 760 soldiers of the Swiss guard who fell in defending the Tuileries at Paris on Aug. 10th, 1792. The dying lion (28 ft. in length), reclining in a grotto, transfixed by a broken lance, and sheltering the fourbon lily with its paw, is hewn out of the natural sandstone rock after a model by the Danish sculptor Thorwaldsen. A spring at the top flows down and forms a dark pool at the base, surrounded by trees and shrubs. The chapel close at hand with the inscription "Invictis pax" contains the escutcheons of the officers.

Carlyle in his French Revolution after a graphic description of their death says: "Let the traveller, as he passes through Lucerne, turn aside to look a little at their monumental Lion; not for Thorwaldsen's sake alone. Hewn out of living rock, the Figure rests there, by the still Lake-waters, in lullaby of distant-tinkling rance-desvaches, the granite mountains dumbly keeping watch all round; and, though inanimate, speaks."

At the east end of the Schweizerhof Quay are the handsome offices of the St. Gotthard railway which starts at this point. Farther on is the Kursaal with concert, ball rooms, restaurant, theatre and garden, where tourists generally spend their evenings. We saw a very good variety show put on, and between the acts we noticed here as everywhere else along our line of travel the mania, people on the continent have for gambling. Two or three fine large gambling tables were going full blast. The crowd was very orderly and goodnatured. The play had to stop at 12 o'clock and only those of mature age and sound judgment were allowed to lose their money. Jack who is of a mathematical turn of mind figured out that the odds were very much against the player; and the song "I'm the man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo" was not in his repertoire that night.

We spent Sunday in Lucerne and as was our custom went to church twice. In the afternoon we wandered into a Presbyterian church where the sermon was preached in English, and the Anglo Saxon tongue never sounded sweeter to us than it did then. The congregation was not large; there were seven of us all told. As the other members of the congragation were composed of women, we were asked to take up the offering, which one of us accordingly did. A prophet is not without honor save in his own country.

A very pleasant day's excursion may be made from Lucerne to the summit of the Rigi. The mountain railway is on the rack-and-pinion system. Between the rails run two others, connected by crossbars, on which works a cogwheel under the engine. The latter is always placed below the passenger car. The maximum gradient is 1 in 4 and the average speed is 5 miles per hour. Owing to its isolation the Rigi commands a panorama 300 miles in circumference. The Rigi-Kulm is the highest and northern-most point of the Rigi. "The Kulm almost always presents a busy scene, especially in the morning and in the evening. The sunset is the chief attraction. A performer on the Alpine horn blows the "retreat" of the orb of day, after which the belvidere is soon deserted.

Half an hour before sunrise, the Alpine horn sounds the reveille. All is again noise and bustle; the crowded hotels are for the nonce without a tenant; and the summit is thronged with an eager multitude, enveloped in all manner of wraps. Unfortunately a perfectly cloudless sunrise is rare.

A faint streak in the east, gradually paling the brightness of the stars, heralds the birth of day. this insensibly changes to a band of gold on the horizon; the shadows between the Rigi and the horizon melt away; forests, lakes, hills, towns, and villages are revealed; all is gray and cold, until the sun bursts from behind the mountains in all his majesty, flooding the superb landscape with light and warmth.

For a quarter of an hour before and after sunrise the view is clearest; at a later hour the mists form into clouds, which often completely shroud the Kulm. To quote the chamois—hunter in Schiller's Tell:

"Through the parting clouds only
The earth can be seen,
For down 'neath the vapor
The meadows of green."

But even the mists possess a certain charm, surging in the depths of the valleys and struggling against the rays of the sun."

Pilatus is another interesting mountain near Lucerne. There is a tradition that Pontius Pilate drowned himself in this vicinity and hence the mountain derives the name. The lower slopes are clothed with beautiful pastures and forests, whilst the upper part rises boldly in a rugged and imposing mass. The mountain is the popular barometer of the district; if the summit is free from clouds and fog in the morning the weather cannot be depended on; but if shrouded in fog till midday a clear evening may be expected. The Pilatus railway with a maximum gradient of 48 in 100 is nearly 3 miles long. The line rests throughout on a substructure of massive granite rocks to which an upper framework of iron and steel is securely fastened with huge screws. The toothed rail has vertical teeth on both sides, into which two pairs of toothed wheels attached to the train work horizontally.

We left Lucerne by boat en route for Fluelen. The Lake of Lucerne is unsurpassed in Switzerland in magnificence of scenery. Its beautiful banks are also intimately associated with the traditions depicted by Schiller in his William Tell. The lake is nearly cruciform in shape and is 25 miles in length. Soon after leaving Lucerne the steamer affords a strikingly picturesque view of the town with its towers and battlements. To the left rises the Rigi, to the right Pilatus. High above the lake runs the Gotthard railway. The scenery is grand beyond description the entire journey. At Brunnen, one of the most beautiful places on the lake, be most beautiful places on the lake, be the Lake of Uri. On the west bank rises the Mytenstein, a rock 80 ft. high, bearing an inscription in memory of Schiller the 'Bard of Tell.'

On the east bank of the lake runs the Axenstrasse leading from Brunnen to Fluelen, of strikingly bold construction being mainly hewn in the rock. Below, alongside, or above the road, runs the St. Gotthard railway, skirting the lake in many tunnels and cuttings. We called at Tell's Platte, a ledge of rock, shaded by trees and washed by the lake, on which stands the famous Tell's chapel rebuilt in 1880. It is said to have been originally built in 1388 on the spot where the Swiss liberator sprang out of Gessler's boat. Near the chapel the lake is 700 ft. deep. A violent storm arose just after leaving here and caused some excitement on board but we landed safely at Fluelen where boarded a train on the St. Gotthard en route for sunny Italy.

BENSFORT BRIEFS.

Building operations have been delayed somewhat on account of the rainy season, the beginning of the building season being very unfavorable for mason work, but work is now being hustled through.

The annual South Monaghan excursion in connection with the Bensfort Sunday school will be run on Friday, 9th inst., from the usual points down the river. The most pleasant part of the day will be enjoyed at a few of the beautiful lake resorts. The steamer Eclipse will do the carrying, and ample accommodation will be provided. Return will be made so as to allow all to reach home in good time.

Almost in Despair.
"My wife suffered with pain and distress from an affection of the throat caused by impure blood. John Weckmar, Galt, Ontario.

That distress after eating is prevented by one or two of Hood's Pills. They don't gripe.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters'; and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts. a bottle, every bottle guaranteed. A Fine Set of Flags.

The citizens of Picton are presenting to Mr A W Hepburn, for his new steamer Argyle, which is to run between Toronto and Montreal, a new set of colors. Knowing where the best could be procured, they sent the order to J J Turner & Sons, the celebrated flag and tent makers who are now making the flags. They will cost nearly $100.00 and will be made of the best English silk finished bunting. The burgee is 24 ft. long with letters "Argyle," one Dominion Ensign 21 ft, one Stars and Stripes 21 ft, one Union Jack 15 ft, one house flag 10 ft with letter "H" in centre. Turner & Sons also received an order from the Muskoka Navigation Co, of Toronto and Gravenhurst, for 100 life preservers and a new set of colors for the new boat they are putting on the Muskoka lakes.

CIVIC MATTERS.

The Court of Revision—The Committee of the Whole Council.

The Court of Revision met last night with Ald. Langford, chairman, and Ald. Neill, Corkery and Best present. Several complaints regarding assessment for granolithic pavement were received, the complaint being in regard to the frontage. These cases were left over for consideration at a meeting to be held on Monday evening at 7.30 o'clock, the town engineer to look into the measurements in point in the meantime. A number of appeals from dog tax were received and granted on the usual declaration being taken.

There was not a quorum of the Committee of the Whole, those present being Mayor Davis, and Ald. Langford, Neill, Corkery and Best. However, the deputation representing the Toronto Civic employees who excurt here on July first was heard. They will have their programme at the driving park and asked the town to give $50 for prizes, as was done last year. They expect a thousand excursionists at least. Dr. Rose was present to support any proposition to make a celebration for Dominion Day, as the Oddfellows of Hamilton were running an excursion to Peterborough and Port Hope, via Lindsay, and if a celebration was held here a large number of Hamilton people would stop off here As there was no quorum present, the matter was left over till the regular meeting of the Council on Monday night.

PECULIAR DISAPPEARANCE

Herman Crowe Disappears and as a Result of Investigation by High Constable Cochrane his Father is Held Awaiting Further Developments.

THE SON MAY HAVE GONE AWAY

As He Was Disgusted With His Father for Drinking---The Father Tells His Story --A Peculiar Case all Round.

High County Constable Cochrane returned to town last night at twelve o'clock after a two days stay in Dummer in an investigation into the mysterious disappearance of Herman Crowe, the eighteen-year-old son of Thomas Crowe, a farmer living in the township of Dummer, north of what is known as Robb's or Stony lake post office. He made a most searching and laborious enquiry and as a result of his researches he arrested Thomas Crowe on suspicion of having made away with his son and brought him into town as his prisoner, lodging him in a cell at the police station. Mr Cochrane had no warrant for the arrest but felt that the circumstances compelled him to take this course. He was armed with a requisition signed by the County Crown Attorney and the Warden of the county.

The affair is a peculiar one. The facts are very difficult to get at. There are many strange circumstances of a contradictory nature surrounding the disappearance. The actions of the man under arrest and his stories since the young man was lost to the sight of his friends are a conglomeration of contradictions and fantastic dreams that resemble nothing but the creation of a crazy man or one whose memory was badly muddled.

Crowe and his family live on a farm in the woods on the 11th concession of Dummer in a somewhat backward and out of the way place. The man is a widower, his wife having died about a month ago, leaving a family of children, about nine in all, the young man, Herman, being the eldest, while the youngest is but an infant. Crowe is of a peculiar temperment. A number of the neighbors living near him are greatly afraid of him, and yet he is not actually violent or vicious but seems to make a display of passion. However he is not felt to be a very safe man. His own stories as to his son's disappearance are very erratic but from the investigation the facts seem to be as follows:

Thomas Crowe and the son, Herman Crowe, took tea on the evening of May 25th, at the house of a friend, Samuel Wall, who resides about three miles north of Warsaw. They left for home with their team and waggon at about 10.10 p.m. This was the last seen of the young man. The father had been drinking. At 10.30 Fred Harding, a farmer, heard two men quarrelling on the road close to his place. He heard one shout "I'll have your dammed heart's blood." He heard the other cry "Don't hurt me" and other words followed. He heard the horses a tart off at a brisk trot and a man cried out "Don't go 'way and leave me Herman." The road from his place is uphill and he heard the horses take the grade at a fast gait for apparently the greater part of the hill, and then there seemed to be a stop.

About one mile north of this lives David Watley. In his barn yard the team, hitched to the waggon, was found standing in the morning. How they got there is one of the points to be unravelled.

Between 12 and 2 o-clock Thomas Crowe arrived on foot at the residence of his nephew, David Crowe, who resides three miles farther north than Watley. He was wet up above the knees. He was let in by Mrs. Crowe. He asked his nephew to drive him to Lakefield, saying that Herman was there badly hurt. He had the appearance of having been drinking. His nephew put him to bed and in the morning he left the house.

He then went back south about a mile and a half and got a man by the name of Percy Carveth to drive him to Lakefield, stating that Herman was dying there. Here is where Crowe's contradictory stories come in. Car-

A new band stand is badly needed for the park. The present one is situated too high. In the lower part of the park the music is hardly audible. TERRIBLE DEATH OF A MOREWOOD MAN AT LINDSAY.

Fell Against a Circular Saw in Parkin's Saw Mill in Lindsay and was Instantly Decapitated.

Special to the Review.

LINDSAY, Ont., June 3.—Garnet Steinburg, aged 17, of Morewood, employed in Perkins' tie mill, while handling slab tailing this morning undertook to oil the circular saw carriage and in some unaccountable manner fell into the saw and was cut in two, his head falling one side and the trunk of his body on the other. No blame is attached to the proprietors nor any of his employees. An inquest was deemed unnecessary.

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

Golf.

Representatives of the Orillia Golf Club arrived in town yesterday and played a match at the Auburn links with the Peterborough Club, winning by 20 holes to 17. The visitors arrived in town at noon and had dinner at the Oriental with the local players. They had a pleasant match and left for home at 5 30. The score was:—F C Napier 0, John Scott 10; J H Burnham 5, Rev R N Burns 0; R M Denniston 1, Dr Gilchrist 0; F Francis 6, Geo Wilson 0; P Campbell 0, Dr Laidlaw 9; F Hall 4, T J Muir 0; H Ritchie 1, Dr Ardagh 0; S Ray 0, A E Wakefield 1.

The fine play of Mr J H Bradburn was the feature of the day. His opponent is a strong golfer but had to succumb to Mr Burnham's prowess. He broke all local records.

Football.

The Y M C A football team went to Norwood on the 11.27 to-day to play the return match with the High School team. When the Norwood boys played in Peterborough two weeks ago they defeated the Y M C A by 3 goals to 2, but the latter are hopeful of making the match more interesting this time.

There is some talk of Norwood organising a football club separate from the High School. They have the material for a strong team.

The Kingston baseball nine arrived in town this morning and are playing the local team this afternoon.

The Electrics road race was ridden this afternoon. The full particulars will be given on Monday.

SUCCESSFUL AND PLEASANT MEETING OF THE VETERANS.

The Men of 1866 and Their Friends Gather at the Sons of England Hall and Spend a Social Evening—Annual Meeting of the Veterans' Association Also Held.

The veterans of the expedition to repel the Fenian raid of 1866 had an exceeding pleasant and successful gathering at the Sons of England hall last evening in celebration of their anniversary. The gathering took a double form. The first part was the annual meeting of the Veterans' Association and later in the evening an informal smoker and reception was held.

At the business meeting the president, Mr A P Poussette, Q C, occupied the chair. The minutes of the last annual meeting and of that on the 18th inst were read and confirmed.

The election of officers then took place, resulting as follows:—

Hon President—Lieut-Col H C Rogers.
President—A P Poussette, Q C.
Vice-President—Lieut-Col J Z Rogers.
Captain—Ald J B McWilliams.
Lieutenant—H Rush.
Sergt-Major—J Irwin.
Sergts—H W Watson and H J Holmes.
Secretary-Treasurer—J D Collins.
Executive—Geo Brown, W H Anthony, F J R Mitchell, F McCorry and Geo Rose.

A resolution was passed amending the constitution by providing that meetings be held on the first Monday in September and June of each year in addition to the annual meeting.

THE SMOKER.

The social re-union held afterwards was a great success. There was a good attendance of the old boys, and in addition there were present Lieut-Col Bell and a number of the officers of the 57th and some other gentlemen as guests. The veterans had made everything solid for the comfort of their visitors. Abundant refreshments were provided and neatly served by Caterer H Long, and a plentiful supply of good cheroots had been laid in, which were smoked away with pleasure. The most cordial of feelings pervaded the gathering and the veterans showed themselves most capable hosts.

The Sons of England band, under the leadership of Mr F W Miller, was present for a portion of the evening and rendered several lively selections in charming style. Instrumental selections were given, a couple of songs were sung in pleasing style by Mr John Crane, a few short and appropriate speeches were made, and conversation chiefly of a reminiscent character was prompted under the spell of the Havanas.

The first speaker called upon by Mr Poussette was Rev W L Armitage. His remarks were highly patriotic. He noticed the peculiar appropriateness in meeting in the Sons of England hall with its many associations, for all were sons of England, if not by birth or descent, at least by having been chosen to defend a part of the empire. As every man's country appeals to his heart it must be a proud thing in the memories of those who have been called upon to know that they did something to protect their land. He referred with feeling to Queen Victoria, expressing the loyalty and devotion of all to her on account of her purity of life and her exemplary character. She reigns, she does not rule. Her people love her because she loves them. She has sent forth her love to all her people, especially in times of distress, and has always remembered her soldiers. Affection is also felt for her son, the Prince of Wales, the most popular man in England. The veterans present had been engaged in history and formed a noble example for the volunteers of to-day. He felt that there was not the sympathy there should be for the 57th Battalion in town. He would like to see them honored and encouraged. Rev Mr Armitage delivered a panegyric on Canada, showing what a great heritage we have and how worthy it is of the protection of Canada's sons.

Lieut-Col Bell expressed the pleasure of himself and officers at enjoying the hospitality of the veterans. He himself was proud to be a veteran, having served as a bugler in 1866, and with three or four others present, Lieut-Col H C Rogers, Lieut-Col J Z Rogers, Major Langford and Capt Miller, formed a connecting link between the veterans of '66 and the volunteers of to-day. He regretted the lack of military enthusiasm in town. He felt that the force has not met with the sympathy that should have been accorded it. The battalion has known cycles of depression and seems to be passing through one this present year. It was below par at present, but if the citizens would support and if the young men would devote one evening each week to it, it could be made one of the best in Canada. Steps are being made to raise it. All must admit that the regimental band is a credit. (Hear, hear). Col Bell stated that this was his last year as commander, but for his successor as for himself he bespoke support.

Mr Crane contributed a pleasing military ballad.

Rev Mr Davidson, chaplain of the battalion, expressed his appreciation of the honor of being in the company of those entitled to write the word "Ridgeway" on their banners. He felt that we all owe a debt of gratitude to our veterans—both of war and of peace. He took an optimistic view of the future, for if little enthusiasm is shown now, yet if anything were done against our land he believed the young men would show courage and determination and tary spirit should be inculcated, for from this spirit has grown much of the glory of the empire, and it is a spirit which can be turned to many good uses in times of peace as well.

After refreshments the meeting broke up with "God Save the Queen."

Mr R M Roy is making a group photo of veterans of 1866, which is to be presented to the Historical Society. Any who cannot give him him a sitting for the picture can be included by sending in a cabinet picture. Photos of veterans now deceased can be sent in by friends and will also be included. There will be no cost.

FFICE — — TOWN BUILDING

FINCH W. MILLER,

The Hague Conference.

The Hague, June 3.—A decision has been reached by the special commission of the peace congress at The Hague to discard all side issues and stick to the main object of the conference. The commission on mediation has welded the various projects into one, which will be submitted for discussion on Monday. Russia has protested against the Turkish delegates, because it is claimed they have no definite instructions, and their co-operation would only be an obstruction.

Vladivostock to Be a Military Port.

Moscow, June 3.—The Russian Government has decided to make Vladivostock, the Pacific terminus of the Trans-Siberian Railway, a military port. Talienwan, on the eastern coast of the Liaotung Peninsula, just north of Port Arthur, will be made a commercial port. Col. Savitzki and Engineer Shkharoff have in charge the deepening of the harbors, the construction of what breakwaters may be necessary, and all other harbor work.

THE CHILD WAS DEAD.

Mother Plunged Into the Cistern and Lifted Him Out, But Too Late.

Tilsonburg, Ont., June 3.—A little boy aged 3 years, son of William Scott, one mile north of Tilsonburg, was drowned in the cistern yesterday afternoon. The child was playing in the yard when his mother missed him and went in search and found him in the cistern. She sprang in and managed to lift him out, but was unable to climb out herself, the water being up to her shoulders. There was no one near the house, but a gentleman driving by heard her cries and ran to the rescue and succeeded in getting Mrs. Scott out. When they picked the child up life was extinct.

The Indian Casimir Hanged.

Victoria, B.C., June 3.—The Indian Casimir was hanged at Kamloops yesterday morning for the murder of Philip Walker on Saturday, April 15.

The last rites of the Roman Catholic Church were administered to the condemned man on Thursday by Rev. Father Lejeune, and he was resigned to his fate. Casimir made a full confession of the crime, and stated he was sorry that he killed Walker. About 50 Indians were admitted to the jail office yesterday, and Casimir advised them to take warning from his fate, leave whisky alone and to lead better lives. The rumor that the Indians would try to rescue Casimir seems to have been pure fiction, as the Indians now admit that Casimir is only getting "white man's law."

Victim of a Spree.

Vancouver, B.C., June 3.—Daniel Sullivan was found drowned at Cheam Slough on Thursday, and an investigation, which was held yesterday into the cause of the drowning, has revealed some startling facts. The man, who was working for a farmer at Harrison, went up to Agassis, and it is thought he had several hundred dollars on his person. Here he fell in with five men from Chilliwack, all of whom went on a spree at the expense of the deceased. It is thought that the men, after relieving Sullivan of his money, took this means of getting rid of their victim.

Conservatives Order a Wreath.

Ottawa, June 3.—The Conservative members of the Senate and House of Commons have ordered a wreath to be prepared for the decoration of Sir John A. Macdonald's monument at Toronto on Tuesday, and have delegated Sir Charles Tupper to make the presentation and deliver an address. Another wreath is being sent to Kingston, where Dr. Ryan will be delegated to deliver the address, Mr. George Taylor, chief Conservative whip, to whom the duty was entrusted, being unable to go.

Daniel Shaver Hanged Himself.

Brantford, Ont., June 3.—Daniel Shaver, aged 72, a retired farmer, living with his son near Onondaga, committed suicide on Thursday night by hanging himself in an outbuilding. Deceased has not been well for some time and became despondent. Sometime during the night he went out to the driving shed, took a rope, put it over a beam, placed it around his neck with a slip knot. His son found him hanging early yesterday morning. Life had gone some time.

Joss House in Montreal.

Montreal, June 3.—A Chinese Joss House has been opened in Montreal, much to the consternation of Christians, who are loudly protesting against the introduction of heathen worship. The Montreal Joss House is the first heathen place of worship established in Canada outside of British Columbia.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

keeping ever by her side, reading to her, during the long evenings—taking her once to the theatre, a new world for Sybil. He was so handsome, so gay, with such devotion in every look and word, that the poor child thought herself in Paradise.

The little drawing-room was a bright, cheerful apartment, very different from the magnificent rooms at Glynn, but it was light and sunny, with white lace curtains, and stands filled with blooming flowers. It contained, besides, a good piano, some pretty lounging chairs, a little couch placed between the windows, and on the outside was a pretty flower-wreathed balcony, commanding a magnificent view of the surrounding country.

On this morning Captain Ayrton, "still on duty," as he thought to himself, lay upon the little couch, reading the paper, his lovely wife busy among the flowers.

"Sybil," he said, suddenly, "would you like to see the 'Coleen Bawn'? You like sensation—there is plenty in that. Shall we go to the Adelphi to-night?"

The fact was, the gallant captain was wearying of domestic bliss—the expedition proposed was rather to relieve his own monotony than to please his wife. She was satisfied. She was by his side in a moment, her arms clasped around his neck, her lovely, child-like face raised to his.

"I shall like it beyond everything," she said. "Violet told me all about it. How kind you are to me, Lyster! How they misjudged you; how dearly they would love you, if they knew you!"

He accepted her devotion something after the fashion of a sultan quite accustomed to it.

"I wonder what I have done," she said, laying her head upon his breast, "that I should be so very happy. If papa would be friends I should have nothing left on earth to wish for. You think he will forgive us soon, don't you, Lyster?"

"To be sure," he replied carelessly. "The old gentleman is sure to come round. We should be in a pretty mess if he did not."

His light tone somewhat jarred upon her. She forgot it in a moment. Her beautiful, earnest eyes were raised to his.

"The die is cast now," she said. "I shall never repent giving up all the world for you, Lyster. You are all the world to me."

He smiled very benignly, and went on with his reading.

No remorse came to him as he saw her so happy in her innocent love, although the time was coming, he knew, when she must find out how wasted it had all been.

"Shall we go out this morning?" she said. "You almost promised to take me to the Tower."

"We had better start," he said. "We must make the most of this week, Sybil. I shall be on duty next. What shall you do all day?"

"Think about you," she replied, cheerfully. "You shall see, Lyster, that I am quite fitted to be a soldier's wife. I shall always met you with smiles."

CHAPTER XVII.

"BARTERED A LIFE OF HAPPINESS."

A group of fashionable young men stood on the steps of a fashionable club-house in Pall Mall. The morning was bright, the streets of the great city gay and thronged, nature was smiling, and the world seemed sunning itself in the smile.

They were lounging in all kinds of attitudes, discussing the latest news, the latest scandal, the intrigues, the loves, and failing of their acquaintance in general and their friends in particular. Three of them had been to see the 'Colleen Bawn," and had met Lyster Ayrton.

"I tell you," said Major Brezil, "I never saw a lovelier girl in my life than Ayrton had with him last night. I cannot think who she is. He gave me a cool nod, and passed me by. I should have liked an introduction. I never saw such eyes in my life."

"Some ballet-girl," sneered Sir Harry Lowe. "Ayrton has gone down dreadfully this last year."

"No," said Captain Peters, "she was no ballet-girl. Such a face as hers does not spring from the people. It takes centuries of culture and training to produce such delicate loveliness, so refined and dainty. Ayrton is in luck.

"Perhaps he is married," suggested the major, as a capital joke. It certainly answered, for the three laughed heartily.

"No, no!" cried Sir Harry; "Ayrton knows better than that."

At the very moment, the gentleman in question went by. There was a general call upon him, and Captain Ayrton ran gayly up the steps.

"You used to be a good-natured fellow, Lyster," drawled Captain Peters; "you keep all the good things to yourself now. Who was the dainty, beauty you took to the Adelphi last night. By Jove, I never saw such a face! Who is she?"

Lyster Ayrton drew back haughtily. Bad as he was, he could not tolerate light words from them about her.

"That lady, gentleman," he said, "is my wife!"

There was a moment's dead silence, then Major Brezil raised his hat, as though in recognition of the sweet, pure presence. Then Captain Peters apologized, and the others joined in congratulations.

"You are very fortunate," said Major Brezil, dryly. He had no great respect for Captain Ayrton, and marvelled how on earth he had won that lovely girl.

"After this," said Sir Harry, "I shall believe anything. Who is the lady, Lyster? If I should see any one like her, I really should not mind sacrificing myself."

"My wife is the youngest daughter and coheiress of Squire Jocelyn, of Glynn Castle," said Captain Ayrton.

He felt almost insulted at the major's start of surprise and low whistle of incredulity.

"The Jocelyns! Why, they are one of the oldest families in England," said Sir Harry. "There are two daughters. I have heard my mother speak of them. You never mean to tell me, Lyster, the squire has given the youngest and fairest to you?"

The contemptuous accent upon the word stung Captain Ayrton more than anything else could have done.

"Why not?" he asked, proudly.

"Because, if he did so," said Sir Harry, "I should say, with all respect for you Ayrton, he was a fool for his pains. Such men as you—or I too, for the matter of that—ought to think twice before asking any girl to share our lot."

"Speak for yourself," said Captain Ayrton, rudely.

With a bow that included the whole group, he turned away.

"Well," said Major Brezil, "how he managed that would puzzle a lawyer. What a fate for such a girl! Ayrton is a capital boon companion, but I would not trust him with a dog I cared for. Rely upon it, it was a runaway match."

So they dismissed the subject. If the squire had heard that conversation, what would he have thought of his darling's fate?

There was great wonder among all his so-called friends when Captain Ayrton's marriage was made known. Gradually the truth oozed out that he had won her by treacherous means; that he had induced her to leave home against her father's wishes, and that the old squire, although refusing to pardon, was breaking his heart for the loss of his child.

He might have punished him, for the law protects the innocent, and he had broken it; but the squire knew such revenge would pierce his child's heart, perhaps even kill her. He gave up the idea; still it would not have been well for the gallant captain had he fallen into the old man's power.

Sybil's perfect happiness lasted one whole week; in after time she looked back, and knew she had bartered the peace, the happiness of a life-time for that one week of perfect bliss.

When Lyster told her that he could not come quite so often, or stay so long, for he had duties and he must perform them, she, knowing no more of the world than a simple child, believed him. After a time he would be absent for two days altogether, and she welcomed him with a smile, devoutly believing he had been hard at work.

Often while he lounged in theatres, or the Haymarket cafe, she, poor child, sat up wearying for him hour after hour, longing only to love him and soothe him after the fatigues of duty. They talked at his club and they talked in the regiment, wondering how the young wife bore it, and pitying her lot.

It was a great change for her, from the stately, magnificence, the warm luxury of Glynn, to those four rooms; from the attendance of well-trained domestics to the clumsy waiting of the awkward girl who attended to the lodgers; from the cheerful society of Violet and Irene to the lonely home where no face smiled upon her. But, most of all, she missed the fond, indulgent father, who had idolized her so completely—missed him, and longed for him with tenderness that would have robbed him of half his pain, had he known it.

Still she was very happy; for she never doubted that the squire would, as Lyster called it, "come round in time," and she loved her husband dearly. She did wish occasionally that he had less work to do so that he could spend more time with her. She never complained to him. She received him with smiles, and parted from him with loving words.

She looked rather out of place in these little rooms, with her dainty, patrician loveliness, her queenly carriage and magnificent dress. Everything she owned in the world had been sent to her, dresses, music, jewels, books, even her favorite horse, but that Lyster sold, saying they had no convenience for keeping it.

At least he said it was sold, but Mlle. Coralie, who was the rage just then, was seen riding a beautiful, spirited Arabian, and, though one should not judge rashly, it was just as well that Sybil never knew what became of her horse.

Six months passed since the fatal night when the squire's daughter fled from her home. From that beloved home no pardon has reached her; the squire has never sent a line or message to her.

"She chose between us," he said, in answer to all remonstrance, "and she preferred him to me."

Captain Ayrton and his young wife still live in the pretty Highgate villa; but it is winter now, and all Sybil's flowers are dead.

She sits by the window, watching for him; it is three nights since he left home. Here the snow lies thick upon the ground and the cold is intense; but neither cold or snow would have kept her from him.

She looks changed from the bright, willful girl who stood under the cedar-tree trying to bend Sir Rupert to her wishes; she is thinner and paler; the violet eyes look as though showers of hot tears had dimmed their lustre; the fair, rounded cheek has almost lost the delicate contour; there is a suspicious quivering of the sweet lips, as though she had learned to repress sorrow and tears. On the white brow there are lines of thought or care; the brightness, the light, the pretty, willful daring that had been so charming, were all gone.

She was so loyal she would not even own to herself that she was disappointed in her marriage.

"It would all be different," she persisted in saying, "when Lyster had less to do."

Yet, true and brave though she was, there were times when bitter thoughts would come to her, and she would ask herself: "Was it worth the sacrifice she had made?"

Lyster was very kind to her in his gay, careless way. It would have been bad policy for him to have been otherwise, for, as he often said to himself, "This was but the prologue—the play had not even begun." He simply neglected her; time enough to be cross if that stupid old esquire proved obstinate.

His marriage had been of some service; ugly creditors, hearing of it, and knowing the worth of the Glynn estates, grew mild and patient; even Croker consented to renew his bill for six months. He was able to borrow money on it, so that the crisis had not yet come.

Once or twice he had suggested that she should write home, and the girl's heart had warmed at his words, but to his dismay, no word came from the squire. What he would do if Sybil had no money he could not tell—he would not think.

A TORONTO MAN MAKES A FATAL MISTAKE.

Neglected the First Warnings of an Overburdened Stomach.

Dyspepsia Seized Him in its Vice-like Clutch — Took Warning Too Late— Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets would Have Cured Him.

"It's a great mistake," said the man on the stool at the lunch counter to his neighbor. "It's a great mistake to let the lesser symptoms of Dyspepsia, like Headaches, Heartburn, Waterbrash, Foul Breath and Wind in the Stomach run on, and think they will cure themselves. Those symptoms mean that the stomach is tired and cannot digest the food into blood. Consequently, the blood being poor cannot strengthen and renew the stomach."

"Then you've got to give the stomach a rest some way, eh?" said his friend.

"Exactly. Now, Smith, my old partner, used to be that way. Didn't think it mattered much if he had a billious headache him—ended up with Chronic Dyspepsia. Then when he found he had that, he started to starve himself, because eating hurt him. Got as thin as a rake and as bloodless as a screen door. First thing he knew consumption had him. Died last spring."

"It is true then that Dyspepsia causes Consumption?" "Why it's a generally acknowledged medical fact," said the first speaker. "Now, what I advised Smith to do, though he never would take my advice on private matters, was to take Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. They are the only sensible cure for Dyspepsia. You see, they digest the food for the stomach, which thus gets a chance to recuperate. They're a good thing for any man to take after meals because then you can eat what you like best without fear of consequences."

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists, at fifty cents a box, six boxes $2.50, or will be sent on receipt of price, by

G.T.R. TRACKMEN'S STRIKE.

Supt. McGuigan Claims That 800 Men Are Now at Work.

The Toronto Men Still Hold Out—Organizer Lowe Said to Be at the Capital to Ask the Government for Arbitration—The Question Is Seriously Asked: "Are the Men Beaten?"—The Latest News.

Toronto, June 3.—Yesterday saw no change in the situation of the Grand Trunk trackmen's strike in Toronto. The men are still holding out, and continue in the belief that they will win in the end. Another circular letter was received from the executive committee in Montreal, calling on their men to keep up the fight, and victory will be theirs. The letter concludes with this sentence: "Stand to your guns; we think the end is in sight." Several of the local men have secured employment, and will not likely return to the company even if they do win.

It was the opinion of Superintendent Jones yesterday that the men were beaten. He was sorry for their wives and children, but would reinstate the men if they agreed to return to work. Detective Day said that 400 men are at work in the middle division, but he did not know how much they were being paid. The officials say that the road is still in an excellent condition, and has not suffered as yet from the strike.

Looks Bad for the Strikers.

Windsor, Ont., June 3.—A special train, with nine men to take the places of the striking trackmen, arrived at Belle River yesterday afternoon.

Asking for Arbitration.

Montreal, June 3.—It is understood that a strong effort is being made to induce the Grand Trunk authorities to submit the question in dispute between the section foremen and trackmen now on strike to arbitration. Mr. A. B. Lowe, the organizer, is in Ottawa, and his mission is to endeavor to induce the Government to mediate between the strikers and the company with a view to having the differences referred to an independent tribunal for adjustment.

What Officials Say.

The Grand Trunk management, in answer to reports that have been circulated by the strikers, state that the line throughout is in excellent condition, and that it is thoroughly inspected every day by competent men. At present there are over 800 men at work on the line, and it is expected that within another week all of the strikers will have been replaced, not by foreign labor, the Grand Trunk management state, but with Canadians.

Are the Men Beaten?

Supt. McGuigan appears to be sanguine of success over the strikers. He says that 900 of the 1,800 who went out have been replaced, and that at no time has the travelling public been in any danger, as the track has been well cared for. It does not look as if the trackmen would get any help from the engineers, as the latter's committee has adjourned for 30 days.

Rainy River Railway Bill.

Ottawa, June 3.—The Ontario & Rainy River Railway bill came up yesterday morning before the railway committee. The bill gives power to the Ontario & Rainy River Railway to acquire the Port Arthur, Duluth & Western Railway. Mr. Barwick asked the insertion of a clause binding the purchaser of the latter road, which is advertised for sale under an order of the court, to observe all contracts into which that road has entered in consideration of bonuses given. The bill was reported, Mr. Barwick's application being granted.

A Place for Inebriates.

Toronto, June 3.—The Government was waited upon yesterday morning by a deputation representing the Prisoners' Aid Association, the Dominion and Provincial W.C.T.U., the Salvation Army and the Canadian Charities Conference, asking for the establishment of a hospital for inebriates, or that provision for special treatment be made at the General Hospital. Favorable consideration was promised.

Miner Fell to Death.

Winnipeg, June 3.—Henry Langshire, a miner, fell a distance of 25 feet in Regina gold mine, near Rat Portage, yesterday, and was instantly killed. Deceased was 45 years of age, and leaves an invalid wife and five small children.

THE MARKETS.

Chicago Wheat Futures Rose Quickly and Then Reacted—Liverpool Higher—The Latest Quotations.

Liverpool, June 3.—Wheat futures yesterday advanced, closing ¾d to ⅞d per cental above Thursday's final figures.

Chicago, June 3.—Wheat market partially recovered yesterday from Thursday's set-back, but reacted again before the close. The July option advanced 1⅛c per bushel and closed ¼c higher than Thursday. The September delivery rose 1⅛c and then lost ⅛c. The firmer cables and buying by commission houses and foreigners helped the market.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, June 3.—Receipts of live stock were large yesterday, 67 loads, composed of 1,000 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 1,100 hogs and 60 calves. These, together with 69 loads which came in on Thursday, made a very large market, 136 loads all told. The quality of fat cattle was very fair, these being principally exporters, butchers' cattle being scarce. Trade in exporters was slow, with prices easier. Butchers' cattle were scarce, with prices very firm.

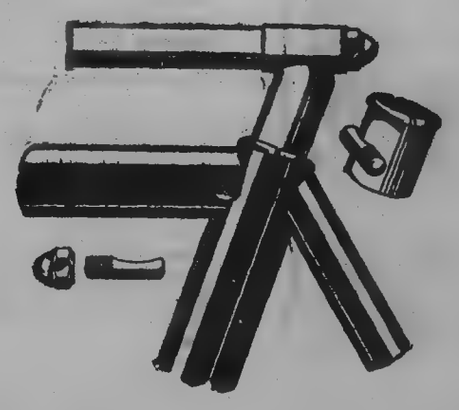
A Seat Post Feature

Found on Only the Peerless Red Bird...

In the Seat Post, as in the other features of construction, the Red Bird Special, Model 51, differs radically from any other bicycle on the Canadian market.



The working principle of this seat post fastener is shown in the accompanying illustration. The cotter key, milled away on one side, to fit over expanding ring, is tightened so as to give the friction required to hold the seat post securely.

When found necessary to raise or lower the seat post, a turn or two of the blind nut at the end of cotter key allows the ring to expand and all friction is off.

It is simple, safe, and so neat in appearance as to attract the admiration of critical riders wherever shown.

Have your nearest Red Bird Agent show you how nicely it works.

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddies, February 20th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

OUT OF DOOR GOWNS.

Street and Outing Costumes of Various Kinds.

The coat bodice and the tunic are more becoming to a tall than to a short figure. The tunic in particular, which suggests the classical idea, requires height and dignity in the wearer to appear to the best advantage. The bolero, however, is becoming to almost everybody in its present rather elongated form and may be safely chosen by any woman.

For bicycling and golf suits reversible woolens are used, in which the sides are different. No lining is employed. For example, a suit of dark beige goods consists of a short skirt finished around the edge by many lines of stitching and a double breasted bolero. The wrong side of the goods shows a brown and buff check. The suit is unlined, the seams being neatly bound with ribbon. Such a costume is exactly suited for out of door sports, with the addition of gaiters and an alpine or sailor hat, and in it a woman is comfortably equipped for mountain climbing or any athletic amusement. With a short skirt the petticoat is desirably replaced by bloomers of black material or of goods matching the color of the gown.

There are many odd and pretty ways of decorating the bodice, and one of the new methods of trimming is illustrated. There is a yoke, or rather applied plastron, of plaited white mousseline de soie, around which is a drapery of white lace, fastened at the right shoulder by a jeweled buckle and at the other side by bows of red satin. The lace is carried down the left side in coquilles and fastened again at the waist with red satin bows. The collar of red satin has coques of the same material and a lace frill. JUDIC CHOLLET.

"I see," remarked Deadbroke, "that you advertise an up to date boarding house. I suppose that refers to the service and appointments."

"No, indeed," replied the landlady, "that refers exclusively to the boarders. I don't keep any one who gets behind."—Philadelphia Record.

A TRIP TO THE ETERNAL CITY

(Written for the "Review.")

LETTER NO. EIGHT.

VERSAILLES—HERE AND THERE IN SWITZERLAND.

The most delightful wheeling tour we had on our trip was from Paris to Versailles, a distance of 15 miles. Accompanied by our Austrian guide we mounted our wheels one bright summer's morning en route for the great palace of the Grand Monarque, Louis XIV. We passed the beautiful Madeleine and wheeled down the Rue Royale to the historic Place de la Concorde and thence up the stately Champs Elysees to the Arc de Triomphe. The Avenue du Bois-de-Boulogne, 140 yds. in breadth and 3-4 mile long brought us to the Bois de Boulogne a beautiful park covering an area of 2,250 acres, and a favorite promenade of the Parisians. We found the park crowded with cyclists of both sexes. The bloomer girls were out in great numbers and looked very neat in their rational costumes. The French display great taste in their dress whether for walking, riding or wheeling. The park is very lovely with its magnificent foliage, its romantic green vistas, its multitudinous winding avenues, its hillside hermitage, its cascades, and its lakes whereon the white swans flap their joyous wings.

Crossing the Seine we wheeled through the noble park of St. Cloud with its avenues of stately trees, its swelling hills, and magnificent panorama of Paris and the winding Seine. Here Louis XIV. erected a pleasure palace and filled it with every luxury that despotic power could command. The shells of the Prussians, however, spared not the pride of kings and the blackened walls of the ruined palace are a monument of the vicissitudes of earthly greatness. The roads were fine for wheeling and we had some excellent stretches for coasting. We met several automobiles on our way and envied the ease with which they climbed the hills. We passed through the forest of the Ville d' Ivray and down the avenue de la Picarde into the town of Versailles.

We lunched al fresco beneath a long arbor of trellised vines, through whose interstices the sunlight sifted down, and then we set out to explore the vast Palace of Versailles. This palace was built by Louis XIV., as he conceived a dislike to St. Germain because it commanded a view of St. Denis the royal burying place. Along with the park it is said to have cost the royal treasury 1000 million francs or $200,000,000. The accounts handed down to us regarding the erection of this sumptuous palace and the laying out of its grounds almost border on the fabulous. Thus no fewer than 36,000 men and 6,000 horses are said to have been employed at one time in forming the terraces of the garden, leveling the park, and constructing a road from it to Paris and an aqueduct from Maintenon, a distance of 31 miles from Versailles. When the starving people sent a deputation demanding, "what shall we eat?" they received the mocking answer "eat grass." No wonder revolution swept away the evil dynasty with a besom of destruction. The chief consolation in visiting these monuments of royal tyranny is the fact that they are no longer the palaces of kings, but the palaces of the people—the private apartments of once mighty sovereigns, and the boudoirs of queens are open to the poorest of the land. How time brings its revenges!

After the year 1682 Versailles became the permanent headquarters of the court, and is therefore intimately associated with the history of that period. It witnessed the zenith and the decadence of the prosperity of Louis XIV.

It was at a meeting of the Estates held here in 1789 that the "Tiers Etat" took the memorable step of forming itself into a separate body, the Assemblee Nationale. On Oct. 6th, the unfortunate Louis XVI. saw the palace sacked by a Parisian mob, which included many thousands of women and since that period it has remained uninhabited.

From 19th Sept. 1870 to 6th March 1871, the palace was the headquarters of the King of Prussia, and a great part of the edifice was used as a military hospital. An impressive scene took place here in Jan. 1871, when the Prussian monarch in the celebrated Salle des Glaces, by a strange irony of fate, was proclaimed Emperor of United Germany. After the departure of the German troops in 1871 Versailles became the seat of the French government. It was not till 1879 that the government and the chambers transferred their headquarters to Paris.

The palace is seen to best advantage when viewed from the garden, the facade towards which is quarter of a mile long. It presents to-day substantially the same appearance as at the close of the reign of Louis XIV. It is impressive chiefly from its size. In the heyday of its prosperity it accommodated about 10,000 courtiers, dependants, servants, etc. It contains some of the grandest courts, galleries, and saloons in the world, adorned with priceless paintings—one of Vernet's battlepieces is seventy-one feet long and sixteen feet high—Sevres vases, malachite tables, marble mantels and the like beyond computation. Here is shown the bed chamber of Louis XIV., with gorgeous mural decorations and the king who died in it in 1715. The furniture is in tortoise shell and gilded bronze. Here the Grand Monarque used to receive his courtiers as he arose from bed—hence our word levee—and the royal chamberlains had the honor of arraying his sacred majesty in his wig, robes, and shoes and stockings. Here is the window where the herald proclaimed "Le Roi est mort! Vive le Roi!"

The Galerie des Glaces is a superbly decorated hall 240 ft. long, 35 ft. wide, and 42 ft. high, commanding a beautiful view of the garden and its ornamental sheets of water from the seventeen large arched windows, opposite which are as many mirrors in gilded niches. The chief decorations are the paintings celebrating the achievements of Louis XIV.

The Galerie des Batailles is a magnificent hall 132 yds. in length. It contains 34 battle scenes and busts of 80 warriors who have fallen in battle.

Of greater interest, however, are the private apartments of the amiable but unfortunate Louis XVI and of his high-born but low-laid consort Marie Antoinette. Here is her boudoir, her writing and work table, her library, and on the doors are the identical locks, of excellent workmanship, wrought by the royal locksmith, her husband. From the window is seen the long and noble avenue, up which swarmed the riotous mob of enraged men and women clamouring for blood. On this marble stairway the gentlemen of the guard kept the mob at bay, faithful unto death. The narrow passage through which the queen attempted to escape is also pointed out. It makes the tragic story of those horrible days very real to see these mementos of their horrors.

The vast and monotonous park, with its formal parterres, its long avenues of trees clipped into accurate cubes, its terraces and fountains with their Neptunes and Tritons and river-gods, are in a very artificial style. The chief object seems to have been to subject nature to the laws of symmetry, and to practice geometry, architecture, and sculpture upon lawns, trees, and ponds. They are adorned with numerous statues and vases, some of which are copies from celebrated antiques.

The playing of the Grandes Eaux attracts vast crowds of spectators. This imposing spectacle, which it costs $2,000 to exhibit, generally takes place on the first Sunday of every month. We were not fortunate enough to see this.

The Great and little, Trianons, built for royal mistresses, some distance from the Palace should be visited. The Grand Trianon contains several richly furnished apartments and a few good works of art.

The Petit Trianon was a favorite resort of Marie Antoinette and here is to be seen among other things a fine jewel-cabinet which belonged to her. There is a collection of unwieldy and heavily guilt state carriages to be seen at Versailles, which only recall memories of guilty pomp and pride. Such are some of the sights to be seen at Versailles and the visitor to Paris will not begrudge the time spent in visiting this historic spot.

After spending two weeks in "Gay Paree" we continued our journey towards Rome. The poet parted company with us at Paris and returned to London. In order not to lose any time we took a night train en route for the land of mountain, lake and glacier. We took the Chemin de Fer de Paris a Lyon and after an uneventful ride arrived at Geneva in time for breakfast.

Geneva with a population of about 97,000 is the largest and most important city in Switzerland. It is prettily situated at the south end of the lake, where the swift blue waters of the Rhone emerge from it. The Rhone divides the city into two parts, which are connected by six bridges. The highest of these the Pont du Mont Blanc 280 yds. long, leads from the broad Rue du Mont Blanc to the Jardin Anglais, and with this garden forms the centre of attraction in summer. In the river lies Rousseau's island in the centre of which rises the bronze statue of Rousseau.

Handsome quays with tempting shops flank the river. Mont Blanc 15,785 ft. high, with its crest of snow presents a magnificent appearance from Geneva especially at evening time.

Geneva is quite an historic place. It is first mentioned by Caesar in his Bellum Gallicum, Bk. I Chapters 6-8, under the name of Geneva a town of the Allobroges, whose territory became a Roman province. Geneva zealously embraced the Reformation. In 1536 Jean Calvin, a refugee from Paris, sought an asylum there and soon obtained great influence in all affairs of church and state. In 1559 Calvin founded the Geneva Academy, which soon became the leading Protestant school of theology. He died in 1564 but his doctrine has been firmly rooted in Geneva ever since. In the 18th century, Geneva was weakened by dissensions, often leading to bloodshed, between the privileged old families and the unprivileged and poorer classes. This unjust distinction was emphasized by the writings of Jean Jacques Rousseau, the son of a watchmaker born here. At the instigation of Voltaire and the University of Paris, Rousseau's Emile was burned by the hangman in 1763. In 1814 Geneva joined the Swiss Confederation.

A large number of distinguished persons has at different times found a refuge at Geneva. Madame de Stael is one of the most distinguished literary characters whose name is associated with the town.

Commercially Geneva is noted for its watches and jewellery and musical clocks. About 110,000 watches are annually manufactured there. There was a strike on when we were at Geneva, and there was considerable excitement for a couple of days. The socialists are very active in Switzerland and a short time after we left, one of their number murdered the unhappy Empress of Austria as she was stepping on board a boat.

We had intended to wheel through Switzerland as the roads are excellent, but we changed our minds as our time was limited and the weather was hot. We accordingly sent our wheels back to Paris and journeyed the rest of the way by rail and boat. Having thoroughly enjoyed a three days rest here, we decided to visit Lausanne, which is situated at the north-eastern end of Lake Geneva.

This lake, the Lacus Lemanus of the Romans is 45 miles long and from 1-1-2 to 8 miles broad. It differs in its deep blue color from the greenish hue of the other Swiss lakes. For centuries it has been a favorite theme with writers of every nationality, such as Byron, Voltaire, Rousseau and Alex. Dumas. On the north side it is bounded by gently sloping hills, richly clothed with vineyards and orchards, and enlivened with smiling villages. To the east and south a noble back ground is formed by the long chain of the mountains of Valais and Savoy.

We had a delightful sail up the lake. The day was bright and clear. A canopy was stretched over the deck to ward off the rays of the sun. An orchestra on board enlivened the proceedings with their music and the scenery on either hand was grand. We called at several villages on the north bank and caught sight of many pretty chateaux. At Coppet we saw the chateau occupied from 1790-1804 by Necker a Genevese who became finance minister to Louis XVI. His daughter the celebrated Mme. de Stael also resided at this chateau for some time.

We called at Nyon, the Noviodunum of the Romans. From this place there is a beautiful view of the lake, the Jura, and the Alps with Mt. Blanc.

We left the boat at Ouchy, the port of Lausanne and reached the latter place which is 1-2 mile higher by a cable tramway.

Lausanne has a population of 40,000 and occupies a beautiful and commanding situation on the terraced slopes of Mont. Jorat, overshadowed by its cathedral on one side and its castle on the other. The streets are hilly and irregular and the houses in the older parts are poor; but the new quarters are handsome. The chief hotel is the Hotel Gibbon, opposite the post office; in the garden behind the dining room the historian Gibbon wrote the last part of his great work, "The rise and fall of the Roman Empire."

We saw electric street cars here, the first we had seen since leaving Canada. We also wandered into a circus which cost us the sum of 12 cents. It was not quite on such a large scale as Barnum's. We saw a Swiss market scene the next morning and it was quite a novel sight.

From Ouchy, the port of Lausanne, to Villeneuve at the head of the lake, there are some interesting places. Vevey, the scene of Rousseau's famous romance, the Nouvelle Heloise, commands a beautiful view of the head of the lake with the mouth of the Rhone and, in the background, the Alps of the Valais with the jagged snow covered Dent du Midi.

Farther east is the Castle of Chillon which Byron has invested with much interest. The castle with its massive walls and towers stands on an isolated rock 22 yds. from the bank with which it is connected by a bridge.

"Chillon! thy prison is a holy place,
And thy sad floor an altar,—for 'twas trod
Until his very steps have left a trace,
Worn, as if the cold pavement were a sod
By Bonivard!—may none those marks efface,
For thy appeal from tyranny to God."

Among the names of those on the pillars in the castle are Byron, Eugene Sue, George Sand and Victor Hugo. Between Chillon and Villeneuve is the Hotel Byron. The Ile de Peilz, an islet 1-3 mile west of Villeneuve was laid out and planted with three elms a century ago, and recalls Byron's lines:—

And then there was a little isle
Which in my very face did smile
The only one in view.

Leaving Lausanne we journeyed to Bern by train. The carriages on most of the Swiss lines are constructed on the Canadian plan, holding 32-72 passengers; and furnished at each end with steps of easy access. Tickets are examined and collected in the carriages. Circular tickets are issued at reduced rates, but they are apt to hamper the traveller's movements and deprive him of the independence essential to enjoyment.

The road skirts the north shore of Lake Geneva for some distance and passes through several tunnels. Just before entering one of the longest a view of singular beauty is presented, embracing the greater part of the lake and the surrounding mountains in the distance and numerous quaint villages amidst vineyards in the foreground.

Leaving the lake we proceed in a north-easterly direction and after passing through several tunnels and over many deep mountain gorges we arrived at Romont a little town, with ancient walls and watch towers picturesquely situated on a hill. After a run of 16 miles we reached Freiburg, a town of 12,000 population. This town lies on the boundary between the two tongues and we leave French and enter German Switzerland and soon arrive at Bern.

Bern, with 52,000 inhabitants, has been the seat of the Swiss government since 1848. It is also the seat of a University attended by over 500 students. The city, in a striking situation, is built on a peninsula, formed by the Aare, which flows 100 ft. below. The streets in the old part of the town, are flanked with arcades, which form a covered way for foot-passengers. One of the chief characteristics of Bern consists in its numerous fountains mostly dating from the 16th century. These are situated in the centre of the streets and the women do their washing at them. In other respects Bern retains more mediaeval features than any other large town in Switzerland.

Bern is celebrated for its splendid view of the Alps, and the phenomenon

veth took him to the village and Crowe asked him to wait at the hotel. He waited for three hours and then learned that Crowe had left Lakefield, so he returned home. While he was waiting Crowe had gone to his brother in the village, Wm. Crowe, telling him to get a rig as Herman was up in Dummer badly hurt. They went to three places in the county and found no trace of the young man and Crowe returned home. Since then there has not been the slightest sign or clue of the missing one's whereabouts.

Mr. Cochrane consulted with a number of the most reliable men of the section and got a search party together yesterday morning. They searched all the woods and a creek in the vicinity but without result. The young man was highly esteemed and had many friends. It is extremely improbable that he would leave the country without telling some of his friends or relatives of his intention. Yet none of them saw him after he left Wall's house. He is not supposed to have had any money with him although his father declares that he had $1.75. He could easily have got money from his friends if it was his intention to leave, but he approached none of them.

The statements of Thomas Crowe are most unsatisfactory. He even denies that he step at the house of David Crowe on the night of the 25th. He also denies putting the horses in at Watley's. The only theory he advances is that the son probably left and cleared out in disgust at his drinking.

There can be no reasonable doubt that there were words between the men. The quarrel that Harding overheard shows this. Was there violence? Was the son made away with? A heavy blacksnake whip that was in the waggon has disappeared. When the waggon was stopped at Harding's the two were evidently out on the road. It is supposed that the young man managed to get into the waggon and drove the horses off up the hill but that for some reason he stopped near the top and that his father overtook him. What took place there is the mystery. From this point to the Indian river it is not very far and there is a good road down to the bank. From where the team were allowed to stand all night it is about three-quarters of a mile down to the river. How did Crowe get wet is also a question.

THOS. CROWE'S STORY.

A Review representative talked with Thos. Crowe in the cell where he was confined at police headquarters. Crowe is a man who looks about 45 years of age and he did not hesitate to tell the Review his story when asked. He said in answer to a question that he had not quarrelled with Herman. As for doing him bodily harm Crowe said his son was able to do as he liked with him. He (Herman) has been the boss, said Crowe, and a good boss he was, too. As regards what happened on the day of the disappearance his story was substantially as follows:—During the day in Warsaw I had taken four drinks to cheer me up. I had four drinks I remember of and may have had five, but I was not drunk as those drinks were over the whole day. When we started home I did not want Herman to know I had been drinking as he did not like it. When we had got on a piece, Herman said I had made a nice exhibition of myself and it was no wonder Uncle Sam was ashamed of me. I said Herman I am not drunk. I only had four drinks. He said "Well, they must have been four big ones or you had more than four." I reached over and grabbed the lines and said "Hold on Herman, turn around and go back and I will prove that I only had four drinks." Then Herman jumped out of the waggon. I also got out and told him not to "act up" this way, and to get in and come back or go on home with me. He then jumped into the waggon and drove off, leaving me on the road. I called out to him to come back but he did not stop and I walked it." Crowe said he never struck his son, who he said never touched liquor but was a good, steady boy well able to take care of himself. The father thought his son had gone to his uncle's further back. He was glad he said that the case was going to be looked into and cleared up for it would relieve him of any suspicion in connection with the disappearance, which looked peculiar now but would be explained when Herman was found.

REMANDED TO GAOL.

This afternoon Thos. Crowe was brought before County Magistrate Edmison and remanded to gaol until Thursday on a complaint of threatening Mrs. Chas. Watley.

Crowe had no further explanation to make than that given to the Review in the morning. He said the boy would be found all right if proper search was made, and he was very anxious that his whereabouts should be discovered, as much, he said, on account of his brothers and sisters as himself. He believes that the boy has gone away to some friends and will be found in due time. The boy, he said, was one of the best, truthful and trustworthy at all times.

The missing boy is well spoken of by every one, and Warsaw people spoken to to-day seemed to think that he had become tired of his father's habits and has gone away. If this is correct he will no doubt turn up in a day or two now that the case has been made public. The contradictory stories told by his father may be accounted for by the fact that he had been drinking and his memory is muddled.

The Elder Got the Best One.

An account of the life of Judge James B. Bradwell of Chicago by his daughter tells a story of the deeply religious training of his childhood. He had the old fashioned faith in the efficacy of prayer before he was of sufficient age to understand the reasonable limits of such petitions.

Once, when James was only 8 years old, the wagon was sent to Chicago for provisions. Five days elapsed. The wagon was detained, and the Bradwell family was without food and without a man to provide it. Little James, as usual with even small boys of the time and place, was a good shot. His mother loaded the gun for him, and he started out to see what he could shoot to supply the table.

In due time he saw two prairie chickens not far away. He got his gun ready and then took long enough to pray thus:

"O Father, if you will just let me bring down those two chickens I'll give your minister the choice of the pair!"

The trigger was pulled and down came the two prairie chickens. James believed the shot to be a direct answer to his prayer. He took the two birds to Elder Snow, the minister, and told him of the circumstances.

The good elder took a long time to examine the two chickens, in order to be quite sure that he got the better of the two, because, he said, he thought it best that the boy's compact should be faithfully carried out.

"He isn't exactly what I'd call an insincere man," remarked Mr. Blykins, "and he wants you to like him. But"—

"Yes?" said the person who is always eager to hear bad news about human nature.

"Well, he's the sort of man who will find out what time you are sure to be too busy to leave before he takes chances on asking you out to luncheon."—Washington Star.

JOHANN STRAUSS DEAD.

The Famous Composer Passes Away at Vienna—Sketch of His Career.

Vienna, June 5.—Johann Strauss, the famous composer, is dead.

Johann Strauss, known as "The Waltz King," and composer of the "Gypsy Baron," "The Beautiful Blue Danube" and many other popular waltz melodies, was born in Vienna in 1825. His father was a well-known composer of dance music. Strauss made his debut as an orchestra conductor at the age of 19, selecting his father's "Loreley" and a composition of his own. On the death of his father he assumed the direction of the latter's orchestra, and continued giving concerts in Vienna until 1859. He then travelled in Russia, Germany, Italy, France, Great Britain and the United States and became orchestra leader of the court balls at Vienna, giving up this position to his brother Edward in 1870. From that time on Johann Strauss devoted his time exclusively to composition and produced the works that made him famous.

Madrid, June 5.—Germany pays 25,000,000 pesetas for the Caroline, Palaos and Marianne Islands. Spain retains three coaling stations, one in each group, and Germany undertakes to defend these stations in case of war. Germany, in addition, grants Spain the most favored nation treatment in Germany and in the colonial islands.

Success of German Policy.

Berlin, June 5.—The announcement of the cession of the Caroline and other islands to Germany met with a most favorable reception here. The arrangements, however, require the sanction of the Reichstag, which will fix the price.

Indians Drowned in Lake of the Clouds Near Laggan, Alberta, N.W.T.

Winnipeg, Man., June 5.—A Laggan, Albert, despatch on Saturday says: Between 25 and 30 Indians, men, women and children, were drowned yesterday in Lake of the Clouds, near the Canadian Pacific Railway, while coming to the reservation near this place to attend the spring "Potlatch." They were travelling in boats, rudely manufactured of cariboo and skins of other animals, when two long boats collided. Both vessels were rendered useless and entirely lost.

G.T.R. MEN GO BACK TO WORK

Conservative Members of Parliament Act as Mediators.

The G.T.R. Trackmen Have Trust That the Management Will Redress Their Grievances, and They Go Back to Work in the Hope That Something Will Be Done Soon—Good Impression of Mr. McGuigan.

Montreal, June 5.—The Grand Trunk trackmen's strike is over. Mr. Pole, chairman of the men's executive, who, being seen, was asked if the company agreed to take back all the old men who were on strike. He said:

"Well, you can hardly say that we have an agreement yet, but we hope it will come speedily now. It is this way. Some members of Parliament, men used to action and to arbitration in cases of this kind, came down here especially to help us. We said all along that we wanted to submit our case to arbitration and they offered to take hold of it. There was Mr. Geo. Taylor, the Conservative whip, and member for Leeds and Grenville; Mr. Powell, Mr. Clarke, and some others. They were interested sufficiently in our case to come down here from Ottawa, and some of our men, who knew them, say that they are reliable, and so on. They saw Mr. Hays and Mr. McGuigan and these gentlemen finally told the members that they would discuss the merits of the case and discuss the propositions of the men through them. In other words, they consented to deal with the men's demands through the members of Parliament, who interested themselves, and in the meantime consented that the men should go back to work at once."

It Is Unconditional.

The Grand Trunk officials will not make a statement till the men make a formal request to be taken back. As a matter of fact, it looks as if the members of Parliament had asked the men to go back unconditionally and that they have agreed to do so. There has been arbitration, and it is probable that the men will return to work, relying upon the generosity of the company to improve their positions. The men say their places were being taken by others and when the engineers left for home the trackmen had little else to do but to get back to work. The general impression is that Mr. McGuigan will take back the best of the men and will do all he can to improve their positions.

Is This the Basis?

Ottawa, June 5.—George Taylor and Henry A. Powell, M.P.'s, have returned from Montreal, where it is said they successfully interviewed General Manager Hays in regard to a settlement of the G. T. R. trackmen's strike on a basis of an advance of 10 cents a day within ten days and a subsequent reference to arbitration if necessary.

AGED MRS. THOMAS KILLED.

Fatal Runaway Accident on the Waterdown Road.

Hamilton, June 5.—About 5.30 Saturday morning a fatal runaway accident occurred on the Waterdown road, a short distance west of the Valley Inn, when a number of farmers were driving into the city to attend market. On one of the wagons were John Thomas and his mother, 72 years old, whose home is near Lowville. Their team was just crossing the railway bridge when the newspaper train from Toronto passed beneath and frightened the horses, which dashed down the hill at a terrific speed. Mrs. Thomas was thrown out with great force on the road. When Mrs. Thomas was picked up it was found she was very badly injured, and she was taken to the Valley Inn, where she died almost immediately. Both her legs, her shoulder bone and several ribs on the left side were broken. Mrs. Maurice Roberts of Carlisle received a broken left elbow and several bruises from the collision of the Thomas horses with her wagon.

REPUBLIC ABOUT WIPED OUT.

Heart of the Mining Town Swept by the Fire Fiend.

Republic, B.C., June 5.—Early Saturday morning fire broke out in the Spiggle building. The wind was high and in a short time the buildings on the east side of the street were in flames. There was no water, and even if there had been it would not have availed much. For two hours the fire burned on both sides of the street. The open space below the Republic Trading Company's store was the only thing that saved the lower end of the town. All the saloons were closed by order of the sheriff. Banks and other business houses have started in temporary quarters. The streets are full of people and the ruins are still smouldering. The total loss is between $72,000 and $80,000; the total insurance is $30,000.

Treasurer of Howick Suicides.

Gorrie, Ont., June 5.—Some time during Saturday afternoon Charles Wilson, one of Howick's most respected farmers, committed suicide in James Galbraith's bush by cutting his throat with a razor. The body was found about 10 o'clock on Saturday night. No reason can be assigned for the rash act. Deceased was at one time first deputy reeve of the township of Howick, and only two weeks ago was appointed treasurer of the said township.

THE BOUNDARY OF ALASKA.

Important Paper From the British Foreign Office.

The Rules for the Arbitration—Yankees Proposed a Definition in Accordance With Russo-American Treaty, But This the British Declined—U. S. and Not Canada That Has Been Making the Trouble.

London, June 5.—The Foreign Office issued a Parliamentary paper on Saturday night, giving in detail the proceedings of the joint high commission in Washington on Feb. 18 relating to the British proposals for arbitration on the Alaskan boundary. It says the British commissioners proposed the immediate appointment of an arbitral tribunal to determine the boundary between Alaska and Canada, from the southernmost point at Prince of Wales Island to Mount St. Elias, in accordance with the Anglo-Russian treaty of Feb. 28, 1825, the tribunal to consist of three jurists, one nominated by the Privy Council, one by President McKinley and the third to be selected by the two nominees.

Rules of the Arbitration.

The rules governing the arbitrators were as follows:

A. Adverse holding or prescription during a period of 50 years shall make good the title. The arbitrators may gain exclusive political control of the district, as well as settlement thereof, sufficient to constitute adverse holding or make prescriptive title.

B. The arbitrators may recognise and give effect to rights or claims resting on any other ground, valid according to international law, that the arbitrators may deem applicable to the case, which are not in contravention of rule A.

C. In determining the boundary, if the territory of one party shall be found by the tribunal to have been at the date of this treaty in occupation of the subjects or citizens of the other party, such effect shall be given to such occupation as reason, justice, the principles of international law and the equities of the case require.

Other Provisions.

The other articles provide for a meeting 60 days after the printed articles are submitted; that all questions, including the final judgment, shall be determined by a majority of all the arbitrators, the decision, if possible, to be rendered within three months of the close of arguments, and the employment of necessary assistance of scientific experts, each Government to pay its own expenses, and the other expenses to be equally divided.

The concluding article provides that the high contracting parties shall engage to consider the result of the proceedings as a full, perfect and final settlement of all questions referred to the arbitrators.

What the Yankees Wanted.

The Americans accepted the proposals as the bases of a re-adjustment, but proposed in addition to the Anglo-Russian treaty that the boundary should be defined in accordance with the Russo-American treaty of cession, or, as the same shall be established by the tribunal, under the rules hereinafter provided, the tribunal to consist of six impartial jurists of repute, three to be nominated by the Privy Council and three by the President of the United States. The Americans also proposed an amendment to rule C as follows: In considering the "coast" referred to in said treaties, it is understood that the coast of the continent is intended and that all towns and settlements on tide-water settled under authority of the United States and under jurisdiction of the United States at the date of this treaty, shall remain within the territory and jurisdiction of the United States.

Britain Firmly Declined.

The British commissioners regretted that they were absolutely unable to accept the suggested modification to their proposition, because the suggested American tribunal did not provide a tribunal which would necessarily, and, in the possible event of difference of opinion, finally dispose of the question, and because the amendment to rule C was a marked and important departure from the rules of the Venezuelan boundary reference, which left all such questions to be determined by the tribunal, and be-

An Important "Don't."

One of the "don'ts" with which it would be well to impress society at large is, "Don't tell a person that she is not looking well."

The sentence, "My dear, you are looking very badly today," will cast a damper over the most hilarious spirits. We may as well be frank and acknowledge that in 99 cases out of 100 to look ill is to look plain. The lustreless eyes, the sallow cheeks and the pallid lips are not compatible with beauty and [illegible] of expression. Each of us has her little mark of vanity that makes her writhe at the knowledge that she is not at her best in appearance as in feeling. And if one has tried to conceal from others the fact that she is not quite up to the usual mark of health she feels that her efforts are vain. And, worst of all, if one is bravely fighting with a genuine illness the consciousness that the disease has made such inroads that the casual observer notices the change in one's appearance awakens a sensation of fear and depression that is detrimental to health.—Harper's Bazar.

BAY OF QUINTE CONFERENCE.

RULING OF DR. CARMAN ON THE WORKMAN CASE.

The Matter Stands Until the Sitting of the General Conference Court of Appeal—Superintendent's Address.

The Bay of Quinte Conference of the Methodist church met at Belleville Wednesday night. The Workman case was the chief subject of interest. The Superintendent Dr. Carman, refused to receive the report of the special committee appointed to consider the matter. His ruling was as follows:—

"On the proposition to have the report of said committee read as bearing on the case of Rev. Dr. Workman of the Cobourg district, the General Superintendent in the chair ruled that by the proper court and legal processes of the discipline the brother in question stood clear and no report of an extra-disciplinary character, as was this proposed report, could be admitted as either inculpating or exculpating a brother; that the discipline had its processes of determinating such matters, and to keep ourselves safe we must keep within the bounds and measures prescribed by discipline. Wherefore the chair decided that this extra-disciplinary report could not be admitted on such cases of character. The chair further ruled that the existence and action of such a committee holding over a man's character for the whole year from one Conference to the other without charges and trial is ultra of the Conference. Signed, A. Carman, General Superintendent."

The whole matter was disposed of until the sitting of the General Conference Court of Appeal by the following resolution:—Moved by Rev. S. J. Shorey, seconded by Rev. W. R. Young, B. A., "That the minutes of the afternoon session be confirmed with the understanding that the General Superintendent alone be responsible for the statements contained in his ruling."

DR. CARMAN'S ADDRESS.

Dr. Carman delivered the address at the opening Conference session on Thursday morning. His remarks were characteristic. Dealing with the question of Sabbath observance, Dr. Carman said that the Conference should organize for work. Force must be brought upon the rulers of the country. This would be legitimate political action. To-day there are organized anti-Sabbatic elements. Shall Canada have in certain places the Buffalo Sunday, the German rationalistic beer-guzzling Sunday? Should this come across the Suspension bridge? The matter of Sabbath-breaking is comparatively new. If we are quiet now in this business, in a little while we cannot shake off the coil of Sabbath desecration.

PROHIBITION.

Touching the plebiscite, Dr. Carman said "there may be room for a variety of judgment on this question, but on the British side, the side of government by majorities, there can be no question of what was the right thing to do. Sweeping, radical, universal and instantaneous prohibition may not be expedient, but the answer of the Premier has greatly grieved us. With magnificent majorities east and majorities here and west, it would not have been beneath the dignity of the Premier and his Government to have looked at both sides of the question. There would in his judgment be schools and schools of voters going off. It would be some satisfaction to make temperance power felt at the polls. If we rise above a contemptible party spirit, become so powerful as to put one party out and therefore put another party in we shall have prohibition. (Continued applause.)

DANCING.

Dr. Carman's final topic was dancing in the public schools. He said that there may be high authority for this; some colleges have led the way. There was a time, however, when they shut out, perhaps wisely, religious denominational services from the schoolhouse; but is it not a strange thing that when they put the Lord and His worship out of the front door the b rought in the devil at the back door! Should this continue, separate schools must come for Methodism and for other denominations.

The election of President, already noted, followed and routine matters occupied the afternoon session.

cause the words added by the United States claim that an effect should be given to their occupation of land in British territory, which justice, reason and the equities of the case do not require. The commissioners also objected that the language used with reference to the coast was open to misconstruction, and they were of opinion that it was useless to further press the negotiations at present, and that they must refer the matter to their Government for an exchange of views in respect to the constitution of the tribunal.

As Regards an Umpire.

The Americans inquired whether the British commissioners had considered the question of selecting an umpire from the American continent. The British members replied in the affirmative, adding that they thought it most objectionable, in view of the policy long maintained and recently reasserted by the Government of the United States towards other nations on the said continent. The selection of an umpire by any such nation would not offer a guarantee of impartiality, which was the first qualification requisite.

As to the Remaining Subjects.

The Americans then proposed to proceed to settle the remaining subjects, as they thought it would be unwise to defer adjustments so nearly concluded. Several subjects were so far advanced as to assure the desirability of a settlement. If, then, all difference except one could now be adjusted, would it not be most commendable to advance neighborly friendship, and could not the respective Governments be trusted to settle the principal remaining difference by direct negotiation?

The British commissioners replied that all questions should be deferred until the boundary was disposed of, either by agreement or by reference to arbitration, because the manner in which they were prepared to adjust some other important matters must depend upon whether it would be possible to arrive at a settlement of all questions which might at any time occasion acute controversy and even conflict.

All for a Modus Vivendi.

Washington, June 5.—The negotiations now in progress at London between Ambassador Choate and Lord Salisbury relate entirely to the arrangement of a modus vivendi to avert danger of hostile collision on the Alaska border during the present season at least.

DANGER IN SODA.

Serious Results Sometimes Follow Its Excessive Use.

Common soda is all right in its place and indispensable in the kitchen and for cooking and washing purposes, but it was never intended as a medicine, and people who use it as such will some day regret it.

We refer to the common use of soda to relieve heartburn or sour stomach, a habit which thousands of people practice and one which is fraught with danger; moreover the soda only gives temporary relief and in the end the stomach trouble gets worse and worse.

The soda acts as a mechanical irritant to the walls of the stomach and bowels and cases are on record where it has accumulated in the intestines, causing death by inflammation or peritonitis.

Dr. Harlandson recommends as the safest and surest cure for sour stomach (acid dyspepsia) an excellent preparation sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These tablets are large 3-grain lozenges, very pleasant to taste and contain the natural acids, pepsones and digestive elements essential to good digestion, and when taken after meals they digest the food perfectly and promptly before it has time to ferment, sour and poison the blood and nervous system.

Dr. Wuerth states that he invariably uses Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach derangements and finds them a certain cure not only for sour stomach, but by promptly digesting the food they create flesh and strengthen the action of the heart and liver. They are not a cathartic, but intended only for stomach diseases and weakness and will be found reliable in all stomach troubles except cancer of the stomach. All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents per package.

A little book describing all forms of stomach weakness and their cure mailed free by addressing the F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

ARBITRATION.

The Peace Conference at The Hague Will Surely Agree Upon It.

The Hague, June 5.—The drafting committee of the peace conference on Saturday held an important meeting, at which M. de Staal, head of the Russian delegation; Sir Julian Pauncefote, chief of the British delegation, and Count Nigra, chief of the Italian delegation, were present. Articles 7 to 12 of the Russian proposal, bearing on arbitration, were agreed to almost without modification, though the American delegates declared that they could not admit the provisions of article 10, that monetary questions and questions concerning interoceanic canals should be compulsorily submitted to arbitration tribunal.

The entire committee on mediation and arbitration will meet to-day to review the work accepted by the drafting committee. The latter will take up on Wednesday the most vital question of all, article 10, which deals with the establishment of an arbitration court. It is expected that the American, British and Russian proposals will be welded into one; and there is every indication of a universal desire to reach the establishment of a system of permanent arbitration, the German delegates whose opposition was formerly feared, declaring themselves as desirous as the other members of the conference to arrive at such a conclusion.

DREYFUS VERDICT QUASHED.

The Prisoner Is to Be Brought From Devil's Island.

The Court Has So Declared, and Likewise That He Is to Have a Fresh Trial by Court-Martial at Rennes—President Mazeau Decides That New Facts Have Come Out Which Establish Innocence.

Paris, June 5.—When the doors of the Court of Cassation were opened on Saturday an immense crowd of people attempted to rush through the entry, and for a time there was great confusion and uproar. The session opened at 2 o'clock, when the president of the court, M. Mazeau, after reminding the audience that all demonstrations were interdicted, gave judgment in the following tenor: The court, after hearing the report of the premier president of the Civil Chamber, the prosecutor-general's finding, and the application of Maitre Mornard (counsel for Madame Dreyfus), to the effect that a revision of judgment can be demanded when new facts are produced, or unknown documents showing the innocence of the condemned, and in view of the presentation to the court-martial of a secret document bearing the words "Ce canaille de D—," which was capable of influencing their minds, and which is not now regarded as applicable to Dreyfus, constitutes a new fact calculated to establish the innocence of Dreyfus; and noting that two authenticated letters, written on the identical paper dated contemporaneously with the bordereau, were discovered in the house of Esterhazy, the writing upon which experts have declared to be the same as that of the bordereau, which facts were unknown to the court-martial, and tend to establish the innocence of Dreyfus; and noting that the alleged confessions of Dreyfus to Captain Le Brun-Renaud are disproved, in view of these arguments and without submitting others, the court quashes and annuls the verdict of condemnation of Dec. 22, 1894, against Alfred Dreyfus, by the first court-martial of the military government of Paris, and sends the accused before a court-martial at Rennes, to be specially appointed to conduct the new trial.

This judgment is to be printed and transcribed on the docket of the first court-martial, alongside the decision which is annulled.

The court then adjourned.

Premier Dupuy then summoned the Ministers of Interior, Justice, War and Navy and the Colonies to meet on Sunday morning in order to confer upon the measures to be taken to bring Dreyfus back to France.

The Case Against Dreyfus.

The Government commissioner charged to prepare the case against Dreyfus will be Major Garrier, a Catholic, and Captain Jacquet, a retired officer, will report on the evidence at the court-martial. General Lucas, of the 10th Artillery Corps, is a Jew, and will choose seven officers for judges. He has seven infantry regiments, two cavalry and two artillery brigades, one battalion of engineers and cavalry regiment to select from; but the general feeling throughout Brittany is hostile to Dreyfus. However, acquittal is certain, since there was never any case against him save the bordereau and the "Canaille de D—" letter. We know now that the documents are inapplicable to Dreyfus.

Dreyfus to Go Home.

Paris, June 5.—The Cabinet Council yesterday morning decided that the French second-class cruiser Sfad, now at Port de France, Martinique, should proceed immediately and bring Dreyfus from the Devil's Island to France. The cruiser is expected to arrive at Brest about June 26, when Dreyfus will be handed to the military authorities and lodged in the Military Prison at Rennes.

Madame Dreyfus Jubilant.

Paris, June 5.—It is rumored that the Government will ask the postponement until Friday of all interpellations in the Chamber of Deputies on the Dreyfus case, in order to allow the Ministry to deliberate on its course of action.

Mme. Dreyfus is overjoyed at the decision of the Court of Cassation. She has received messages of congratulation from all parts of the country and abroad.

Of the 47 daily newspapers which appeared yesterday in Paris only six opposed revision.

Zola Is Delighted.

London, June 5.—M. Emile Zola, who is now living in strict retirement near the Crystal Palace, but who proposes to return to Paris early next week, was naturally overjoyed at the outcome of the Dreyfus revision proceedings. He said that "Armed with the truth, I knew all must come right."

THE FRENCH PRESIDENT

Was Attacked by a Mob on Sunday at the Auteuil Race Course—Comtesse Castellane Prominent in the Melee.

Paris, June 5.—President Loubet, accompanied by the Premier, M. Dupuy, and the Chief of the Military Household, General M. C. Bailloud, drove to the Auteuil races yesterday afternoon, closely followed by Madame Loubet in a second landau. As they drove along the Avenue des Champs Elysees the crowd bowed respectively, but, on arriving at Auteuil, they were met by a violent demonstration. During the Grand Steeplechase many blows were struck and several policemen were injured in their endeavors to prevent an invasion of the Presidential stand. At the crisis of the excitement, while shouts of "Vive l'Armee!" and "Vive Deroulede!" were heard on all sides, Count Christiani rushed toward the President, brandishing a stick, and directed a blow against him, striking his hat. The crowd rushed upon Christiani, who only escaped severe handling by being taken under police protection. President Loubet remained all the while quite unmoved, talking to the Premier, while the officers of his military household were defending him against violence.

The principal leaders of the demonstration were M. Joseph Lasies, anti-Semite and Nationalist Deputy for Gers, and M. Firmin Faure, anti-Semite and National Deputy for Oran, Algeria.

Police Inspector Grilliere had his head seriously wounded in the melee and President Loubet has since decorated him with the cross of the Legion of Honor, in recognition of his devotion to duty. He is still unconscious from the blow.

Countess Castellane to the Front.

The whole race course, particularly the enclosure, witnessed scenes of the wildest excitement. Comtesse Boni de Castellane, who was Miss Anna Gould of New York city, placed herself at the head of the Jeunesse Royaliste and marched up and down the lawn, shouting "Vive l'Armee!" Comte Boni de Castellane and his brother Jean were arrested, but soon liberated. Comte de Dion, when arrested, resisted and fought with his cane, causing the jewelled top to fly off, striking a journalist. He was detained in custody.

About 130 Arrests Made.

Altogether about 130 arrests were made, one being that of M. Danseize, Deputy Mayor of Armentieres.

Demonstrations and counter demonstrations continued until M. Loubet left the race course at 4.30 p.m.

Count Christiani was thrown, trampled upon and severely bruised in the melee. He is a grandson of a general who was well known during the Empire.

The race course company apologized to M. Loubet, who replied that he could not think of holding them responsible. He remarked to an important personage that he did not intend being intimidated into resignation.

A special Cabinet Council has issued a semi-official note, which says: "The Government will act with the greatest energy and will impose respect for the President and for the state."

PUSHING THE CAMPAIGN.

Shooting Gen. Pilar's Rebels—Col. Whalley Captured Cainta on Saturday With Small American Loss.

Manila, June 5.—A vigorous campaign was begun on Saturday against Gen. Pio del Pilar's force of 9,000 rebels in the foothills at the mouth of Laguna de Bay and in the towns of Cainta, Taytay and Antipolo, under the supervision of Gen. Lawton. Gen. Hall, with 2,500 men, moved southeast from the pumping station, and Col. Whalley, who relieved Gen. King in command of his brigade, proceeded east for San Pedro Macati, the two divisions approaching each other. Col. Whalley captured Cainta with small loss, the rebels fleeing before the advance of the United States troops. Gen. Hall drove the Filipinos from the vicinity of Marquina, sweeping them toward Col. Whalley's column.

A Shooting Fatality.

A tombstone set up in the cemetery of Debrecsin, in Hungary, tells an extraordinary family tragedy. It reads: "Here rest in the Lord Josef Moritz, Sr., who died in his sixty-second year. He was shot by his son. Frau Josef Moritz, Sr., who died in her forty-seventh year. She was shot by her daughter. Elisabeth Moritz, who died by her own [illegible] in her seventeenth year after shooting her mother. Joseph Moritz, Jr., who died in prison, aged 27 years. He had shot his father. May the Lord have mercy on their poor, sinful souls." The stone was erected by a literary society, to which the last of the family bequeathed a large sum of money.

Town Clerk Arrested.

Orillia, Ont., June 5.—There is trouble in municipal matters in Gravenhurst. On Friday the town clerk was arrested at the instance of the Town Council on a charge of being $2,700 short in the funds of the municipality. He was released on $4,000 bail until to-day, when the matter will be further considered. The shortage seems a mystery.

Doctors' Costly Visits.

Sickness in the family is hard enough to bear under the best of conditions. It almost always cuts off part of the regular income, and when on top of that it adds unreasonably to the expense it seems almost too great a burden for any family in moderate circumstances to endure.

But there is a way to avoid most of these unnecessary expenses besides preventing a great deal of the sickness itself.

"Doctor's visits come high," says Mrs. Bela F. Howard, of Glen Ellen, Sonoma Co., Cal. "I have been in this place sixteen years and have only had a doctor once in my family since that time, thanks to Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser and his medicines. This book saves doctor's visits. I cannot do without it in the house. I have had two copies but cannot keep them. Enclosed I send one-cent stamps for another copy." Another lady, Mrs. Jennie Warren, of Clifton, Graham Co., Arizona, says: "With pleasure I write to you again to let you know that I feel as well and strong as I ever did. With your kind and good advice and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I have been entirely cured. I thank you a thousand times for your good advice. I think that if every person who is sick in any way will write to you for advice and will take the medicine you prescribe, according to directions, no other doctor's services will be needed."

The great thousand-page Medical Adviser will be sent free paper-bound for 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of customs and mailing only; or in cloth-binding 50 stamps. Address R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y. He will send professional advice (in a plain sealed envelope) free of charge. All letters are considered in sacred privacy, and never published except by the writer's permission.

KINGSTON WON BY SIX TO THREE

around the course for a homer.

Peterborough went to bat first but the men were caught on the bags and the side retired. Kingston went in and McCrea scored a run. The locals were again ducked in the second and the visitors rolled up a big 3, chiefly through the home team's errors. In the third McCabe made a safe hit and aided by a hit by Donovan, scored for Peterborough while Kingston was ducked, McCabe striking Easton and Sullivan out and leaving one man on the bases. In the fourth Connors batted out a fly, Gray struck out and Sheridan went out a fly to centre field, which was corralled, and the side retired nothing ahead. Kingston went in and and McCabe struck out McCrea and Robertson while Bennet was put out on the bags, leaving them nothing ahead. In number five Parnell was put out at second, Graham was caught out, McCabe made his home run and Melrose went out at first. In this innings Elliott and Smith made hits and both scored. Then McCabe struck out Easton and Tuttle, and Grady in centre caught Sullivan out on a beautiful long fly. The score was now 6 to 2. In the sixth Donovan fanned out, Parnell went out at first but Connors made a hit and scored a run before Grady went out at first. Kingston scored nothing, there three men going out at first base. The score was now 6-3. In the seventh Peterborough blanked, Sheridan going out at first while Parnell went out at second and Graham at first by a good double play of the Kingston men. Kingston also went out in this innings, without runs, Grady and Melrose both making beautiful catches while Elliott was put out at first. In the eighth the work was sharp. Melrose was put out on first and Donovan and Parnell fanned out for strikes. Kingston went in and the first batter was caught out in right field, while McCabe struck Tuttle and Bennet out.

Peterborough went in for the ninth for nil. Connors batted a fly to the second baseman, Grady one to the pitcher and Sheridan one to the pitcher. During the last three innings no runs had been scored, The teams lined up and gave cheers for each other and the umpire. The score was:

NOTES.

The match was fast all through.

More power to the elbow is what the Peterboroughs want.

The Kingstons made no earned runs.

Lionel King was umpire and was strictly impartial. Kingston were greatly pleased with him.

Sullivan, Kingston's first baseman, is 6 ft 5 inches tall,

There were a number of ladies at the game and they showed great interest in the play.

The managers of the baseball team are putting up good sport and their games should be largely patronized.

The Cuban Giants, colored, play in Kingston early in July.

Many of these at the C.C.E. bicycle club's road race came down afterwards and saw the match,

The visitors were highly pleased with the treatment accorded them in town.

"Chic." McCrea tried to do some wonderful coaching, but the small boys roosted him so bad that he thought he had "got the axe."

The Argyles, of Toronto, play here next Saturday afternoon. They are the best of the city teams outside of the big league team. A despatch says that they have signed a new pitcher. The game will be a corker and should be seen by a big crowd.

The Kingstons have a kick over Bowmanville. They played there on Friday and the match ended in a row over the umpire. At night one of their players was arrested for setting off a giant firecracker on the street and they had to shell out their hard earned money to the extent of five dollars and costs to keep him in the game.

Malone, Kingston's right fielder, got his finger badly bruised near the end of the game by having it struck by one of McCabe's fast ones while holding the bat.

SELF-GOVERNMENT.

The Local System for Ireland That Went Into Effect Only the Other Day —What It Means.

In the House of Commons during the session of 1897 Arthur J. Balfour, speaking for the Government, startled many of his colleagues and the three kingdoms with a speech that was as unexpected as it was remarkable. Its momentous point was that the Government had decided to give to Ireland a full and complete scheme of local self-government, and in order that all the people of every grade and class should have equal participation in its establishment, the electorate would be placed on a broad democratic basis. This was not alone a promise to Ireland that she should have the same system of local self-government which had been given to the English people a few years before, but it was a defiance to the bigots, the landlords and the Unionist aristocracy, who had often previously refused much smaller concessions. Irish Nationalist representatives in Parliament had often introduced bills to remedy to some extent the injustices of a government system directed by aliens and administered by bodies and persons hostile to the people and contemptuous of their wishes, but these bills were invariably denounced and rejected as revolutionary.

A. J. BALFOUR.

Under the old regime the Irish people had practically no voice in the administration of their local affairs, to say nothing of the governmment of their country. All the public business of the counties—the levying of rates and taxes, the ordering of public works and improvements and the expenditure of public funds—was in the hands of grand jurors, who were the nominees of Dublin Castle, and who owed their origin to James I., "the wisest fool in Christendom." A like system, independent of and incompatible to the people, controlled all public administrative affairs.

But on the 6th of April, 1899, a new era for the Irish people and their country began, when Balfour's local government bill went into effect, and when the ballot boxes closed a successful revolution had been accomplished. It was a sweeping one, too, for it swept out of existence the grand jurors and other survivals of feudalism, and for the first time in centuries gave the people the right and the power to administer their own affairs. What Hugh O'Neill, O'Donnell and Sarsfield on the field of battle tried to win; what Lord Edward Fitzgerald and Robert Emmet and countless others died for, but in vain, was quietly and bravely accomplished in one day a few weeks ago. An entirely new current has been injected into the political life of the old land, and it may be predicted that a more independent and self-thinking manhood will be the result.

Considering the issues at stake, the elections throughout the island were remarkably quiet. There were no disturbances and no bitter antagonisms of any consequence at the polls. The main fight was on the election of county councillors, a body which is to take the place of the grand juries. There were also urban district councillors elected, so that each voter had two sets of ballot papers given to him, these being colored differently, and the voter, after marking his ballot, placed each paper in a box which corresponded to it in color. The conduct of the people everywhere was admirable, a noteworthy fact, considering that it was the first chance they ever had to throw off class domination and hurl the shackles of ascendency.

The result of the county council elections was a sweeping majority for the Nationalists or home rulers. In three of the provinces of Ireland—that is, in 26 counties out of a total of 32—the defeat of the Unionists was overwhelming, while even in Ulster, taking the province as a whole, the Nationalists have a majority. The total vote by provinces is as follows:

Connaught (five counties), Nationalists, 93; Unionists, 8.

Leinster (12 counties), Nationalists, 219; Unionists, 23.

Munster (six counties), Nationalists, 147; Unionists, 10.

Ulster (nine counties), Nationalists, 97; Unionists, 83.

These give totals for all Ireland of 551 county councilors for the Nationalistss and 119 for the Unionists.

When we consider that these new governing bodies for the Irish counties were among the disfranchised and dispossessed of yesterday; when the former supreme authority in the shape of a grand jury man finds himself now at the mercy of a new power; maybe that of a small tenant farmer, or a mechanic or a laborer whom he has been in the habit of regarding as little better than a serf, it may just be said that a revolution sweeping in its nature has taken place in Ireland. So far as relates to all local affairs, the government of the country has passed absolutely into new hands. Those who believed the country was theirs to rule by right divine, or by some other title as strong, hereditary or otherwise, have been completely routed, and in several cases as ridiculously as ignominiously. For instance, the Marquis of Ormonde was beaten in the suburbs of Kilkenny, the city of the butlers, by a tenant farmer, and Lord Mayo polled only 19 votes in the County Kildare, which he looked upon as his by right, while George Wolfe, a Protestant Nationalist, in the same Catholic County of Kildare, was triumphantly elected over Baron de Robeck. Lord Dunally got only four votes in Tipperary, but Lord Duncannen was elected in Kilkenny through a Nationalist division.

The papers of all parties are giving much attention to the results of the placid revolution in the sister isle and many editorial comments are the consequence. The London Times says:

The great fact of the situation is that with these elections, which complete now the new local government system for Ireland, the Nationalists are in a majority, and will, over a greater part of the country, have the local administration in their hands. It will, therefore, rest even in greater degree than before with the Nationalists themselves whether larger powers of local government shall in the future be extended to their country. If local government in Nationalist hands is a success, the argument for an extension of local government will become irresistible. Should it prove a failure an insuperable obstacle will be thrown in the way of any further realization of Irish national aspirations.

DOWN A MOUNTAIN SHOOT.

The Fastest Time That Was Ever Made in the Saddle.

"I once took an involuntary hair raising ride," said a western man. "It was in Colorado a number of years ago. I was in the lumber business at the time and had a sawmill in a valley at the foot of an enormous mountain spur, covered with pine. The place where the best timber was cut was perhaps a mile away, and to save roundabout hauling we built what we called log shoots. They were simply V shaped troughs, as near straight as possible, running down the mountain side to the millyard.

"When a tree was felled, it was trimmed up, dumped into the nearest shoot and went down like a 10 inch shell. In the course of time the friction wore all the troughs as smooth as glass and also drove them into the ground, so they were mostly flush with the surface. One winter day I was out inspecting, riding a tough mustang pony, and concluded to visit a trace that had been worked over and abandoned. The ground was thickly covered with snow, and the pony was cautiously picking his way when suddenly he lurched forward and fell. I stuck in the saddle, and the next thing I knew we were whizzing through space like a rocket.

"You see, he had accidentally stepped into an abandoned log chute, and as his legs were doubled under his body it was impossible for him to get out, but I discovered all that afterward. It happened so quickly I had no time to think, and all I remember of the ride is that swift sweep of perhaps five seconds and then a soft through the air. Some obstruction had jolted me off, and I lit in a snow bank 50 feet away. The horse, poor brute, was carried on about a quarter of a mile to a break in the trough and dashed against a pile of bowlders dead as a doornail. I was comparatively unhurt, but so stunned and shaken up that it took me several hours to crawl back to the mill. The distance I actually traversed in the chute was about 800 yards, and I am prepared to bet it was the fastest time ever made in the saddle."

HE GOT A CHANGE OF VENUE.

But the Lawyer Lost His Client in the Move.

A good story is told of a Kansas City lawyer. He is more of a corporation lawyer than anything else, but once in awhile he has been called upon to show his knowledge of criminal law. It was not so very long ago that he was in Oklahoma, and he undertook the defense of a negro who had killed a white man. The feeling against the negro was intense, and it had been only through the most strenuous efforts of the officers that he had been permitted to live for his trial. It was very evident that an unprejudiced jury could not be obtained in the little place where the crime was committed, and it was the intention of the Kansas City man to ask for a change of venue. After he had worked on the case for some time he ascertained that the judge was going to deny anything like a change and that his man was to be tried and hanged as soon as possible. The lawyer thought long and hard over the matter and finally hit upon a scheme which he thought would be successful in influencing the court.

By the liberal use of money he succeeded in securing a dozen men who, when the negro was brought into the courtroom, were to cry: "Hang him! Hang him!" The lawyer thought that this would be evidence of the prejudice against his client that could not be overlooked by the court.

The day for the trial arrived, and the defendant was brought into court. As soon as he made his appearance a dozen shouts went up:

"Hang him! Hang him! Hang the black scoundrel!"

The cry was taken up all over the courtroom, while the attorney smiled to himself as he saw his little scheme succeed; but, to his horror, the cries redoubled in force, the crowd surged in an irresistible wave toward the prisoner, and before it could be prevented the negro was taken out and hanged to a convenient tree.

The young Kansas City attorney now confines himself entirely to corporation law and politics.

A Fulsome Compliment.

During Mr. Cleveland's tour of the south shortly after his marriage Mrs. Cleveland and he were driving one day through the streets of one of the larger towns escorted by two of its citizens. Some one threw a bunch of violets to Mrs. Cleveland, and Mr. Cleveland bent forward to catch it, remarking as he presented it, "I wonder why no one gives me flowers?"

One of the gentlemen present gallantly replied, "We think you have won the fairest flower in all the land!"

"Ah, yes," returned the president, "but, you see, I can't keep her in water!"

"It is not necessary, since you keep her in such excellent spirits," was the reply.

Here Mrs. Cleveland interposed, saying, "I am afraid you are guilty of flattery," whereupon came the reply:

"No, madam. Flattery is fulsome compliment, and in this instance no compliment could be either too frank or too fulsome!" The charm of this response lies in the last and fourth from the last words, Mrs. Cleveland's maiden name being Frances Folsom.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Seeing Snakes.

Drunkards, and especially people suffering from delirium tremens, "see snakes" (says an eminent oculist) because of the presence in certain veins of the eye of dark, pulsating blood, as a result of alcoholism, which produces snakes in appearance and motion. Hitherto it has been supposed that the "snakes" which men reported having seen in their alcoholic delirium were simply creatures of the imagination. Now we are told that these hallucinations have an actual basis. Statistics on this subject collected by the oculist show that 96 per cent of the visual hallucinations experienced in delirium tremens consist of serpents in one form or another.

The Moth and the Flame.

Moths fly against the candle flame because their eyes can bear only a small amount of light. When, therefore, they come within the light of a candle, their sight is overpowered and their vision confused, and as they cannot distinguish objects they pursue the light itself and fly against the flame.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough.

We see to it that the little things are neither skipped nor slighted. We buy off makers whose reputation has grown on careful, painstaking work; whose patterns are up to the hour, whose choice of material is in the line of the best taste and the best style.

PRINCIPLES OF BENEVOLENCE.

ANNUAL CHURCH PARADE OF CANADIAN ORDER OF FORESTERS.

Kindness, Unselfishness, Benevolence and Charity Highly Extolled—No Great, no Small, no Bond, no Free, no Jew, no Gentile—The Working of Practical Charity—Reference to the G.T.R. Strike and an Appeal for Sympathy.

The members of the local courts of the Canadian Order of Foresters held their annual church parade last evening to St. Andrew's church, where Rev. Eso. Potter conducted the service and preached the sermon for the occasion. There was a big turnout, about two hundred of the brethren being in line. The church was crowded. Rev. Mr. Potter's discourse was an eloquent one, chiefly along the lines of benovelence and charity, and was heard with deep interest.

He took his text from Matt. xviii, 11, "For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost." He expressed a cordial welcome to the Foresters and stated that he felt honored at having them present to return thanks to God on the annual occasion and to make supplication for the year to come. The year just closed has been a one in the history of Canadian Forestry. 5,700 new members have united with the order. Great also is the harmony and concord that has existed $144,000 has been paid out during the year in insurance and $84,000 in sick and funeral benefits, making a total of $228,000 paid out in practical good and sympathy and help for those in need. Considering these figures Foresters must realize that their work is a great one, is necessary and is blessed, and its reflex influence upon the members must be for good. 47 new courts have been established, bringing the total membership up to about 31,000. The increase in the surplus has amounted to $180,000. All this should greatly encourage the members to pursue the work with great zest and make it still more blessed.

The principles of the order, liberty, benovelence and concord, are associated with the words chosen for the text. Christ came to save that which is lost. He shows us into His kingdom in the words "Unless ye become as a little child," that is, full of true life, with confidence and truthfulness, and without hyprocrisy. Christ came to seek those who are out of the way. There is no glory in benovelence to those who are not in need of it. Christ came to save that which is lost or about to perish. The great achievement of every life should be the use of our talents and energies in the cause of those who stand in need of them. Christ's teachings is that of charity and benovelence. He asks us to remember that that which is lost must be found and the rough places made smooth. All things organized for benovelence must show their

HOW TO ENTER

TOUCHED UPON LIVE SUBJECTS.

G. T. R. TRACKMEN'S STRIKE AND THE PETITION OF THE CLERKS.

Rev. Mr. Davidson at St. John's Church Expresses His Sentiments on the Trackmen's Strike—Shorter Hours for the Clerks.

At both services in St. John's yesterday members of the congregation were confronted on entering the porch by a table, on which was a plate inviting contributions on behalf of the Grand Trunk railway trackmen. At the evening service Rev. J. C. Davidson referred to the matter. While everyone disliked the coercion and other features of a strike and the unfortunate results upon commerce, manufactures and public harmony, at the same time there did seem to be occasions when a strike was the only remedy against injustice.

It seemed to him that this was undoubtedly the case in regard to the G.T.R. trackmen and he believed the whole community agreed in this respect. The answer of the G.T.R. company showed that they were taking all the advantage possible of the congested condition of the labor market. It was time for the Christian church to assist and reiterate the principle that whatever might be the condition of the labor market honest labor was entitled to honest pay, that is to say, which was fairly proportioned to the amount of work done and not to the number of men who might happen to be willing to do the work.

But this sound principle could be better emphasized by deeds than by words, hence with warm approval of the officers of the church a collection was being made. The men had not suggested this nor thought of it, but their position after two weeks idleness could easily be imagined. To this appeal a liberal response was made, which would undoubtedly been larger had previous notice been given.

The Rector also referred to another matter in the same line. The clerks of town were moving for a half holiday or other breathing space during the two hot months of July and August. Their case, however, was happily different from the preceding one in that the employers showed the most kindly disposition in regard to the request and it was really only a matter of arrangement and consideration as to what would least interfere with the business interests of the town. Rev. Mr. Davidson asked for the general sympathy of the congregation in regard to the matter.

Yesterday was Mr. C. J. Rodger's first Sunday as organist. Owing to the change and the want of previous practice the choir was not in as good condition as usual but it is expected that it will be rapidly improved.

KINGSTON WON BY SIX TO THREE

BASEBALL AT THE P.A.A.A. GROUNDS ON SATURDAY.

A Close and Exciting Game—Good Work Done by Both Teams—A Battle Between the Pitchers—Notes of the Game.

A splendid baseball match was seen at the P A A A grounds on Saturday afternoon, between the Kingston team and the Peterboroughs. The visitors won by 6 runs to 3. Nine innings were played and every one was full of interest and at times there was plenty of excitement. There was a fair crowd present but not nearly as large as it should have been for all in attendance enjoyed the game immensely.

The Kingstons won the game by batting power and by a couple of costly errors on the part of the locals early in the game. If these last had not occurred Peterborough should have won the match. During the first two innings the visitors scored 4 runs while the home men were shut out. After that they made but 2 runs while the Peterboroughs made 2. It was a stubborn fight. The Kingston men are a strong, husky crowd of players with lots of experience and team practice. Some of them are veterans at the game. The home boys deserve to be complimented on the manner in which they held them down, considering that this is their first match and that the match on Saturday was but their second game. They showed a neater style of game than their opponents and the Kingston men praised their work highly. Some of them lack ability in batting power but it is hoped that this will be remedied before the season advances much.

The work of both batteries was splendid. It was a battle all the way through. Both did beautiful work. Both pitchers were in good form. McCabe struck out nine men and Tuttle ten. Tuttle's work was not so difficult for some of the men that stood up to him had but little chance even with a poorer pitcher, but considering that the Kingston men are especially at home with the bat McCabe's work was admirable. Christ Graham behind the bat played a beautiful game, holding everything that came to him in a wonderful way. He is a promising man. Kingston's catcher, Elliott, is also right up to the mark. Melrose and Sheridan did good work at the bases, and Grady handled himself well in the centre garden.

The feature of the game was McCabe's hit for a home run in the fifth innings. Tuttle had found out Dan's weight at the bat and was giving him balls, but McCabe reached out and took one a beautiful crack. It sailed straight over centre field as if it would light somewhere on the top of Deare and disappeared over the fence away out of sight. The Kingstons gasped, the crowd cheered to the echo and Dannie trotted

ROAD RACE OF THE ELECTRICS

R H SHEPHERD AND W PEACE THE WINNERS

Of the Time and Place Prizes Respectively—Good Time Made by All—Good Kinds of General Sport.

The annual handicap road race of the Otonabee (General Electric Bicycle club was run on Saturday afternoon. It attracted a good deal of interest. The course was from the corner of Water and Smith-sts, up the Lakefield road to Nassau, across the bridge, down the Hunter-st side with the finish on the south side of the track at Nicholls park. There were twenty-seven entries in all.

The riders, garbed in racing suits, and a big crowd of spectators gathered at the starting post shortly after two o'clock, and then a hitch occurred which delayed the race for a time. Messer, who had been given a handicap of half a minute, wanted to be allowed to go back at scratch with Shepherd and Langton. He claimed that the half minute start was a disadvantage to him and that the C W A rules allowed him to start at scratch. The committee, however, refused to alter the handicap as the race was about to start and Messer refused to ride. There was considerable feeling among those interested over the matter. Messer was considered by many to have a good chance for the time prize.

The limit handicap was 4 minutes. Five men started with that figure, and after 1½ minutes four more were sent off. The other riders were all duly started, and when the scratch men, Shepherd and Langton, were pushed off the limit men were away out of sight and a broken string stretched away up the street.

The spectators then started across the bridge for the park to await the finish, some walking, some running, but the majority wheeling. The finish was not exciting. The first rider to come in sight was W Peace, one of the limit men, who came down the road, circled westward on the track and passed the post with a good lead. The timekeeper called his time as 20 minutes and 55 seconds. Following came another limit man, G Hardill, over half a minute later. His time was 21.22. G Parser, who had started in the second group with the 2½ minute handicap, followed him closely for third. His actual time was 20.26. H Dunsford, with 1 minute handicap, came in fourth place. His time was 19.32. His running mate, Cannanaon, was right behind him in 19 26. Bullen, who had a handicap of 2 minutes, came in sixth in 20.48. The other riders were stretched out at various distances. The tenth man to cross the track was Shepherd and the 11th was Langton, both scratch men. Shepherd won the time prize, his time being 19.21, but the handicap was too great to allow him to get a place among the earlier starters. Langton stayed with him for the finish and was but a few seconds behind.

Shepherd's time of 19.21 was excellent, breaking the record for the course. The road was in good condition and the weather was favorable. Peace, the winner of first place, rode a splendid race, as also did Hardill. Parser's place at third with 2½ minutes handicap was good, and Dunsford did well to get 4th with 1 minute handicap.

The results were as follows:—

1st time prize by C G E Cycle Club, jewelry, value $4. R H Shepherd, scratch; time 19.21.

1st place prize by C G E Cycle Club, jewelry, value $2.50. W Peace, 4 minute handicap; time 20.55.

3rd place prize by Fairweather & Co., automatic cycle whistle, value $2. G Parser, 2½ min. handicap; time 20.26.

4th place prize by J Mothersill, 1 cycle saddle, value $2. H Dunsford, 1 min. handicap; time 19 32.

5th place prize by Mercer & Co, 1 belt or hose, value $2. J B Cannanaon, 1 minute handicap; time 19.35.

6th place prize by Talbot Bros, value $2. T Bullen, 2 minute handicap; time 20.48.

HAS NOT TURNED UP.

No Trace Had Been Discovered this Afternoon of Herman Crowe.

There is still no trace this afternoon of the young man, Herman Crowe, whose somewhat sensational disappearance was noted on Saturday. Parties from Dummer were seen about the matter this morning and stated that nothing had been heard of him around the village of Warsaw.

Developments are awaited with a great deal of interest and anxiety, and the friends of the man Thomas Crowe should not miss any opportunity of presenting the search with all thoroughness so as to clear up the mystery of his disappearance.

The Steamer Sunbeam will run to Stony lake in connection with the Grand Trunk on Tuesday, 6th of June, returning in the evening. 2d129

A Challenge.

F Messer challenges R H Shepherd to ride a matched bicycle race on next Saturday over the same course as that of the Electric club's road race on Saturday. This is a result of the difficulty that arose and would be a satisfactory way to settle the question of supremacy.

Raise the Awnings.

The police have been going around and have found that a number of the awnings are still under the height of 7 feet as prescribed by the by-law. If they are not raised within a week the owners will be prosecuted.

CURED BY FIRE.

Treatment That Saved a Maine Man When Death by Lockjaw.

The Lewiston (Me.) Journal has an interesting story of how one man was saved of lockjaw in the olden days, before the modern and more successful treatment of antitoxine had become known to the physician. Isaac Rich had cut off the end of an index finger, and, after the wound had been dressed and he thought he was on the road to recovery, lockjaw developed. Dr. John Lincoln, the family physician, who had treated him, broke the news to Rich and told him of his imminent danger of dying.

"Ike," he said, "you've got to die, and hanged if I ain't sorry for you," and he turned away quickly, for he was very fond of Rich, and—well, it isn't pleasant work to pronounce the death sentence on your friends, no matter how long you have practiced medicine.

"But, Ike," he went on, "there's one thing more that I've heard of. I don't know as it will do any good, but, by gum, Ike, I'm going to try it if these other gentlemen are willing. I have read that they have recently been using turpentine for certain treatments over in England, and it is said that has worked well. I don't know as it will do any good, but it can't do any harm, for you have got to die anyway."

The doctors agreed that the experiment would not endanger the patient's chances, since he must die in any case, and they expressed a willingness to assist their colleague in the undertaking.

Turning the patient face down, they ran a stream of spirits of turpentine down the channel which the ribs make where they join the spine and then touched a lighted match to the spirits. The blaze sped down the spinal column almost like a train of gunpowder. Dr. Lincoln was keeping an anxious head on the muscles beneath the arms. As the flames died out the muscles showed no signs of relaxation.

A second time they sent the fire down the channel. This time the flesh was showing raw, but still there was no movement in the rigid muscles.

"We'll try it once more," said the doctor, "and then if there is no change we must acknowledge that we are beaten."

Grimly they lighted turpentine for the third time and watched it burn its way down the raw and bleeding flesh of the patient.

This time the long tense muscles gave way, and Dr. Lincoln dropped the arm he was holding and shouted:

"Ike, by gum, you are going to live!" and then he added, "If turpentine's good enough to burn along a man's spine it's good enough to drum the wounds with."

From this time on Mr. Rich continued to gain steadily, and within a few weeks was as well as ever. In dressing the wounds along his spine nothing was used but the raw spirits of turpentine. When he recovered his powers of speech, Mr. Rich was asked about his sensations during the fiery ordeal through which he passed. The first time, he said, he felt absolutely nothing. The second time it seemed as though some one had lightly drawn a feather down his back, but the third time he experienced all the agonies of fire applied to raw flesh.

Had to Stay.

An English nobleman whose entertainments are noticeably dull is nevertheless himself a man of much dry humor.

One evening he was leaning against a wall for a few moments' refreshment and surveying the throng of guests gathered at his wife's bidding with a speculative gaze, when a voluble young man stepped up to him.

"Pretty slow, isn't it?" volunteered the lively stranger. "I wonder if the parties Lord and Lady —— give are never any livelier than this."

"Never," returned the unrecognized host promptly.

"Then I shall make my bow and take myself off at once," said the young man.

"Lucky fellow," said Lord ——, with a whimsical smile. "I'm obliged to stay."

Something in his tone enlightened the young man, who turned crimson and began to stammer apologies. But his host waived all such attempts and held out his hand to his unwise guest.

"You can go with a clear conscience," said he pleasantly, "for you've given me the only amusement I've had this evening."—Youth's Companion.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," "Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

That morning, while his young wife watched so anxiously from the window, he was hurrying home in no pleasant state of mind. He had met Croker, who hinted that the bill would fall due in two weeks, and then the money must be paid.

"Where I shall get two hundred pounds from," he said to himself, "if that stupid old man doesn't send it, is all dark to me. I will make Sybil write this very day."

She sprung up to welcome him. Ah! how such love might have crowned and blessed another man! Tears shone in her eyes; bright smiles beamed on her fair young face; words of greeting, such as might have made any man happy, died away upon her lips.

He was very quiet after that welcome was over, wondering how he was to broach the subject to his wife. It was one thing to plan it in her absence, and another to carry it out in her presence. His mean soul shrunk from it—she looked so young, so high-bred, so refined; but it must be done.

She herself gave him the opportunity.

"Lyster," she said, holding up a little enameled watch, "I never know the right time; this toy is pretty to look at, but it does not go well and never did. Will you buy me another?"

"I wish I could, Sybil," he replied, with a heavy sigh. "I would hang you all round with jewels, if I had my own way. You married a poor man, darling. I fear me I did an ungenerous thing in taking you from such a home as yours to such a home as this."

He knew that kind of thing always touched her warm, generous soul. She was by his side in a moment, her arms round him, her loving heart yearning to give him comfort.

"I am in sore trouble, Sybil," he said; "unless I can get two hundred pounds in two weeks, I shall have to sell my commission."

She was all dismay for a few moments then she turned from him with a smile.

"I will get you the money, Lyster," she said, "papa will never refuse me."

CHAPTER XVIII.

"NO MAN LIVING COULD BE SO UTTERLY BASE."

Sybil Ayrton never doubted; her father had not once, in the course of her whole life, refused her any favor she liked to ask. As for money, she always had just what she would; he never asked why she wanted it, or what it was for. True, he had sworn, but when he knew she was in distress, he, who had countless thousands, would never refuse her two hundred pounds.

She wrote so pleadingly, so earnestly, with such full faith in his never-failing kindness, that the squire laid down the letter, completely unnerved by the reading of it. He did not relent; he had foreseen this when Lyster Ayrton asked for his daughter's hand.

"I shall not send it," he said to Irene—"certainly not. We Jocelyns do not swear in vain! Not a farthing of my money shall go to the support of the man who stole my daughter. Write and tell them so. I am sorry for her trouble, but can not, and will not, do what she asks! Tell her all further applications are useless; I shall keep to my word."

Then Sybil, full of hope, took the letter from the servant's hand and opened it. The shock was a terrible one. For the first time she seemed to realize what she had done—what a gulf lay now between her father and herself. She had quite expected to find the check in the letter; and Irene's words came like a sharp blow to her. For the first time she felt something like afraid of her husband. What would he do or say when he knew she had not the money?

It was pitiful to see the child-like face grow pale and sad, the lips tremble, and the violet eyes grow dim with tears. There was not perhaps a more wretched girl in England than she, who awaited her husband in trembling dread.

He came, light, gay and careless; he did not heed her pallor or her tears.

"Well," he cried, "you have a letter there, I see. Has the squire sent the money?"

"No," she said, gently, "he has not, and he will keep his vow, Lyster—he never will!"

"The stupid old blockhead!" he cried angrily. 'Who cares for his vow?"

She looked at him with a weeping, frightened gaze.

"You forget, Lyster, you are speaking of my father, whose name I hold in high honor and esteem."

Her quiet, dignified tone recalled him to himself.

"I beg your pardon, Sybil," he said. "I spoke hastily. My dear girl, I must have the money. Write again; you can but try. Tell him unless he sends it I must go to prison or sell my commission. A pretty alternative that."

"I will write," she replied. "You will stay to-day, Lyster, will you not? I feel tired, and so sad, darling. Do stay and comfort me."

She longed for kind words and caresses to take away the sting of the cruel letter; she longed, with all her weary heart, to lay her head on his breast, and weep all her sorrow away.

"I am very sorry," said the gallant captain. "I ought to be on duty now. I stole an hour, just to run up. I must be off again at once. Write again to-day, Sybil."

He touched her brow lightly, and left her with a careless word of farewell.

"By Jove!" said the captain, drawing a long breath of relief as he left the house, "the idea of spending a whole day with a crying woman! I could not stand five minutes of it."

He had no thoughts of pity for her who was weeping her heart away. He never thought of her as he saw her first, in the radiance of her young beauty—the worshiped darling of her happy home; he had never even looked at the pale, sad face; he only thought of her as of a "crying woman," who would bore him to death with her love.

As he walked that morning through the streets, his head held so high, his fair, handsome face bright and gay, people turned to look after him—women with eager eyes, men half with envy. If his honor could have been read, he was one of those who passed him by would have changed places with him.

Sybil wrote, and in three days the reply came, couched in the same words. If Captain Ayrton went to prison, or was unable to support his wife, her father's arms were open to her; but while with him he could do nothing for her.

Lyster Ayrton was at home when this letter arrived. He read it with darkening eyes, and a face that seemed all at once to lose its fair beauty and grow hard.

Strange to say, he did not, as she had feared, storm or rage. He never even said an angry word. But all that day he stayed with Sybil, and was kinder to her than ever. She, poor child, thought the gates of heaven were opened to her. She nestled herself in his smiles, and rejoiced, like a happy child, in his love.

He took her out in the evening to the theatre; he insisted that she should wear her prettiest dress. She looked so fair and youthful in the blue velvet, richly trimmed with white swan's-down—so bright under the influence of his love—that people looked more at her than at the stage.

It was late when they returned home. The lamps were lighted in the pretty drawing-room, the fire burned cheerfully. Sybil stood, her pretty slipper resting on the fender, her large white opera-cloak wrapped around her, her golden hair and lovely face making a picture that should have touched any man by its innocent grace.

"Sybil," said her husband, looking at her earnestly, "you are a very beautiful woman. If I have to sell my commission, and we are completely ruined, I must send you on the stage. London would go wild after you. Fancy the squire!"

She smiled very faintly at what she thought a very bad joke.

"I never thought the squire would hold out so long!" he said, musingly. "I can't see our way clear, Sybil. We shall come to grief, I am afraid."

She was looking thoughtfully at the glowing embers, and made no reply. She had not the least idea what ruin meant.

"Sybil," he said again, and this time he moved uneasily, "you must help me. You must borrow the money for me."

She looked up in wonder.

"Borrow money, Lyster! From whom? I should not know how."

"I will tell you," he continued, with the same uneasy expression. "Write to Sir Rupert Deere—tell him all the circumstances; he would lend us the money for your sake."

He never forgot the proud contempt it flashed into her face; the haughty drawing up of her slender figure.

"From Sir Rupert!" she cried. "I would rather die a thousand deaths!"

"Why?" he asked, coldly. "He loved you, I am sure."

"Yes," she replied, with the gesture of a queen; 'he loved me, and I gave him up for you. After that, I would rather die than borrow money from him for you."

"Don't be foolish," he said; "don't let a little sentimental nonsense stand between me and ruin. You talk about love, Sybil! yet you sacrifice me to absurd pride. Sir Rupert would give you half his fortune if you needed it. You know that."

Yes; she knew it, and the knowledge smote her with fierce anguish. Was her idol falling? Had she been deceived in Lyster Ayrton? Was he trying her? He could not mean the unmanly words he had uttered! To win the woman Sir Rupert loved, and then to appeal to that very love for money! Ah! no; no man living could be so utterly base!

He was lying on the little couch, and she went gently up to him. She knelt by his side and flung her arms round his neck.

"You do not mean it, Lyster," she cried. "I know you do not mean it! Say you are trying me—jesting—teasing—anything! You can not wish me to borrow money from him!"

For one half moment shame mastered him, and he turned from her; then necessity spurred him on.

"I mean it really, Sybil," he said. "What a fuss you make over a trifle. Gentlemen often borrow from each other."

Her arms loosened their hold, never more to be clasped in loving trust.

"Consider the circumstances!" she said, falsely. "He loved me, and I was to have been his wife!"

"All the more reason why he should do it," replied Lyster Ayrton. "Depend upon it, Sybil, he will always be fond of you."

She knew it, and the knowledge was all pain.

"Write to-morrow," he continued. "I am quite sure he will not refuse."

Her eyes were riveted on his with an intensity of sorrowful yearning pitiful to see. She would have laid down her life to have heard him say it was but a jest. Her noble, brave Lyster—her hero—could never want her to do this!

"Don't look at me in that way!" he cried, impatiently. "Women are all alike fond of talking about sacrifices, but not of making them."

"Lyster," she said, earnestly, holding her hands before him as though she were praying, "do not ask me to do this thing! I pray you, for my love's sake, do not ask me!"

"You shall do it!" he cried, passionately. "I won't be ruined for any cursed sentiment."

She rose from her knees, and went away from him. She turned round, and stood quite still, looking down upon him.

The Pall Mall Gazette Says Kruger Will Make Further Concessions as to Term of Residence.

London, June 5.—The Pall Mall Gazette makes a forecast of the negotiations between President Kruger and Sir Alfred Milner at Bloemfontein, which it bases upon information obtained from a high official at Pretoria. President Kruger was prepared, with the concurrence of the burghers, to reduce still further the term of residence necessary to the qualifications of a voter, but on an inconsiderate vote the Upper Raad allowed the Uitlanders to make a compromise on the education question, which will give an improved municipality to Johannesburg and grant to the Uitlanders a fuller measure of control over the police. Still, the declaration in regard to the Cape boys and natives will hold good, and President Kruger can impose upon them differential laws, which he says the London convention gives him the right to do. The question of the dynamite monopoly, The Gazette says, will prove the hardest to settle in the conference.

Germany Warns the Boers.

Berlin, June 5.—It is reported now that the interview between Mr. W. J. Loyd, the minister of the Transvaal here, and Baron von Buelow, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, was not of a very cordial nature. The Foreign Minister emphatically told the Transvaal representative that the wisest and best course for the Boer Government was to make peace with Great Britain, and, above all, to speedily grant reforms. This did not leave a doubt in Dr. Loyd's mind that Germany also wishes to see the reforms introduced.

HAS HE BEEN CROOKED?

John H. Henderson Said to Have Pilfered Union Bank Books.

Montreal, June 5.—On Monday of last week John Hatley Henderson, accountant of the Union Bank of Canada in Ottawa, mysteriously disappeared and has not since been seen. On that day he left his house at 9 o'clock and stated that he would be back at noon. He did not, however, turn up at the bank; he did not return to his home, and all information regarding his movements since is a blank. Much speculation has been indulged in as to Henderson's disappearance, chiefly on the ground of some misadventure having occurred to him, for the bank officials strenuously denied that, so far as their institution was concerned, there was any reason why he should leave Ottawa.

Detective John A. Gross has returned to Montreal from Ottawa, and it is quite clear that John Hatley Henderson, accountant of the Union Bank of Canada in Ottawa, is an absconder. The amount of his defalcation is put at at least $60,000, and a thorough examination of the books may reveal an even larger amount than this. Henderson, it is claimed, has fled to the United States, and a warrant has been issued for his arrest by Magistrate O'Gara of that city.

Henderson, as accountant, did not have the direct handling of the funds of the institution, but, nevertheless, he was able to so manipulate matters by false entries, that the large sum mentioned, and probably more, was diverted from the funds of the bank before the method was discovered.

John Hatley Henderson is a son of City Clerk Henderson of Ottawa. He has been in the employ of the Union Bank of Canada for ten years.

Henderson is a married man, and resided on Lisgar street, in a comfortable home, with a wife and two children.

Admit $35,000 Gone.

Ottawa, June 5.—Inspector Billet of the Union Bank is reported to now admit that J. H. Henderson, the absconding accountant of the bank here, has $35,000 of the funds of the bank.

Dr. A. W. CHASE

DISCOVERED A NEW TREATMENT FOR NERVOUS DISEASES

In his study of diseases of the nerves, Dr. A. W. Chase found that in nearly every case the cause of trouble was [illegible] of all the blood in the human body is found in the brain, and unless this blood is rich and pure the nerves cannot obtain nourishment, and become worn out and exhausted.

Nervous depression, nervous headache, nervous dyspepsia, loss of sleep and vital force, lack of energy, are symptoms of weak, watery blood and exhausted nerves.

It was as a food for blood and nerves that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food was prepared. Its remarkable success in curing all diseases arising from thin blood and impoverished nerves is proof that Dr. Chase's theory of feeding the nerves and blood in the proper one; stimulants only urge on the tired and worn out nervous system until there comes a complete collapse.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food creates new brain and nerve cells, and makes the blood pure and rich. It restores to the exhausted nerves the vigor of perfect health. 50c. a large box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Children should always increase in weight. Not to grow, not to increase in flesh, belongs to old age.

Present and future health demands that this increase in weight should be steady and never failing.

To delicate children, Scott's Emulsion brings richer blood and firmer flesh. Better color comes to the cheeks and stronger muscles to the limbs. The gain in weight is substantial; it comes to stay.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

TESTIMONIALS

Allisden, March 1st, 1898.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheldon, February 20th, 1898.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

PRINCIPLES OF BENEVOLENCE

work by attending to those in need.

A great soul never doubted that which is weak. Nothing should be rejected in thoughtlessness. Christ aims to deepen not those about us. Deeper nothing in human nature for in every one of us is born the spirit and character of the angel. Man should be the goodness, benevolence and charity. Christ wants us all to show the attractive spirit, a spirit that reflects God in goodness, and to be called men together [illegible] may seem a little self-sacrifice now may be great in the sight of God.

Christ's teachings have made the Christian world the mighty force it is to-day. Example, words, not power, from Christ and set, [illegible] gods with earth-created greatness. All the benevolence that has blessed the world sprang from His heart. The orders that have done most for the objects upon which we spend our benevolence have had nobler hearts than the others.

HAVE DRIFTED OFF

Christ came with no lofty patronage for the earth. He came as a MAN AMONG MEN.

He revealed in His humility and self-sacrifice that he had come to lift up and bless man, so that the very outcasts were attracted to Him. He was a Jew and not a Gentile. He taught no creed nor free. He taught no class distinction but was one with all. He came to unlock the selfish human heart to the greater principles of love and charity. No one or nation should have narrow, mean, selfish interest that shut out the interests of others.

WHY DO THEY STRIKE?

Why, said Rev. Mr. Potter, are men striking to-day, and why does their cry go out to the whole world? Because some men are [illegible] in possession of places where they can [illegible] fat on their fellow men, where they have become, as they think, [illegible] and stronger, and can crush those who are weak and feeble and [illegible] that they come under the power of those who set on the principle that might is right. He pleaded for the sympathy of men and women for those who are crushed down and kept down by railway corporations, for those who are compelled to eke out a miserable existence by those who look down to set them and grind them lower. How can such conditions be overcome? Only when men shall adopt the spirit of Christ and abide by His golden rule.

Rev. Mr. Potter appealed to the brethren to let the principles of liberty, benevolence and concord ever be the and spirit of their lives. He exhorted them to rally about Christ's banner with all manhood and clamor of love, that all men be lifted up, and to help in putting down all that by which men are oppressed. He expressed an appreciation of the good work done by the order in relieving the distressed, for in so doing they are following the example of Christ and fulfilling His wishes. There are women and children who shall rise up and bless those who are the incarnation of the spirit of Christ, who devote themselves to something above mere financial considerations and who use their influence to promote the spirit of gentleness, of kindness and of charity.

The music rendered by the choir was delightful. The anthem was "Hark, Hark My Soul," with solo by Mrs. T. W. Martin and obligato solo by Miss Falconer. The selection was rendered very effectively. Miss Falconer also sang a highly pleasing solo "A Dream of Paradise."

Two Shows in One.

The Circuses of Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Almost Here.

"The elephant, he goes 'round; the band begins to play; the boys about the building once had better keep away." Such is the sonnet the office boy is humming these days just to keep himself, and incidentally a great many of his elders, in mind of the fact that the circus is coming. And perhaps there are many other boys just like the office boy. And [illegible] perhaps there are just as many [illegible] there are office boys who, [illegible] factory building to a doll house, would be a safe wager that they have the date of Saturday, June 24th at Peterborough, jotted down in their memorandum books, for that is the date of the coming of the Combined Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' shows.

"Fresh from metropolitan triumphs and endorsed by the press of New York" is the [illegible] with the circumspect [illegible] and judging from the tenor of the notices enclosed he has sufficient ground for his assertion. Then the circus manager rises to remark: "What's in a name?" He so far as a circus is concerned "a good deal." Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers by a gentle perusal of grammatical license, can be made synonymous with "biggest" and also "best."

But all of this is not exactly to the point. The citizen is coming, or rather two of them are, in a bona fide consolidation. The one is the circus founded and exploited by the late Adam Forepaugh, and the other that of the Sells Brothers, the Western branch chiefs. The operators and directors of this consolidated exhibition are J. A. Bailey, sole owner of the Barnum and Bailey show, now in Europe; Peter and Kevin Sutherland-Webb, Cole, all names to conjure with in the matter of amusement enterprises. This big combination is heralded as a worthy successor to the Eastern country of the Barnum and Bailey show, a fact made apparent by the connection of J. A. Bailey therewith. It sets out upon its mission with an inaugural in New York city, and immediately springs into metropolitan favor by the superiority of the performance given. The exhibitions given on the road tour are said to be in exact duplication of those given in Madison Square Garden, New York, and along this line of reasoning it is safely assumed that the new combination will become a prime favorite in the Eastern country.

Remarkable Recovery.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

On Saturday afternoon Mr E W Holst won from Mr G W Hatton in the finals of the spring handicap competition.

Cricket.

A practice match is called for Saturday afternoon next at 2.30 sharp. Intending members are requested to be on hand. Peterborough plays Trinity College school at Port Hope on 17th inst.

The season in England is very active. The visit of the Australian cricketers, who have again shown themselves to be the finest cricketers in the world, is arousing intense interest and the papers are full of it.

Baseball.

The Y.M.C.A. football team scored a notable victory on Saturday afternoon when they defeated the strong Norwood High School team on the latter's grounds by 4 goals to 2. The Norwood boys were confident of winning by a good margin but the effective combination and general superiority of the Y.M.C.A. was too much for them. The majority of the team went down on the 11.27 train but a number wheeled down. Their work, considering the fatigue resulting from the ride was excellent.

The Y.M.C.A. team was composed of Dyke, goal; McPhatrick and Simpson, backs; Goldsy, Noble and Hall, halfbacks; Campbell, Snelgrove, Walden, McLeod and Doughty forwards.

A number of matches are being arranged. The boys are fortunate in having in McPherson such a competent and energetic captain.

EVENING MEETING.

A highly satisfactory public meeting was held in the evening. The hall was crowded to the doors. The chair was taken at 8 o'clock by G. W. Powell.

The special feature of the programme was the excellent singing of the Rines Bros., the evangelistic singers.

An excellent programme was rendered, among the others taking part being Mr. R. C. Heard, Miss M. Buntin, Mrs. C. H. Shields, Miss Eva Elliott, Mr. R. Nurse and Miss A. Fraser.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

CHARLOTTE-ST.

Rev. Mr. Monteer and Rev. Mr. Whyte occupied the pulpit at the Charlotte-st. church yesterday at morning and evening services respectively. The morning anthem was "That I May Dwell" and was nicely rendered with obligato solo by Miss Hall. The offertory hymn was "Lead Me Saviour." At the evening service the choir rendered the anthem "Come Unto Me." It was sung with excellent effect. The solo was taken by Mr. J. Steers and there was a duet by Mrs. Pearce and Mr. Steers.

GEORGE-ST.

The hymn anthem entitled "To Prayer" was very beautifully rendered in George-st. church Sunday evening. The harmony and shading was excellent. The solo Home at Last during the offertory by Miss Bertha Parnell was very sweetly sung.

The solo and chorus entitled "Something for Thee," was rendered at the morning service by Mr. Mulligan and the choir. The solo was rendered in Mr. Mulligan's usual good form.

Rev. L. S. Whyte preached at the morning service and Rev. H.V. Monteer in the evening. Both gentlemen were heard with interest.

What she Said.

Mrs. R Peck, E 15th street, New York City, visited Canada last year, and had the good fortune to pick up something which not only suited her, but her neighbors also. Writing the manufacturers of Nerviline she says:—"I bought three bottles of Nerviline while in Canada and treated my neighbors to some of it, and all think it the best medicine for internal or external pain they have ever used." Nerviline deserves such a commendation, for it is a most powerful penetrating, and certain remedy for pain of all kinds. Take no substitute.

LOCAL STRIKERS GO BACK.

Grand Trunk Trackmen are Back at Their Jobs.

The strike of the Grand Trunk trackmen is over. The local men came to Mr Sandy, G T R agent, this morning, and asked for the keys of the houses, received them and resumed their employment. Neither they nor the local G T R authorities have any knowledge of any settlement or terms arrived at. The men in resuming work simply acted on instructions from their head committee. Enquiries at other points on the Midland division and at points on the main line show that similar action was taken at all the stations.

Various statements have been given out as to the terms of settlement, but none of these seem to be authentic.

The general belief is that the men return to work for ten days during which time arbitration will take place as indicated in our telegraphic columns.

The men claim that they are going back with the understanding of an increase in wages and are confident they will secure it. Authorities of the Grand Trunk state that they go back unconditionally.

Battery to Camp.

The Durham Field Battery has received orders to go into camp at Kingston to-morrow for two weeks. The right wings under Captain Snyder, which has headquarters in town, will leave the station by a special train at 6.30 o'clock.

REVIEWS.

McClure's Magazine for June will contain an account of Marconi's latest and most marvelous experiments in telegraphing without wires, especially in telegraphing across the English channel, prepared by Cleveland Moffett with Mr. Marconi's own assistance. It will describe popularly all the apparatus and methods employed, and will be fully illustrated from photographs taken expressly for McClure's.

The June number of the Pall Mall Magazine will contain an article of great personal and historic interest by the Hon. William Waldorf Astor on the founder of the family in America, John Jacob Astor. The article traces the stirring and tragic incidents which led to the adventurous settlement of Astoria, and many details are given of the foundation of the Astor family in America. The article will be illustrated from unpublished drawings, portraits, etc., and promises to be of exceptional interest to American readers.

WE'LL ACCEPT HALF THE PRICE

By the bursting of a water pipe on the night of the 30th, ulto., a large quantity of our Reserve Stock in the Second, First and Basement Stories were damaged by the flood of water. These goods consist principally of 400 yards of DRESS GOODS and DRESS LININGS.

1500 yards of TOWELLING, together with quantities of TOWELLS, SKIRTS, LINENS, SHIRT WAIST SILKS, ETC.

A considerable portion of these goods are only slightly damaged by moisture and sustain little or no damage for general utility or wear.

As it is imperatively necessary that an immediate disposal of these goods must be made, we have decided to make a quick clearance by holding an Emergency Sale which will be continued during

Friday, Saturday and Monday
JUNE 2, 3 and 5.

This means that about HALF PRICE will have to be accepted in many instances and that we must be content to stand the loss ourselves. We can't afford to hesitate about the sacrifices that must be made in prices, no matter how severe the loss, in order to make a swift clearance as crowds are sure to take advantage of this sale. Capital chances for large buyers.

DRIVEN FROM MORONG.

U. S. Troops Landed Under Cover of a Heavy Fire.

Manila, June 6.—Two battalions of the Washington troops, under Colonel Whalley, on board cascos, were towed from Pasig to Morong on Sunday, and landed under cover of a well-directed fire from the "tin-clad" army gunboats Napidan and Covadonga.

The rebels, who were entrenched in the outskirts of the town, reserved their fire until the troops were ashore and in the open. The American artillery opened fire on the insurgents and drove them from their positions, killing nine of them and wounding five. The Washington troops then took the town, the rebels fleeing to the hills.

While the Americans were on their way to Morong, the insurgents opened fire from a shore battery at Ancona, their first shot striking the Covadonga's awning aft, at a range of 3,500 yards. The Napidan was also fired at.

FOUR KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

All of Them Lived in Western Ontario, the Storm Centre.

The Wife and Son of Wm. Ladouceur of Penetanguishene Struck and Killed—Willie Lawry of Hamilton and Charles King of Burlington Also Victims of the Electric Bolt—Barns, Stables and Houses Struck and Burned.

Penetanguishene, Ont., June 6.—During a very severe thunderstorm, which passed over here last evening, lightning struck a small log house about two and a half miles out, killing the wife and son of William Ladouceur, and shattering the house, stove and pipes and the windows. The lightning came down through the stovepipe.

Young Lad Killed Near Hamilton.

Hamilton, June 6.—A severe thunder and wind storm struck the city about 4 o'clock yesterday, and considerable damage was done. The storm proved to be a fatal one, Willie Lawry, 81 King William street, being struck by lightning on the Beach road. His body was found under a tree in front of Tuckett's farm soon after the storm passed over. His face was burned and the right side of his body scarred. One of his shoes was burst in the back, where the electricity passed out of his body. Lawry, who was 14 years of age, took refuge under the tree during the storm, it is supposed. Alex. Murray, the well-known bicyclist, saw the body while riding home from the Beach. He notified the police, who brought the body to the city morgue. No inquest will be held. The unfortunate youth was the only son of Simon Lawry, furniture dealer.

Struck by Lightning at Galt.

Galt, Ont., June 6.—A very heavy rainstorm, accompanied with hail, wind and lightning, passed over Galt about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The stables belonging to the Baker House were struck by lightning and burned. The horses were rescued, but the hay and other contents were destroyed. Loss estimated at about $3,000. The dwelling house of William Mogg, St. James street, was struck by lightning early Sunday morning.

Struck by Lightning.

Burlington, June 6.—During the heavy thunderstorm which visited this section Sunday morning Mr. Charles King, a young man of about 25 years, was struck by lightning while in his barn, and was paralysed from his waist downwards. He is a well-known and popular young farmer, and a fancier of horses.

Barn and Stable Destroyed.

Windermere, Ont., June 6.—The barn and stables owned by Thomas S. Aikin, about a mile and a half from here, were struck by lightning and destroyed early Sunday morning. Everything was saved except a quantity of hay, some poultry and a cutter. The place is insured.

MR. J. P. WHITNEY, Q.C., M.P.P.

Opposition Leader Advocates a Drastic Measure to Put Down Bribery.

Toronto, June 6.—Last night Mr. J. P. Whitney, leader of the Opposition in the Local Legislature, addressed a crowded audience in the Conservative Club here. He was preceded by J. J. Foy, Q.C., M.P.P., G. F. Marter, M.P.P., and Charles Calder of South Ontario.

Mr. Whitney, after a deserved compliment to Mr. Charles Calder, dwelt at length on the corrupt practices of the Government in South Ontario and other bye-elections. He pointed out the ineffectiveness of a fine for bribery, and said the only cure for bribery was imprisonment as well as a fine, such as had been proposed in his bill on the subject at the last session of the House. The legislation passed in such a hurry at the close of the session was trenchantly dealt with. The immense agencies of the Government had been exerted in the bye-elections, while the Opposition had no organization to deal corruptly with constituencies. The question of the hour in Ontario was how to stop bribery. The man who offered and the man who took a bribe should be sent to prison, and there should be no respect of persons shown; the offenders, whether Liberals or Conservatives, should be dealt even-handed, impartial justice. He closed after a pertinent reference to the nearness of the finish of the Government of Ontario.

A strong resolution of confidence in Mr. Whitney, moved by Mr. C. C. Robinson, was passed, and the meeting adjourned.

Henderson Was Slick.

Ottawa, June 6.—John H. Henderson, the absconding accountant of the Union Bank, was an adept in so manipulating accounts as to cover up his methods. Although the books have been under examination for a week, it is as yet difficult to say how Henderson managed to raise the money. Mr. Billett, the acting manager, referred The Journal to the solicitors, Messrs. Lewis & Smellie, for any information that is to be given out. The solicitors state that as yet they cannot fathom Henderson's methods.

Russian Proposals Rejected.

The Hague, June 6.—The naval section of the armament committee has unanimously rejected the Russian proposals.

A BIG JOB FOR THE LAWYERS

Alaskan Boundary Dispute Can't Be Settled Without Them.

This the Premier Admits—The Question Is What Russia Really Handed Over to the U. S. by Purchase—Sir Charles Tries His Hand, But Sir Wilfrid Says Only Lawyers' Talk Will Untangle It.

Ottawa, June 6.—At the opening of the House yesterday afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier laid on the table protocol 63 of the Anglo-American conference, which was published yesterday. After reading the portion relating to the offer to refer the Alaska boundary to arbitration, the Premier continued:

With regard to the rest of the proposal of the United States commissioners, I need not go into them just now, because they are purely formal, but I want to call the attention of the House at once to the difference existing between the proposition made by the British commissioners and the proposition made by the American commissioners.

The First Difference.

The first difference of opinion was with regard to the composition of the tribunal. The tribunal proposed by the British commissioners was a tribunal of three jurists of repute, one to be selected by the Judicial Commissioners of the Privy Council for Great Britain, the other to be selected by the President of the United States, and the third to be selected by the two, or, in the event of a disagreement, to be selected by a friendly power, the friendly power, however, not being named. With regard to the possible question which might arise on account of occupation, the British commissioners proposed to follow identically the rule laid down by the Venezuelan treaty. The rules laid down by the Venezuelan treaty were in substance the following two: That adverse possession of 50 years, or the equivalent of possession, should constitute a title.

Mr. Foster—National?

The Prime Minister—A national title; that is to say, if territory were to be found, say, occupied by the United States, which, under the terms of the treaty, would rightly belong to Great Britain, possession of 50 years would constitute a title; possession of less than 50 years would simply constitute an equitable title, which was to be referred altogether to the arbitrators to determine what, in their opinion, law, justice and equity might require.

An Important Point.

Sir Charles Tupper—May I ask my hon. friend just here, as it is a very interesting point, would the adverse possession by Russia, as well as by the United States, in this case count on behalf of the United States contention?

The Prime Minister—I would suppose that, under such circumstances, the arbitrators would decide in the affirmative, but I am not here to lay down exactly what would be the interpretation. We simply thought, under the circumstances, without going minutely into the law or ethics of the case, that all the law and ethics of the case would be amply met and amply provided for by adopting the very rules which had been adopted by the two powers—Great Britain and the United States—in the case of the Venezuela difficulty.

What Americans Wanted.

The American proposals differed from this. On the first point, as to the constitution of the tribunal, while we proposed, as I said before, a tribunal of three, one arbitrator to represent Great Britain, another to represent the United States, and an umpire, the American proposal was that the tribunal should be composed of six eminent jurists, three to be appointed by the British authorities and three to be appointed by the American authorities. With regard to the rules proposed by us, according to the precedent of the Venezuela case, the Americans adopted the same rules, rule A, rule B and rule C, but with this important rider, that all towns and settlements on tidewater, settled on the authority of the United States and under the jurisdiction of the United States at the date of this treaty, should remain within the territory and

TUESDAY, JUNE 6, 1899.

The Jury Cannot Agree.

Bryson, Que., June 6.—Judge Lavergne charged strongly against the prisoner yesterday afternoon in the Sparling trial. The court adjourned from 3.35 till 5.45 to allow the jury to consider their verdict. When they filed in at that time all had agreed on a verdict of not guilty, with the exception of one man. They were then ordered back to deliberate till 9 p.m. At that hour the jury still disagreed and were ordered back till 9 o'clock this morning.

Cuban Charges of Oppression.

Santiago, June 6.—Several letters have been received by American officials, making vague charges of oppression against the Americans, and threatening an early revolt if the Americans do not immediately evacuate the islands.

Are You Still in Suffering and Misery?

Paine's Celery Compound

Guarantees Safety and Health.

There are thousands of well meaning people in our Dominion who are either adding to their burdens of physical sufferings, or who are making so little progress in banishing disease from their bodies, that they are continually despondent and miserable.

The people we refer to are the men and women who are placing their confidence in the many advertised pills, tablets, sarsaparillas and nervines that have little or no medicinal value to commend them.

The tens of thousands in Canada who are at present using Paine's Celery Compound for the banishment of blood diseases, nervous affections, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaints, are the wise and prudent. They have been guided by the advice of relatives, friends and neighbors, who have found new life, health and strength from Paine's Celery Compound.

The continued flow of testimonials from cured people is the strongest proof that Paine's Celery Compound is the only salvation of the sick, the one true friend that never disappoints when disease threatens life.

Are you, dear reader, one of the many disappointed ones, still in the death grasp of some serious ailment? If you are, we would advise you to throw aside the useless medicines you are now using and give Paine's Celery Compound an honest trial.

The great medicine is a prescription of one of the ablest medical men that ever lived, and is indorsed by the highest practitioners. You must use it if you would have a new and happy lease of life.

A Seaman Drowned.

Halifax, June 6.—The barque Charmian, which arrived here yesterday from Youghal, Ireland, lost overboard on the Grand Banks a seaman named James Meade, who fell into the sea by the breaking of a piece of rail on which he was working.

Last Wednesday the Charmian picked up two fishermen belonging to a Lunenburg schooner, who had been adrift in a dory for two days.

BIG JOB FOR THE LAWYERS

jurisdiction of the United States, no matter whether within British territory or not.

To this proposition the British commissioners answered in the terms of the protocol, which the Premier read, and concluded by moving that the rules be suspended and the papers printed forthwith.

The Position of Canada Since.

Sir Charles Tupper said: "I will, in the first place, ask my right hon. friend if he is not able to carry us further. This leaves us where the commission adjourned until Aug. 2, but it would be interesting, after the discussion that has taken place and the statements given to the press in the United States—statements, in fact, I may say, semi-official—to know whether my right hon. friend is in a position to take the House into his confidence as to the fact of an agreement or arbitration having been arrived at, or, at all events, for a modus vivandi pending arbitration, or as to whether arrangements for an arbitration having been arrived at between the United States and Great Britain, that arrangement was prevented by the fact that the Canadian Government were not prepared to agree to the modus vivandi as proposed? I do not know whether my hon. friend is free to make any further communication, but, if so, should be glad to have them made now."

No Proposal for Modus Vivandi.

The Prime Minister—There is no proposal whatever, I am at liberty to say, for a modus vivandi pending the negotiation. What was proposed was the terms of an arbitration for a permanent settlement of this boundary, and these are under negotiation at this moment. I am not in a position, and regret it very much, as the negotiations are still pending, to give to the House a communication of what is taking place. There have been communications in the American press imputing one thing and another to Canada, but so long as the negotiations are pending I have no authority from the Imperial Government to make any communication to the House. With regard to a modus vivandi, I may say there has been no proposal to have one, but a proposition was made to have a permanent boundary established on the Lynn Canal. For the last two years we have had a provisional boundary, accepted by both countries, on the summit of White Pass and the summit of Chilkoot Pass, and a proposal was made a few days ago to have a provisional boundary put up on the Dalton Trail. We have sent a proposition in accordance with that, and I believe I will be in a position very soon to lay it before the House.

Sir Charles Tupper.

Sir Charles Tupper—I may say the full statement of the protocols, what they really are, as they exist between the two parties, were pretty fairly understood before, and this brings me to the conclusion that the position I took was the correct one, namely, that the statement of the difficulty or impulse at which the commissioners had arrived with regard to the boundary question and the remission of that for diplomatic treatment between the United States and Great Britain virtually amounted to a suspension of the proceedings, and that the British commissioners ought not to have adjourned the proceedings of the commission, which practically were arrested until the question was disposed of. As the case was stated by the communication made to the public under the authority of my right hon. friend and the Hon. Mr. Fairbanks, the leader of the American commission, it appeared that although this difficulty had been reached in dealing with the question of the boundary, notwithstanding that they had adjourned, after having remitted that question to their respective Governments, to the 2nd day of August, and without stating that the meeting on the 2nd day of August would only take place in case this subject in the meantime were referred to arbitration and the question practically settled by an international arbitration agreeable to both countries, I think, therefore, that the position taken by the Government on that occasion, as now explained by this protocol, and the statement with which we are now favored, brings us very much to the same conclusion, that the action taken, and I think taken very properly, by Her Majesty's commission on this question was that until the Alaskan boundary question was absolutely removed by settlement or by arbitration being arranged for no further proceedings should take place. I merely mention that in passing, because it, to my mind, presents the position taken by Her Majesty's commissioners on that occasion in a stronger and better light than I viewed the fight on the information we had when the commission broke up. I say that I called the attention of my hon. friend some time ago to what I regarded as a question that might assume a good deal of importance, and that was the adoption of the Venezuela question as the one to be followed in the case of the Alaskan boundary.

At a Loss to Understand.

How the United States of America could for a single moment raise the question or any controversy upon a proposal such as the British commissioners made, that the Venezuela precedent should be taken and adopted in the case of the Alaskan boundary, I am utterly at a loss to imagine. Because, as we all know, the Foreign Secretary and Prime Minister of Great Britain, Lord Salisbury, receded very much from the position he originally took in regard to the question, a compromise was arrived at by which Great Britain agreed not to press her claim in any territory which was shown had any adverse possession for over 50 years. This was a great concession. What I feared was that the adoption of that reference in the case of Alaska might raise a very important question. It is true that it is only about 57 years, I think, since the United States of America came into possession of Alaska, making their purchase from Russia and acquiring the rights of Russia as they were under the treaty of 1825. But the treaty of 1825 between Russia and Great Britain carries away back for over 70 years, and we remember that my right hon. friend, and also, and more especially, the Minister of the Interior (Mr. Sifton), notwithstanding a very strong caution from this side of the House, made a declaration on the floor of Parliament that adverse possession had been along that coast from time immemorial. That is the term used, I think, by the Minister of the Interior, meaning that it had been in possession of Russia and afterwards the United States, the purchaser of Russia's claims.

Of Importance to Canada.

I want to draw my right hon. friend's attention before it becomes too late, and until the matter is finally closed it is not too late, to the fact that, so far as the Venezuela boundary was concerned, it was a matter of comparative indifference to Great Britain whether this settlement or that settlement along the line in controversy should fall to one country or the other, but it is a matter of immense importance to Canada that adverse possession should not establish a title to anything that was not included as belonging to Russia under the treaty of 1825. That treaty between Russia and Great Britain established an actual line of demarcation as well as could be established on paper.

It provides that the boundary should be a certain parallel of longitude, until you come to Mount St. Elias, and from Mount St. Elias down to Prince of Wales' Island the coast line is the matter in controversy.

Meaning of Coast Line.

The great point of contention between Great Britain and the United States is what was meant by the "coast line," whether it should follow the general coast line, or whether it should include the upper waters of the indentations or inlets, the contention of Great Britain always having been that the coast line should follow along the general contour of the sea coast, not regarding the inlets, for not following these inlets to their upper waters. The point I wish to call special attention to is whether Russia might not set up a claim that she has been in possession of that territory, and that, under the reference in which the Venezuela precedent was followed, the international experts would be precluded from declaring this to be territory belonging to Canada; so, it might become a matter of the most vital importance to establish how far back the United States or the Russian claim of possession adverse to Great Britain could go, so far as to affect this line from Mount St. Elias to Prince of Wales' Island. I did not intend to raise any controversy or discussion, further than to draw my right hon. friend's attention to that, as it might be an important point to consider before matters are concluded, and to express the confident hope that under the arrangements that appear to have been pretty well arrived at by the peace conference, this matter will undoubtedly be settled at no distant day by a reference to an international board of arbitration.

The Only Rules to Be Adopted.

The Prime Minister—If my hon. friends in the House will permit me, I desire to make only one or two observations upon the lines he has advanced. We came to the conclusion, after giving the matter our best thought, that the only rule which could be adopted in the position of things which existed in that distant part of the country, were the rules so recently adopted for the settlement of the Venezuelan difficulty. With regard to the occupation of Russia, I do not know how far it is a matter at the moment affecting the case. Supposing it to be true that Russia had, at the head of the Lynn Canal, for instance, such possession or occupation as would constitute a title under the terms of the Venezuelan treaty, still the fact remains that under our construction of the treaty the line crosses the Lynn Canal at a point which would leave those settlements clearly within Canadian territory. If it be determined by the arbitrators that is the real line under the treaty of 1825, then Russia, by recognizing that line as the boundary, clearly governs her claim to the territory on which those settlements were, notwithstanding that she had those settlements, and was, in that sense, in possession.

Work for the Lawyers.

I will not follow the argument further, I hope, with my hon. friend; in fact, I feel sure, with him, that we shall have the question referred, and I hope before long, to arbitration. The experts and lawyers will find abundant work in the settlement of the questions involved, and I do not know that any discussion in Parliament to-day can throw more light on the subject.

Only One Question to View.

Mr. N. Clarke Wallace—The Prime Minister has stated that the British blue books contain the information he has imparted to us in these protocols. I would like to ask if the British blue books contain information about the other subjects that were under consideration by the commissioners.

The Prime Minister—No; they contain no information on the other subjects. This subject of the boundary was referred by the commissioners to their respective Governments, the Government of Great Britain and the Government of the United States. Therefore, the question is no longer within the jurisdiction of the commission, and that is the reason why it has been given to the public now. The other matters are still under consideration, and within the jurisdiction of the commission.

The motion was agreed to.

THE STRIKE THAT FAILED.

The Grand Trunk Trackmen Still Out of Work—Road Between the Lines of These Despatches for the Season.

Toronto, June 6.—The G.T.R. trackmen went out again yesterday, and the strike, according to present prospects, is still unsettled. Acting upon the instructions received by the strikers from the committee in Montreal, work was resumed yesterday morning at 7 o'clock. Everything went smoothly until 9.30, when the men were requested to return their tools to the toolhouses and apply to Mr. O'Dell, the local roadmaster. They were informed that they were no longer employes of the road, and if they desired work must apply for it individually through the proper channels.

What the Company Will Do.

Montreal, June 6.—The fact of the matter is the company will not take back all of the men, as they declare that it would be unfair to dismiss men who had stood by the company while the others were out on strike. Yet about three-quarters of the 1,800 men will be taken back. The officials state that the process of taking back will begin when the men make a formal request to be restored to their former places.

Men's Executive Meets.

The executive committee of the Grand Trunk trackmen and Organizer Lowe held a conference last night in regard to a large number of complaints that had been received, stating that the men would not be taken back to work.

The executive committee having brought on the strike, and it having failed, are evidently unable to meet the men's demands.

Blame the Committee.

Hamilton, June 6.—There is much consternation among the local trackmen of the G.T.R., who have refused to make personal applications for their positions, and will not return to work. They speak harshly of the committee for ordering them back without a word of explanation, and suggest that the committee and Organizer Lowe have been "fixed."

One trackman said he would lynch Lowe if he could lay hands on him. All the men in this district are still out and the secretary last night sent a telegram to the Toronto union, asking that another committee be formed to carry on the strike.

A MANIACAL HUSBAND.

James Mallough of Dixie Attempts to Murder His Wife.

Cooksville, June 6.—In a fit of maniacal frenzy, James Mallough, a gardener, residing at Dixie, two miles from this place, attempted to murder his wife Sunday morning—pounded her in the face and jumped on her, and when the woman attempted to escape dragged her back to the house by the hair of the head.

Mallough had the hallucination that he heard voices telling him to do things, and in that condition Dr. Sutton did not think him a safe man to be allowed at large.

Believing his wife to be dead, Mallough went out into the yard to get a drink of water, for Mrs. Mallough states that she could hear the pump working. Seizing this opportunity, she managed to get out of the house by the back door and reached the farm of Robert Hale, where she was taken in and cared for.

The Cooksville Tragedy.

Brampton, Ont., June 6.—Nothing new has been developed in the Cooksville tragedy. Word has been received by Crown Attorney McFadden that the condition of the injured woman was not improved yesterday, although she states she will be all right in a few days. She thinks she will be able to give evidence to-day before Justice of the Peace Shaver.

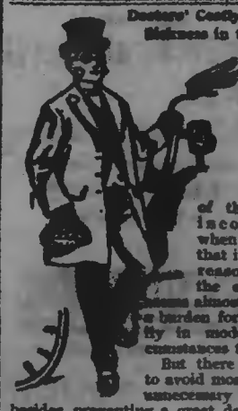
Doctors' Costly Visits.



Sickness in the family is hard enough to bear under the best of conditions. It almost always cuts off part of the regular income, and when on top of that it adds unreasonably to the expense it becomes almost too great a burden for any family in moderate circumstances to endure.

But there is a way to avoid most of these unnecessary expenses besides preventing a great deal of the sickness itself.

"Doctor's visits come high," says Mrs. Bela F. Howard, of Glen Ellen, Sonoma Co., Cal. "I have been in this place sixteen years and have only had a doctor once in my family since that time, thanks to Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser and his medicines. This book saves doctor's visits. I cannot do without it in the house. I have had two copies but cannot keep them. Enclosed I send one-cent stamps for another copy." Another lady, Mrs. Jennie Warren, of Clifton, Graham Co., Arizona, says: "With pleasure I write to you again to let you know that I feel as well and strong as I ever did. With your kind and good advice and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I have been entirely cured. I thank you a thousand times for your good advice. I think that if every person who is sick in any way will write to you for advice and will take the medicine you prescribe, according to directions, no other doctor's services will be needed."

The great thousand-page Medical Adviser will be sent free paper-bound for 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of customs and mailing only; or in cloth-binding 50 stamps. Address R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y. He will send professional advice (in a plain sealed envelope) free of charge. All letters are considered in sacred privacy, and never published except by the writer's permission.

What she Said.

Mrs. R Peck, E 15th street, New York City, visited Canada last year, and had the good fortune to pick up something which not only suited her, but her neighbors also. Writing the manufacturer of Nerviline she says:—"I bought three bottles of Nerviline while in Canada and treated my neighbors to some of it, and all think it the best medicine for internal or external pain they have ever used." Nerviline deserves such a commendation, for it is a most powerful penetrating, and certain remedy for pain of all kinds. Take no substitute.

Two Faced Meanness.

"Talk about mean men," said the retired professional burglar, "I met one one night that beats them all.

"It was like this. I was just packing up some of the silverware from the dining room sideboard when he stole softly down stairs and had his gun at my head before I was aware of his presence. I pleaded with him to let me go and promised to reform.

"He had no mercy and marched me straight to the pantry, where seven large pies loomed up before me.

"'Do you see those pies?' he said. 'Then eat every one of them,' and he pressed the cold steel to my head. That man was so mean that he actually made me eat those seven pies. When I had finished, he released me, and I didn't even get credit for the feat, for as I passed under his bedroom window I heard him say:

"'Yes, dear, I was so hungry and your pies were so good that I couldn't stop until they were all gone.'"—Chicago Democrat.

In moving the adoption of the report Ald. Denne moved that the grant of $250 to the battalion band be $300. This was seconded by Ald. Sawers.

Ald. Hall moved in amendment that the grants to the Sons of England band and the Salvation Army band be struck out. He opposed the principle of grants to society bands or those of sectarian organizations. He realized that this would not be to some a popular move on his part, but stated that he believed it wrong to pay such organizations. He had nothing against either of them, but believed they should not receive grants.

Ald. Bust sided with Ald Hall, chiefly on the ground of economy. The assessment roll is decreasing and the expenses are growing. It was a waste of $100.

Ald. Langford opposed the grants on principle, but as they had been put in the estimates he would support it for the year.

The amendment striking out the grants was put and lost, only Alds. Hall and Bust voting for it. Ald. Sawers, Corkery, Denne, Langford and Neill voted for the grants to the bands.

POLICE UNIFORMS.

Ald. Corkery, chairman, read the following report of the Committee on Appointments and Licenses:—

Your Committee on Appointments and Licenses beg leave to report and recommend as follows:—

1. That the contract for a summer uniform for each member of the police force be given to W J Green at $23 per suit, to be according to sample submitted and the instructions given when tenders were asked for.

2. That licensed carters be permitted to use a second trunk to deliver parcels after ten o'clock on Saturday nights for the purpose of having their work completed before 12 o'clock.

Ald. Langford objected to the first clause, pointing out that $23 was too much money for a summer suit to last one season.

The report was adopted on motion of Ald. Corkery, seconded by Ald. Sawers.

MARKET PENS.

Alderman Sawers, chairman, read the following report of the Property Committee:—

Your Property, Health and Market Committee beg leave to report that they gave instructions to have the stock pens on the market place cleaned under the supervision of the Town Engineer, and made a contract with T Williams to keep them clean at $12.00 for the season to the satisfaction of the Chairman of this Committee and the Town Engineer, and recommend that this be confirmed and that Mr Williams be paid monthly on the certificate of the Chairman or Engineer.

This report was not satisfactory to Ald. Denne. He thought the pens as they are built now could not be kept clean, and moved, seconded by Ald. Neill, that the pens be concreted under the supervision of Mr Hay, the cost not to exceed $25. This was carried.

WIDE TIRES.

Ald. Hall moved the first reading of a by-law to regulate the width of tires on vehicles in the town of Peterborough. He stated that he introduced it because the County Council would be meeting shortly and it would be necessary to have co-operation to make the legislation effective. It was necessary to have such a by-law to have good roads. Details were not given and the by-law was referred to the committee of the whole Council for consideration.

GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

Ald. Denne introduced a by-law to provide for grants to the Peterborough Central Exhibition ($100), and to the bands as provided in the report of the Finance Committee as amended. The grant to the battalion band is made payable to the band committee of the 57th battalion. The by-law was passed.

STANLEY PIANO CO.

Ald. Langford moved the first reading of a by-law to amend the by-law to exempt from taxation the premises of the Stanley Piano Co., Limited. The by-law was passed, signed and sealed.

Mayor Davis made a statement regarding this matter. The Stanley Piano Company had decided to build what is called a slow burning building. But Mr Davis had found it impossible to get the lumber necessary and so the company could not go on with the building as early as they had expected. The large output of the factory at present would also prevent the company devoting their time to building. Mayor Davis had then consulted with Mr Stanley and they had decided to temporarily occupy the old Ackerman building for a time and erect an addition 30x40 feet. He expected that the company would get to work at once at the Ackerman building and that the pianos will be manufactured here in five or six weeks. The matter of settling the terms regarding the lot in the south end where the factory was to have been built was referred to the Council in Committee of the Whole.

CONTRACT EXECUTED.

Ald. Hall introduced a by-law to provide for the execution of a contract with H Evans for the construction of abutments for bridges on Sherbrooke and Dalhousie-sts. The by-law was passed.

THE DEFEATED BY-LAW.

Ald. Sawers thought that something should be done regarding the property which it was intended to purchase for a fire hall and for a town lot for machinery, etc. The property was needed. This seemed to be the opinion of the Aldermen present, although, judging by the vote during the day, the ratepayers did not seem to think that they were suffering for want of the property. The matter was referred to the Council in Committee of the Whole to see what can be done in the matter.

SPARE THE TREE.

There is a stately elm tree on Gilmour-st. just in the centre of the roadbed. It is a grand object in the landscape, but Mr Bogue is building a sewer down the street and finds the tree an impediment. He thought it well to cut it down, but Ald. Hall and others would not hear of it and it was left to the Board of Works to see how they can get the sewer past.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

Ald. Hall brought up the need of an acting chairman for the Board of Works. Nothing can get along without a head. The streets are bad and many people are laughing at the new roller. Somebody should attend to the work. He moved, seconded by Ald. Sawers, that Ald. Langford be appointed temporary chairman.—Carried.

On motion of Ald. Hall a catch basin was ordered to be placed at the post office corner.

Adjournment.

Good Common Sense

Common sense teaches that a debilitated system cannot be built up by continued purging, which reduces the strength of a body already weakened by disease. Most so-called blood builders are purgatives.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People do NOT act upon the bowels. They renew and enrich the blood and make weak, tired nerves strong. They strengthen and only strengthen from the first dose to the last.

Most people find benefit from a tonic at this season, and thousands of authenticated cases prove Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to be the best tonic medicine known. That is why these pills have a larger sale than any other medicine in the world.

HEALTH BROKEN DOWN.

Mr. John Barley, Lachute Mills, Que., says:—"Up to about seven years ago I had always been a healthy man. At that time my health began to give way, and at last I was left almost a physical wreck and for the last five years have not been able to do steady work the best part of the time, and as the many medicines I tried failed to help me, I had begun to look upon my case as hopeless. Finally a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and now after the use of only five boxes I am feeling well and strong. It is simply marvellous what they have done for me, and I shall always recommend them to my friends."

The same good sense that leads you to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial will prompt you to refuse any substitute an unscrupulous dealer offers. A druggist who says he has "something just as good," or "just the same except in name," is trying to mislead you for the sake of the extra profit the substitute gives him. The genuine packages bear the appearance of the engraving on the left, and may be had of all dealers or direct from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough.

A DOZEN LITTLE THINGS

Count in the jauntiness of a shirt waist, yet most makers think them insignificant—if they think of them at all.

We see to it that the little things are neither skipped nor slighted. We buy off makers whose reputation has grown on careful, painstaking work; whose patterns are up to the hour, whose choice of material is in the line of the best taste and the best style.

No, not a cent more to pay because these Shirt Waists are just right—not a cent more than you'd be asked for the boggy, sloppy kinds in the stores that keep them. Very likely our prices are lower. There is no percentage of loss from bad bills or bad methods that we are forced to sprinkle over the goods that are paid for.

We will mention but one line here—but its to your interest to see them and others of our family of Blouses.

A smart lot of designs in Blues, Helios, Pinks Fawns, etc. Some are effective chain stripes and others broken line stripes, others broken checks and plaids—pointed yokes, pleated backs and double stitched.

Materials are American Percales that will wash

THE STORM.

An Immense Quantity of Water Fell Yesterday Afternoon.

The heavy rain and hail storm of yesterday afternoon was one of the worst seen in years. It turned the streets into rivers in short order, and was preceded by a terrific wind which continued during the downpour. On George-st. the openings into the sewer became clogged and the water banked back and threatened to flood the cellars at the street intersections. At the corner of Hunter and George-sts. a tremendous lake accumulated and some of the water found its way into Mr. J. D. Tully's cellar. The same thing occurred at Simcoe-st.

On the west side of the town some trees were brought down, while the water flooded lands. The little stream that comes down Downie-st. was so swollen that it overflowed into some of the houses, and swept through gardens where seed had been planted and did damage.

It was a great storm and no mistake.

It was reported that a horse had been struck by lightning and killed during the storm. This, however, was a horse lie, and had origin in the fact a horse that had died of inflammation was lying in the yard at Dr. Johnston's on Chamber-st.

Where the creek empties into the lake at George-st. there was a small washout under the bridge and some stone and earth had to be hauled and placed in position.

Whyte's dam for some time was in danger of being carried away but remained fast, although a lot of loose planking and some heavy timber lying around were brought down by the creek. The great amount of stuff washed down by the creek would seem to indicate that the storm was very severe farther up the country.

Some of the lanes into which pipes from the roof discharge became quick-flooded and the water ran into the rear parts of the stores. In the lane running south from Hunter-st. behind a number of the stores facing on George-st. the back shops were flooded to a depth of a couple of inches.

A creek that flows from near the Mud lake line in the north end of the town went on a big rampage. A big stretch of sidewalk was completely torn up, a number of gardens were flooded and destroyed and the water invaded some of the houses to the depth of a foot.

A big willow tree in front of Mr. A. E. Dixon's residence was snapped clean in two. Many apple trees in this vicinity suffered.

Considerable damage was done in the vicinity of the C.P.R. station by the storm. The creek washed away a portion of the foundation of the bridge west of the station and a gang of men had to be set at work immediately to repair it. The creek rose to a greater height during the afternoon than at any time during the winter or spring.

VOTED IT DOWN.

The By-law for a New Fire Hall Defeated by the Ratepayers.

The by-law submitted to the people yesterday to borrow by debentures the sum of $6000 for the purchase of land and for the erection of a new fire station on Simcoe-st. near Bethune-st., aroused no more interest than a prohibition plebiscite. The rainstorm in the afternoon evidently left people under the impression that they were more in danger from flood than fire. But very few ratepayers turned out to mark their ballots, only 113 in all, and of these 76 voted against the by-law, and 37 for it. It was defeated by 39 votes. In no ward did it receive a majority. The polling in the wards was as follows:

	For.	Against.
No. 1 Ward	8	32
No. 2 Ward	11	11
No. 3 Ward	8	10
No. 4 Ward	10	23
	37	76

Majority against 39.

But the end is not yet. A majority of the aldermen are convinced that at least some of the property in question is needed and they are not willing to take the vote yesterday as the voice of the people. The Council will discuss the matter in committee at a meeting which will likely be held this week.

OBITUARY.

Death of Mrs. John Parnell, an Old Resident of the Town.

The death of Mrs. John Parnell took place this morning at the Nicholls hospital, where she had been for some two months suffering from an attack of paralysis, which finally proved fatal.

The deceased lady was one of the oldest residents of Peterborough, and was respected and esteemed by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Her maiden name was Caroline Pearce, she being a daughter of the late Peter Pearce. She was born in Cornwall, England, on the 9th of December, 1855. When a girl she came to this country with her father, who settled in Norwood. Later she came to Peterborough with her father, who built the first grist mill that was turned by the water at Auburn. In 1854 she married the late John Parnell and has resided in Peterborough ever since. She was a consistent member of the Methodist church. She leaves no family. The late Peter Pearce, ex-Warden of the county, was a brother of the deceased.

The funeral will take place from the residence of Mr. Elias Thompson, 891 Water-st., on Thursday afternoon at 3,30 p. m.

MAX. JOHNSTON, DEAD.

Mr. Maxwell Johnston, working with his brother, Joseph Johnston, on Church-st., Toronto, died suddenly yesterday from heart-failure. The deceased, who had not been in the enjoyment of robust health for some time, was working up till the time of his death. He leaves a widow and three children and a large circle of friends. He was an old Peterborough boy and an ex-employee of the Review Office.

DEATH OF MRS. TRAVERS.

Mrs Travers, widow of the late J N Travers, for nearly fifteen years manager of the Bank of Montreal, Hamilton, died at the home of her son, Mr R W Travers, of the Bank of Montreal at Almonte, on Saturday. Although Mrs Travers had been an invalid for years, her death was entirely unexpected. She had a large circle of friends, among whom she was highly esteemed. Besides her son, one daughter, Mrs Allan, of Brockville, survives her. Mr R M Hay, of town, is also a brother of the deceased lady.

The funeral took place yesterday morning from the G T R depot to Hamilton Cemetery. Canon Sutherland conducted the funeral services, and the pallbearers were Messrs. Adam Brown, R W Travers, A D Braithwaite, R A Lucas, and Col. Smith and Ernest Smith, of London.

HAD TO WALK.

How Two Men From the Country lost Their Team Got Away.

A couple of farmers driving home last night had an experience. They were both well supplied with John Barleycorn and had got to that stage where they didn't care. They drove up Bethune-st. and on to the railway siding at Rathbun's but like Lochinvar they kept right on and went over the ties at a trot. However they fetched up against a post and began to look about. Both got out of the waggon. A few men from the houses in the neighborhood came out and the farmers enquired the road to Chemong. One of the townsmen took the lines to guide the horses away from the post. He did this all right but as soon as they were clear one of the horses reared up and the friend in need became frightened and dropped the lines. Instantly the team bolted and disappeared up the street on their way home. The men from the direction of Chemong swore, took a pull at their bottle and started to walk.

TRACKMEN AGAIN OUT ON STRIKE.

LOCAL MEN AND THOSE ALL ALONG THE DIVISION QUIT TO-DAY.

A Washout Near Jackson Park—The Local Trackmen Quit Work this Morning—A Telegraph Message Received in Town at Noon States that the Strike has Been Resumed in all Parts.

The strike of the Grand Trunk trackmen is on again. The understanding arrived at on Saturday between the G.T.R. authorities and the members of Parliament acting on behalf of the strikers' committee, was, apparently, not as satisfactory as was anticipated. The men seemed to realize that they were taking too much for granted in trusting the officials of the road and were ordered by their committee to resume the strike.

At nearly all the stations the men appeared for the purpose of returning to work at seven o'clock yesterday morning. At many of these the officials began to discriminate as to whom they should take back, refusing the applications of those whom they thought most prominent and obnoxious during the two weeks' strike. It is said that those who were receiving higher pay and who struck merely out of sympathy were refused. At such places the other men refused to work under such conditions. This was the case at Toronto, where the men worked two hours, and where the whole staff quit when the work of selection was begun.

At other places written applications were demanded from the men and they refused to give these.

The official notification of the resumption of the strike arrived in Toronto from Montreal late last night as follows:

"Hays broke faith with us. We are calling out the men again."

At Peterborough and, as far as can be learned, at other places along the Midland division the men were at work to-day. The local agent stated that there had been no change here since the men started to work yesterday morning.

An authentic message was, however, received in town by telegraph shortly before noon to-day stating that the Executive committee of the trackmen's brotherhood had ordered a general and complete resumption of the strike, that on all divisions the men were being called off and that the strike is being taken up with renewed vigor.

That the general manager of the road is determined to pick is shown by the following telegram:

H A. Powell, M.P., Ottawa:

Montreal, June 5.—Your message received. You will recall I was particular to have it understood by Mr. Taylor and yourself that I made no promise of any character whatever in connection with the trackmen returning to work. We are re-employing as rapidly as their applications can be considered, such of the old men as we have work for and whose conduct during the recent strike was not objectionable. You are misinformed about trackmen being refused employment under any other circumstances.

Signed,
CHAS. M. HAYS.

LOCAL MEN QUIT.

The local men went to work this morning. They are all out again on the street this afternoon however, for while at work about eleven o'clock this morning the following telegram, showed to a Review reporter this afternoon was received:

"Hays has played false. Call out all the men again. Will send instructions by registered letter."

W. POLE,
Chairman.

On its receipt the men promptly quit work and expressed a determination to stay out until they get justice. They also received a telegram from Lindsay to-day stating that the big staff there was out.

A WASHOUT.

The trackman claim they saved the 5.30 mail train from Port Hope to Lindsay from wreck last night. The storm caused a dangerous washout just above Jackson park. The men were three miles away when they heard of it and had just ten minutes to get there but they did it. One man flagged the train while two others banked up the track. Were there no men at work yesterday or this morning serious results might have followed.

OFF TO CAMP.

Dragoons and Artillery Leave for Summer Camps.

The local division of the 3rd Prince of Wales dragoons left this morning under command of Lt.-Col. H. C. Rogers for Port Hope, en route to Niagara, where the summer camp will be held. There were sixty-six men and fifty-eight horses in the party and they took a special train at the G.T.R. station at 8.30 o'clock. The appearance of the corps was splendid, the men being neat, trim and soldierly and the mounts were an excellent lot of animals.

The right wing of the Durham Field Battery under command of Capt. Snyder also entrained at the G.T.R. station on a special this morning at seven o'clock. The strength was thirty-two men and nine horses. The battery camp at Kingston.

There are a number of varieties of corns. Holloway's Corn Cure will remove any of them. Call on your druggist and get a bottle at once.

MAKING BRASS INSTRUMENTS.

How Some of the Principal Parts Are Brought Into Shape.

The bell of a brass band instrument, which is the big end, extending back to the bow or first bend, is made of a single piece of metal which was originally flat. The pattern by which the metal is cut is of the shape that a bell would have if it were slit straight down the side from end to end and then flattened out. When the flat piece of metal from which a bell is to be formed has been cut out by such a pattern, it is bent by hand over a rod until the edges meet. The seam is brazed, and the piece of metal now has its trumpet shaped form, but with many little more or less uneven places in the thin metal.

The bell is then placed upon a wooden mandrel, a form which fills the interior of the bell from end to end and is of the size and shape to which the bell is to be conformed. The inequalities in the surface of the metal are then worked out of it by hand with wooden hammers, the bell being repeatedly driven down upon the mandrel. When the bell has at last been brought in this manner substantially to its true form, it is finished and brought to its perfect smoothness of surface in a spinning machine.

The bow of the instrument is made sometimes in two pieces, sometimes in one. All of the very largest instruments have the bow in two pieces, which are cut from flat metal, like the bell piece. These flat pieces, whose outlines conform to the curve of the bow, are struck into their rounded form with dies, and the two halves thus made are then joined. Many instruments of all sizes are made with the bow thus formed, but the costlier instruments of sizes other than the very largest are made with the bow of a single piece, bent.

The bow has some taper, being larger at the end where the bell is joined to it than at the other. The bent bow in its original form, as cut by the patterns, is a straight, flat strip of brass, a little narrower at one end than at the other, in shape like that of the face of a long, slender keystone, so that when it is rounded up into tube shape it will have the required taper. This piece is brought into tube shape and brazed and wrought into form and finish, all except the bending of it into bow shape, in substantially the same manner as the bell. The slightly tapering but yet perfectly wrought section of pipe is then filled with molten lead. When the lead has cooled, the section of pipe thus filled is laid across a wooden form shaped like the lower part of the letter U, into which it is gradually bent. As the pipe is bent down more and more little wrinkles appear along across the inner side. These wrinkles, as they appear, are beaten out by hand with very small, light hammers, and when the bow has finally been brought down to its form the surface of the inner curve is as smooth as that of the outer curve. Then the lead is melted out of it, and the bow is put through the processes of finishing. —New York Sun.

A Midnight Encounter.

Brown worked years ago in a glass factory at New Castle, Pa. His turn came off at 1 o'clock in the morning, and getting home at that hour was attended with some difficulties. In those days the traveling circuses had no large trains of cars to carry their outfit, but were content to haul their few vans along the country roads, driving their docile animals in the front of the caravan.

Brown was coming from work one night and, being a man of meditative mind, had his head bowed as he trudged toward his home. All at once he became conscious that he was up against the biggest thing he had ever encountered. He saw a snake-like thing at his side, again over his head and again directly in front of him. He put out his hands to fend off the expected attack and grasped two hornlike things that caused the sweat to break out all over his body.

He was conscious that he had met the evil one, but he did not know what use he had for a glass worker. His suspense was relieved by hearing the voice of a man in the rear of the object of his fear shouting:

"Git out of the road of them elephants! Did ye never see a circus!"

Brown was so badly scared that he did not go to work for several days and will not now attend a circus on a free ticket.—Pittsburg News.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "On Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

"How long have you owed this money?" she asked coldly.

"More than two years," he said impatiently. "What has that to do with it?"

"How should you have paid it if you had not married me?" she asked again.

"Married some one with a little more money ready to hand," he said, brutally.

Her sad eyes never left his face. She beat back the agony that overmastered her with a strong hand.

"What did you marry me for, Lyster?" she said. "Tell me the truth."

"For your money," he replied; "and a precious mess I have made of it."

"Did you never love me?" she asked.

"Men trouble themselves little enough about sentiment," he said. "As you ask me a plain question, I give you a plain answer—I married you for your money."

He saw a strong shudder run through the girlish figure; he saw her raise her white arms, as though in supplication; then they dropped helplessly by her side, and she fell, with her face downward, upon the floor. She uttered no cry, spoke no word; her heart was broken. She fell in the silence and stillness of death.

He had not meant to go quite so far, but she had angered him; besides, as he said to himself, she might just as well know the truth now as at any other time.

He rose from the sofa and stood over her for a minute; the golden hair, the white, still face, the blue velvet, all seemed one confused mass. He raised her in his arms and laid her down—poor, crushed, bruised flower—laid her down, with a muttered curse at the folly of women.

He never kissed her, or took, with gentle hands, the tangled golden hair from her face. He laid her down, and stood by her impatiently enough, until the closed eye-lids quivered and a low moan told him she was herself again.

CHAPTER XIX.

CRUELLY STRUCK HER FAIR, PATIENT FACE.

"Come, come, Sybil," said Lyster Ayrton, more gently; "this is all great nonsense. You women are always getting up sentimental scenes. Don't think any more of what I said—you made me very angry."

She turned away from him, and made no reply.

"Of course I love you," he continued—"you know that. You will understand when you are a little older, that love is not the first thing in the world—it is only a pastime after all—something to fill up vacant hours. Men can not make love life, as women do. Forget all about it now. You will write won't you?"

"No," she said, in clear, steady tones; "I will cut off my right hand sooner!"

"I can force you to do it," he said, violently.

"You cannot," she said, firmly "You are stronger than I—you may kill me, but you shall never make me do a mean, dishonorable thing."

He saw that he was powerless. He might kill her—she was weak and fragile, tender and helpless—but he could never bend her noble, honorable mind to his.

"We shall see," he said. Without a word of compassion or pity for her illness, he went out and closed the door.

Have you been through it, reader? Do know the agony, the torture of the hour in which your idol first fell, and you found instead of gold, it was common, sordid clay? Do you remember an hour when outraged love, wounded pride, sorrow, remorse, and despair battled so fiercely in your heart that death would have been far easier to bear?

Who would have known the squire's darling as she rose from the couch where careless, unloving hands had laid her? How she paces up and down the room, crying that her sin had found her out! How she struck her white breast with her clasped hand, and prayed to die! How, when the passion had exhausted her, she laid on the ground the golden head that Rupert Dacre loved so dearly—humbled to the very dust. The long night passed, and morning flushed the skies before she rose again.

She was a fair, willful child when Lyster Ayrton lured her from home; she was a grieving, passionate child now; not a woman, though her heritage of sorrow was come. It would take long, bitter years of grief without hope to change the brilliant nature, and perfect the beautiful, faulty soul.

With the morning light she rose, and stood face to face with her despair; her life lying before her; her idol dethroned, never to be replaced more. She knew him now as he was—false, vain, mean and sordid; and she knew that she had given her beautiful youth and her loving heart to one who did not care for the gift. She wept no more, for her sorrow lay too deep for tears. Once she thought she would leave him and go home. They would receive her—they would take her in, as a lost child; but her pride rose all in arms at the thought. She had sought her own fate, and must abide by it. Come what might, she would keep her place by his side until death released her.

She did not weep over her lost happiness, as she would have done six months ago. She had gradually learned her lesson. She was beginning to understand the words sorrow and pain, which had once seemed vague indeed to her. She was stunned, as one leaving the best-beloved well and returning in an hour to find him dead.

Of one thing she was most firmly resolved; neither entreaties nor threats should induce her to appeal again to the squire, or write to Sir Rupert. She did one thing; she collected all her jewels—some of them valuable ones that the squire had given her—and made them into a parcel. They were worth more, she thought, than Lyster needed.

When he came home again, after three days' absence, she gave it to him, saying, simply:

"These are my jewels, Lyster; sell them to meet your bills."

He laughed and flung them down contemptuously. It was no part of his scheme to pay his debts with anything belonging to himself. Such a proceeding was far too honest for Lyster Ayrton.

He said no more to Sybil about writing to Sir Rupert. He did not quite understand her. He had purposely refrained from going home, expecting reproaches, upbraidings, and tears, but to his surprise his wife was perfectly calm. Her face was very pale, and her manner very quiet. It was a great relief to him. He forgot to ask himself through what ordeal that loving, impetuous nature had passed ere she could meet him so calmly.

He spoke a few ordinary words of greeting, and she replied. Lyster Ayrton mentally blessed himself that it was no worse.

As the days rolled on, he saw a great change in her. The old impulsive nature seemed to be dead. She never caressed him, never laid her fair face against his; all the girlish love, the child-like worship had died away.

False and sordid as he was, Lyster Ayrton missed them. He tried once or twice to reawaken her love, to bring the lost sunshine into her face, the vanished smiles to her lips; he had better have tried to put life into a dead body than to make the love he had ruthlessly destroyed bloom and blossom again in his wife's heart.

It is a sad story to write, but, alas! a common one. Captain Ayrton lost ground daily. He went deeper and deeper into debt, trusting always that the squire would relent. He could not meet his bills, and was forced to sell his commission. This gave him for a time a good supply of ready money. He paid off a few of his most pressing debts, and resolved to enjoy life, never doubting that when the master of Glynn found his daughter really penniless, he would help her.

For three months he lived right royally. Sybil, so utterly ignorant of all business and money affairs, thought his troubles ended. Hers increased; but she was learning to bear them. Her old, gay, girlish life all seemed to be behind her, like a bright, faded dream. Could there ever have been a time when she was happy and without care? Had she ever been petted, loved and worshipped, or was it all a dream?

She was not spoiled now. As the money melted through his hands, Lyster Ayrton grew bad-tempered, impatient, and, at times, violent. He was more at home—for he found familiar faces looking coldly at him, and once firm friends passing him by.

The officers of his regiment showed their appreciation of his conduct by cutting him dead. Even those with whom he gambled began to look suspiciously upon him. Added to which, he began to grow very short of ready money; and he knew when this was gone he had not another penny in the world to call his own.

Yet it was the same world she had lived in one short year ago; but how changed to her! Was this sullen, gloomy man, who seldom spoke without an oath, the gay, handsome soldier who wooed her under the shade of Glynn Woods? He had no pleasant words for her now. He was disappointed in his expectations, and he hated her for the disappointment. He spoke angrily to her; he hated her for being a burden and an expense. Yet he would not let her go from him. Once when she asked him for money to buy something that was needful for her, he swore at her for the cost she was to him; and she, who had never heard a rough word, shrunk shudderingly away, and asked him if she should go from him.

He would not loosen his hold upon her. It was impossible that the squire should persist in refusing to help her. Even if he did, he must die; and then Irene would share all he left with her sister. He would not let her go away. He was content with visiting upon her head the disappointment he felt so keenly.

HOW WAGNER GOT HEAT.

An Amusing Anecdote of the Great German Composer.

Here is an anecdote of Wagner's early life, as related by Liszt: "Wagner, Bulow and I were all quite young when we lived together in Leipsic and had a good time—that is, I enjoyed myself, but Wagner was already fermenting with his political and philosophical ideas, and our prosaic circumstances offered little ground for the idealists of the future. We called Bulow 'Kritikus,' and we, especially I, always feared his sharp tongue a little. Of course all of us had little money, but Wagner put our slender purse to great strains. He could not bear money worries, and we let him feel them as little as possible.

"Once, after a long autumn, it became cold suddenly, and Wagner with his 'nerves' suffered from the sudden change in the temperature. He demanded a heated room at once. For two whole days the debate raged between him and Bulow as to the immediate purchase of wood with our reduced purse.

"'I was not asked, because Bulow knew that I would yield, but he, as treasurer, contended that it was ridiculous to buy wood in the month of September. 'But I am freezing,' said Wagner, in a rage, to which the inexorable Bulow suggested that he go out and get warm by running or warm himself by his muse. Laughing at his cheap, spiteful advice, Bulow and I went out, but when we returned, after two hours, we were thunderstruck to find Wagner in the room heated to suffocation. He sat at his writing table deep in his work. His face was red.

"'Where'— began Bulow, but the words stuck in his throat, for a glance around the room showed him how Wagner had helped himself. Several chairs and our work tables lay on the floor, permanently crippled. Wagner had cut off their legs and made the fire with them. Bulow was speechless with rage, but I stood at the door and laughed till the tears came at this ingenious way of helping oneself. Bulow lamented that we would have to replace the landlady's chairs and tables and that he could not sit down or work.

"'Wagner answered spitefully: 'I have what I needed!' Fellows like you, who do nothing but go walking, need neither chairs nor tables. If you had given me the money right off, your valuable furniture would still be in existence. You wished it so! Firewood would have been cheaper!'"

President Loubet Says He Will Accomplish His Mission.

Forty-Three of the Rioters Still Held in Custody—Esterhazy Must Now Stand Trial—Proceedings Against Him and Gen. Pellieux Will Now Be Taken—Du Paty de Clam Accused of Hiding Some Important Documents.

Paris, June 6.—The papers yesterday praise the calmness of President Loubet throughout the demonstration against him on Sunday. In replying to the stewards of the Auteuil races, the President remarked: "You are in no way responsible, and to prove that I have no anger with you, if there were races to-morrow I would attend them. I am invited to witness the Grand Prix on Sunday next, and you may be sure I will be present." On his return to the Elysee M. Loubet said to those who accompanied him: "All of my family opposed my becoming President, and I had no desire to remain at the Elysee, but, now that it is dangerous to be the chief of state, my duty is clear, and I will let my enemies, if I have any, be convinced that I shall accomplish my mission to the end." Of the 180 persons arrested in connection with the demonstration, 43 are still held in custody.

Esterhazy Accuses Du Paty de Clam.

The Matin publishes an interview with Major Esterhazy, in which the latter accuses Lieut.-Col. Du Paty de Clam of having, for safety, placed in his mother-in-law's house at Brussels extraordinary documents which protect them both, notably, a long report by General Gonse, discussing the plan to be followed in order to screen Esterhazy. The Matin's correspondent at Brussels confirms the statement that Du Paty de Clam left documents in the possession of the d'Ursel family. Du Paty de Clam's wife is a daughter of the Duchesse d'Ursel, grand mistress of the Queen's household and Queen's god-daughter.

Will Indict Esterhazy.

The Minister of War, M. Krantz, has ordered proceedings to be taken against Esterhazy for obtaining and using documents connected with the so-called "secret dossier," and the Minister has also issued instructions that proceedings be taken against General Pellieux for the manner in which he conducted the Esterhazy case.

Gen. Mercier in Disguise.

The Minister of Justice, M. Lebret, has written to the president of the Chamber of Deputies, M. Deschanel, calling his attention to the reference in the decision of the Court of Cassation to General Mercier's showing documents connected with the Dreyfus court-martial, in order that the Chamber may decide whether Mercier is to be proceeded against for an unlawful act committed while he was Minister of War.

M. Lombart Removed.

Paris, June 6.—The Ministers met yesterday morning, President Loubet in the chair, and decided to remove the advocate-general, M. Lombart. The Minister of Justice, M. Lebret, was directed to begin proceedings against M. Tardif, president of the Assize Court, before the Council of Magistracy, for the way in which they conducted the case against MM. Deroulede and Marcel-Habert, who were acquitted Wednesday last of the charge of inciting soldiers to insubordination at the time of the election of President Loubet.

PURSE FOR KITCHENER.

Mr. Balfour Proposes a Vote in the House of $150,000—Bannerman Supports and Morley Opposes.

London, June 6.—Mr. Balfour, in introducing the vote of $150,000 for Lord Kitchener in the House of Commons, said the fact that the power of Mahdism was crushed was due to the genius of the man they desired to honor and reward. The Government leader expressed the hope that those who objected to the policy of the Soudan advance would not think that was a reason for resisting the vote, as such a course would be introducing politics into military matters. He then dwelt with admiration on the way the Sirdar had surmounted difficulties and organized victories by "his unswerving and almost superhuman industry." He deserved a signal mark of gratitude and honor, and he (Mr. Balfour) believed that in proposing the vote he was only carrying out the wishes of the House and the country.

Opposition Leader Supports.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Opposition leader, cordially supported the motion, while expressing regret at the treatment of the Mahdi's body, which he regarded as an error of taste and judgment.

Mr. Morley Opposes.

Mr. John Morley, the former Liberal Chief Secretary for Ireland, opposed the vote on the ground of the treatment of the Mahdi's head, to which Mr. Balfour replied that he did not believe the element of vengeance had influenced General Kitchener in the smallest degree, pointing out that he had treated the Mahdi's family with the utmost consideration. The removal of the body, he also said, had been public, as publicity was an essential part of the policy dictating the act. It was the first duty of the man responsible for the safety of the men and officers left in charge of Omdurman to root out the fanatical superstition which had been the strength of Mahdism for years.

Lord Kitchener, General Lord Roberts of Kandahar and the Duke of Marlborough were in the gallery of the House of Commons during the debate.

The House then voted General Lord Kitchener a grant of £29,351.

Fire at Huntsville consumed the planing factory owned by D. McCaffrey. Loss about $2,000.

BAYONETS USED AT BELFAST.

Nationalist Procession With Display of Banners—Several Conflicts.

Belfast, June 6.—There were exciting scenes here yesterday afternoon in consequence of a Nationalist demonstration, headed by Mr. William O'Brien and accompanied by bands of music and the display of banners. The Protestants threatened trouble, with the result that large bodies of police and military were stationed in the streets. Several conflicts took place, and the infantry charged the crowd with fixed bayonets. Several persons were injured.

THE MARKETS.

A Big Increase in the Visible Supply Caused a Sharp Drop in Chicago Wheat—The Latest Quotations.

Liverpool, June 6.—Wheat futures were strong yesterday, closing ½d to 1½d above Friday's final figures.

Chicago, June 6.—Wheat market opened strong yesterday morning at an advance of 1c a bushel over Sunday. This initial buoyancy was based on bad crop reports and the better tone of cable advices. The rise brought out sellers, and when an increase of nearly 2,000,000 bushels in American visible supply was announced, the market broke. The decline totalled 2c, and the close was at about the lowest point of the day—1c a bushel below Saturday's final quotations.

VISIBLE SUPPLY.

As compared with a week ago, the visible supply of wheat in Canada and the United States has increased 1,998,000 bushels; that of corn has decreased 418,000 bushels, and that of oats has increased 488,000 bushels. The visible supply of wheat in Canada and the United States, together with that afloat to Europe, is 68,845,000 bushels, against 65,892,000 bushels a week ago, and 69,467,000 bushels a year ago.

A WRONG IDEA OF... DYSPEPSIA

Throws all the Blame on the Stomach—The Real Seat of Trouble is the Intestines—The Permanent Cure is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

It is an old idea long since exploded that digestion is confined to the stomach. No modern scientist denies that by far the greater part of digestion and the more difficult part takes place in the intestines. This explains why dyspepsia is never really cured by preparations which merely aid stomach digestion and act only on the stomach.

This fact also explains why Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have been so remarkably successful as a cure for the worst forms of dyspepsia and indigestion.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills act directly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, and give new tone and vigor to the intestines, and make them able to perform their work of digesting the substances on which the stomach has no effect.

Stomach treatment may do well enough for slight indigestion, but if you have chronic indigestion or dyspepsia of a serious nature you can profit by the experience of scores of thousands who have been permanently cured by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25c. a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your Crematory Closets in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddon, February 28th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

Pleads Guilty to Getting Money Under False Pretences.

At this morning's Police Court Benjamin Hobson was charged with obtaining $5 from G W Hatton under false pretences, in that he represented himself to be one Andrew Phillips. He pleaded guilty and was remanded for one week for sentence.

Jas Ellis was charged with stealing a ride on a C P R train. If a saving of time was his object he might better have walked, for he was ordered to pay a fine of $10 forthwith, and as he had not the wherewith he was sentenced to spend 10 days in gaol.

HIS LORDSHIP AT LINDSAY.

Bishop O'Connor Visits Lindsay where Confirmation is Held.

Sunday being the day set apart by the Roman Catholic church for the solemnization of the feast of Corpus Christi it was specially marked at St. Mary's, Lindsay, by an official visit from His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, who administered first communion and confirmation to eighty-four candidates—39 girls and 45 boys. His Lordship in addressing the children, said it was his custom to have all the boys he confirmed abstain from all liquors until twenty-one years of age, and that after that age they would not be apt to get fond of liquor, which is the ruin of so many people. All made the required promise. His Lordship preached at high mass on the gospel of the day in his usual calm and logical style. The church was crowded at early mass, and again at high mass. His Lordship spent Monday visiting the Convent and separate school, and returned to Peterborough last evening.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Cartain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Kipling will not come across any of those parodies when he tries to catch up on his reading.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

When the kaiser now goes on board the admiral's ship in his navy, every Jack Tar will recognise the emperor at once. His will be the only mustache on board.—Chicago Tribune.

President Kruger may be a grand old man, but he will always have more or less trouble so long as he persists in wearing his whiskers after that antiquated pattern.—Pittsburg News.

Admiral Kautz did not have any cable to cut as did Dewey before beginning operations at Manila, but he seems to have studiously refrained from letting the war department know what he was doing.—Buffalo Courier.

Evidently Lady Randolph Churchill knows how to advertise free of expense. She has set about all the quidnuncs in Europe to guessing the name of her new guinea magazine that is to appear in June.

The London Spectator is of the opinion that Mr. Dooley wields the shafts of ridicule with as unerring aim as Artemus Ward once wielded them. Thus it is shown that the fame of the Chicago humorist is becoming international.—Providence Journal.

CHOATE CHAFF.

If Embassador Choate is lucky, he may hope to become almost as popular in England as "Tod" Sloane.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Judging from the dinners he is receiving, Embassador Choate ought to effect quite a large saving in the matter of meals.—Philadelphia North American.

At last Embassador Choate has begun his joke making. He makes good jokes, too, for Englishmen laugh at them, being able to see the point without a diagram.—Cleveland Leader.

It may yet be necessary, with his paltry salary of $17,500 per year, for Embassador Choate to rent a room in some desirable neighborhood and take his meals at banquets.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Embassador Choate trod on some very thin eggs in his first speech to the Britons, but he doesn't appear to have cracked a single shell. So much for his excellent humor and his rare oratorical agility.—Boston Herald.

Embassador Choate will pay $12,000 of his $17,500 salary each year for his house in London. If Mrs. Choate takes $5,000 more, the embassador will have $500 left to buy cigars and trousers with. Thus saith a contemporary. Well, there may be a few bloated monopolists who need more than one box of cigars and a pair of 33 trousers each week.—Boston Traveler.

SPECIAL NOTICE—These are the same great shows, the same gigantic aggregation, the same colossal combination that so startled the metropolis of the country by its overwhelming magnitude, its comprehensive completeness, and its veritable avalanche of novelties and floodtide of innovations when it inaugurated its tour of this season at the Madison Square Garden, New York City. Its tremendous triumph was attested by the unanimous and unqualified praises of the press and plaudits of the people, and patronage only limited by the capacity of the largest temple of amusement in the world.

SPECIAL NOTICE—EXTRA!!—It is hereby promised without reserve, and the promise will be faithfully kept, that the programme of the shows to be presented in this city will be absolutely and exactly the same, man for man, horse for horse, animal for animal, feature for feature and detail for detail as the exhibition that so completely conquered the mighty metropolis.

EXTRA SPECIAL NOTICE—EXTRA!!!—The prices for the great consolidation in New York were as high as $2 per seat. Here only the usual prices charged by merely ordinary shows will be asked. No advance over usual prices in spite of the double shows.

NECESSITY OF VENTILATION.

Pure Air Is Valuable, Though It Costs Nothing.

The young should be trained in the importance of ventilation, for this is one of the most neglected requisites of good health. It is estimated that 3,000 cubic feet of pure air per hour is the need of each individual. In the best hospitals 6,000 cubic feet is not considered too much. By weight one-fifth of this is oxygen, the life giving element. The same air rebreathed four times will no longer sustain life. The oxygen has been mostly absorbed, while waste matter and carbonic acid gas, a deadly poison, have taken its place.

Were our rooms airtight we couldn't survive. The atmosphere penetrates every crevice around doors and windows, thanks to the law of equilibrium, and we are saved from death. But whenever we find members of a family sallow, nerveless, hollow eyed, liable to take cold easily and readily, subject to various disorders, we may be certain of one or two things, either the diet is faulty or they do not properly ventilate their dwellings.

A celebrated French physician, finding himself much depleted by hard work, did a strange thing—for a Frenchman. He dressed in flannel from head to foot, put on a cardigan jacket, opened both his windows in winter time, placed a screen before each and slept there, undismayed by the coolness of the atmosphere. By habituating oneself to sleeping with open windows and having the head protected from drafts the tendency to take cold will be eventually overcome—that is, with a proper amount and kind of food.

One must not think that this subject of fresh air is too much insisted upon. It cannot be. Nothing among cultivated people is so continuously disregarded. To enter some elegant parlors is to breathe the air of a charnel house. Theaters and places of public resort are in this respect filthy beyond description. After sitting for two hours in a room moderately well filled with people one is nerveless, dispirited, subject to headache and liable to take cold. The department of public health should strictly watch all places in which audiences assemble, as often they become places of contagion.

Worked the Gas Joke.

"They say an Englishman can't appreciate a joke or play one. That isn't the case with the Canuck as I have found him," said a New York man. "I was in Toronto," he added, "for nearly a week. The last day I was there I was the guest of a lively crowd at the big club of the town. After the entertainment my jolly companions said they would walk with me as far as my hotel, and they did. They went in with me and followed me to my room. After a short stop the leader of the party told me to go to bed. Although we had dined and told stories we had not become unduly familiar, and I was somewhat surprised when told to turn in in my own quarters. They saw I was puzzled, and the leader explained.

"'You fellows from the States have such a funny way of blowing out the gas,' he said, and then they all laughed. In spite of the mess that has accumulated on this gas joke I rather enjoyed it because it seemed to be new to my friends, the Canucks."—New York Sun.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

Eggs can be rapidly beaten by a new utensil formed of a screw threaded central shaft, having blades at the bottom, with a handle fitting over the top of the shaft to revolve the latter as it is pushed down, a spiral spring returning it after each stroke.

A handy counting device for scoring games is formed of a fan shaped plate, with pointers pivoted at the base to swing around the curved edge, the latter having graduations for units, tens and hundreds, with notches which hold the pointers from slipping.

Signal lanterns for use on railroads are to be made with a plain glass lens, with a rack at the rear of the lens for the insertion of a colored glass plate for flashing a signal, with a pocket in the back of the lantern to carry a number of plates of different colors.

For dredging channels in river beds a new machine is mounted on the bow of a boat, having an adjustable post, which carries an endless chain of buckets to be lowered to the bed of the stream and bring up the dirt, dumping it in a scow alongside the machine.

THE JEWELER'S ART.

Very pretty cirup jugs are in cut glass, with a silver top and silver tray.

Quite new as a brooch design is the marquise, which can be carried out in diamonds, emeralds, pearls or turquoises.

Graceful glass vases, cut in dot and line designs, have a band of chased silver around the very narrow throat, beyond which the vase flares out again into a broad, sharply notched lip.

With all reserve is given the rumor which obtains in some fashionable circles that the ruby is to be the coming stone. Certainly magnificent examples of it, especially in rings, are among the jeweler's new productions.

Gay as their rainbow hued silk covers are the handles of many of the parasols, gorgeous in green, red and blue enamels and gold, for which the ball form and the elongated straight stick are particularly adapted. Green and gold seems a favorite combination.—Jewelers' Circular.

WOMEN MAY BE ALDERMEN.

Effect of Amendment to Local Government Bill in London.

The Amendment Was Passed by the Commons by a Vote of 196 to 161—The Conservatives Generally Opposed It, But the Vote Did Not Follow Party Lines—The Latest News by Cable.

London, June 7.—During the report stage of the London Local Government bill in the House of Commons yesterday, an amendment, moved by the Right Hon. Leonard Henry Courtney, advanced Liberal, declaring women are eligible as aldermen and councillors, was adopted by a vote of 196 to 161. The vote did not follow party lines, though generally the Conservatives, including most of the Cabinet Ministers, opposed the amendment, while Arthur and Gerald Balfour (Chief Secretary for Ireland) and other Unionists, with a minority of the Liberals, supported it.

DREYFUS WAS JOYFUL.

He Was Waiting on the Shore of Devil's Island and His Face Was Radiant With Joy.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, June 7.—When the despatch boat Gosland, bearing the superintendent of the prison and the commander of marine artillery, who were designated by the French Government to notify Dreyfus of the revision of his trial, arrived yesterday from Cayenne at the Isle du Diable, Dreyfus was waiting on the shore. Although endeavoring to maintain his self-possession, he received the official intelligence with a countenance radiant with joy.

GERMANY'S NEW TERRITORY.

The Story of the Acquisition Told in the Reichstag.

Berlin, June 7.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Baron von Buelow, in the Reichstag yesterday, made a statement on the subject of the German-Spanish treaty for the cession of the Caroline, Ladrone and Pelew Islands. He said that in order to round off the German possessions in the Pacific, and in view of German commercial interests, which had long existed in the Caroline Islands, "we considered it our duty to take care of this group, so that in the event of a change in ownership it should not be lost to Germany." The Minister then read the text of the agreement, which was concluded Feb. 12, 1899:

"First, Spain cedes to Germany the Carolines, Pelews and Ladrone Islands, except the island of Guam, in consideration of a compensation of 25,000,000 pesetas.

"Second, Germany concedes the Spanish trade and agricultural enterprises in these Islands the same treatment and facilities as to German trade, and concedes to th Spanish religious orders in the islands, the same rights and liberties as the German orders.

"Third, Spain will establish naval, mercantile and coaling stations in the Carolines, Pelews and Ladrones, and will be allowed to retain them in case of war.

"Fourth, this agreement is to be submitted for the constitutional sanction of the two countries, and is to be ratified as soon as this sanction is given.

"An understanding has also been arrived at with Spain regarding the mutual granting of conventional tariffs, such as correspond with the wishes and interests of German as well as Spanish trade. So soon as the Cortes has sanctioned the sale of the islands we will immediately submit the necessary bills to the Reichstag, which will have the opportunity of a thorough and practical examination of the matter. Until then we hope the Reichstag will defer its discussion, out of international courtesy."

THE CONFERENCE OVER.

Milner and Kruger Separate in a Cordial Manner.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, June 7.—The conference between President Kruger and the British high commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, who is also Governor of Cape Colony, was concluded yesterday. The President and the high commissioner took leave of each other in a cordial manner. They have agreed not to publish the result of their deliberations until Wednesday next.

A distinctly hopeful feeling that an agreement has been concluded prevails here.

Was the Conference Abortive?

London, June 7.—A special despatch from Bloemfontein says that the conference between President Kruger and Sir Alfred Milner proved abortive.

Negotiations Still Proceeding.

London, June 7.—The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, replying in the House of Commons yesterday to Sir Edward Temperley Gourley, advanced Liberal, said that before the Anglo-American-Canadian high commission adjourned proposals and counter-proposals for the arbitration of the Alaskan boundary were made, but the commissioners were unable to agree respecting the tribunal and terms of reference. The negotiations, however, were still proceeding between the Governments of Great Britain and the United States.

"SAVE ALLAN!" "SAVE ALLAN!"

Melancholy Result of a Rafting Party on the Brantford Road.

Galt, June 7.—About five miles from here last night David R. Ronald, aged 21 years, and his two younger brothers, William and Allan, went down to a pond on their father's farm on the Brantford road, and went out for a sail on a raft. Allan, thinking the water shallow, jumped off, intending to wade ashore, but he underestimated its depth and sank. David jumped in to save him and came near drowning, when William, seeing the state of affairs, leaped in, and in obedience to David's command, "Save Allan! Save Allan!" with difficulty carried Allan's senseless form to shore, and by the time he had accomplished the feat brave David had sunk for the last time. It was between two and three hours before his lifeless form was recovered.

Lightning Struck the House.

Markdale, Ont., June 7.—Yesterday, during a short but violent thunderstorm the house of James Henry of this town was struck by lightning. Mrs. Henry received a severe stroke, being severely and painfully burned on the back and one leg. She suffered greatly, but will likely recover. The house was damaged, but not destroyed.

Word From Andree's Balloon.

Christiana, June 7.—The slip of paper found inside the cork buoy picked up by two boys on May 14 last on the north coast of Iceland, was inscribed: "Drifting buoy No. 7. The balloon thus had only travelled seven hours and fifty minutes when the buoy was thrown out.

GREAT BRITAIN OR RUSSIA

May Possibly Purchase the Philippine Archipelago.

Even Germany May Make a Bid—The President of the United States Seems to Be Tired of Carrying Out Monarchical Ideas—In Some Quarters It Is Thought a Sale Would End the Trouble.

Washington, June 7.—Many solutions have been offered for what appeared to be the puzzling attitude of the Administration since the recent discussions over reinforcing General Otis by a call for volunteers or by depleting the regular forces on this continent began.

It is explained that the reason the President finally announced that no call would be issued, although he knew that Gen. Otis considered 75,000 men necessary to subjugate the Filipinos, was that the Chief Executive did not wish to give the country an illustration of the difficulties of conquest.

There is now current in high circles some mysterious talk about another reason, and that is the sale of the Philippine Islands to Great Britain or Russia. Despite the manifested unconcern by American diplomats over the German purchase from Spain, there is really not only chagrin but distinct anxiety also. The Carolines and the Ladrones form a cordon around the Philippines. Germany's engagement to protect Spanish naval stations can easily become an alliance between the two countries.

Germany Won Her Point.

The chagrin is felt because the peace commissioners at Paris yielded to the sympathetic overture of Germany not to strip Spain of all her Pacific possessions, and now she has divested herself of them to our possible disadvantage. Hence the rumor that negotiations have been pending for a transfer of the Philippines to Russia or Great Britain receives credence.

It cannot be stated that Russia is showing any eagerness to invest, for the islands are far south of "her sphere of influence in China." The interests of Great Britain lie all around them, and her watchfulness of Germany's manoeuvres in colonial expansion may make her the ultimate purchaser.

There has been something peculiar about White House news for weeks, and the air is being burdened with a secret state which has characterised high officials. The explanation now asserted in well informed circles explains several matters, whether all the facts be correct or not.

The President knows that he cannot emerge from all the dilemmas arising from his Philippine experiment by selling the islands unless he first subdues the inhabitants by diplomatic blandishments or force of arms. He yet relies upon the good offices of the Schurman commission.

Germany Playing a Part.

With peace thus procured, it is claimed, he would wash his hands of the whole distracting subject by a sale to some foreign power. The strongest notion of the nation dealing in the affair is Russia, but it may be Germany herself. It is asserted that in return for a concession of a cable landing in New York recently Germany has granted a cable station on the Carolines. The divulging of this fact induces the belief that there was a knowledge after all on the part of this country of the German purchase, and that she may become the owner of the Philippines as a base in some further depredation on China in the way of concessions. That there is some big turn developing in colonial matters is certain. Meanwhile the President is waiting and hoping.

SYMPATHY FOR THE TRACKMEN

employment of the G T R has continued for a lengthened period, and whereas in the opinion of this Board the non-performance of the usual duties of these men is calculated to increase the danger to the travelling public, and whereas the continuance of the strike is necessarily hurtful to the good feeling which should exist between the employees and the employer, and whereas in the opinion of this Board the demands of the strikers are just and reasonable, therefore, this Board desires to take the opportunity of extending its hearty sympathy to these men and their families and of expressing its earnest hope that the management of the Grand Trunk railway may speedily see its way clear to accept the just demands of the trackmen, and express the opinion that the increased prosperity of the country and the increased earnings of the railway companies would justify the G T R in raising the wages of the section men, and this Board further suggests that the utmost magnanimity on the part of the company in taking back to its employment all the strikers will meet the most hearty approval of the country.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.

On the communication asking the Board to appoint a delegate to a conference on the subject of technical education, there was some discussion. Mr. Burnham had a few remarks to offer. The leading nations of the world had seen the necessity of technical education and had established technical schools. The requirements to-day are knowledge of designing and the theory of construction. In view of its progress in other countries it would be well for the Board at least to discuss it.

Mr J A McCaig, B A, was called upon and offered some remarks. Everything that tends the promote the efficiency of industry is of importance to trade and commerce and the subject of technical education, therefore, comes within the scope of the Board of Trade. The term "technical education" is used in a wide application. The Germans have for centuries led in industrialism, and this is credited to technical education. Centres of instruction in industry and manufactures have been found to lead to increased foreign commerce. This is well because only such nations as enter the world's markets can become great nations. The promoting of industrial ideas and instruction from central points is technical education. Both the popular idea of education idea is when children leave school they will be able to earn lots of money by what they have learned. With technical education as then understood, the speaker was not in sympathy, for three reasons, first, it is scarcely possible, second, it is not advisable, third, it is not necessary. The present system gives a good general education. He did not think we could advantageously do without any part of our present Public school system. The amount now taught under the curriculum is as much as the immature minds can receive to advantage. Forcing the pupils into technical education, which means special lines, at an early age, such as 12 or 14 years would cramp the child's originality. Therefore he deprecated special education in the Public schools. Many people must be laborers and for these a good general education must be of far more advantage in life than a technical education of which he would be probably able to make not the slightest use. Canada is also an agricultural nation, and technical education is, therefore, largely unnecessary. There seems also to be little demand for technical education. Our own public library mechanical drawing class shows this. The facilities exceed the demand. Equipments of technical schools are also very costly. Technical education may be needed at some time in the future but at present he believed our national conditions did not require it as it is generally understood (applause).

Mr Dumble differed. Intellectual training and general education are required in the public schools. Scientific education should not dilute the instruction in the Public schools. But there are times when technical education is good. But our mineral resources show the need of technical and scientific training. It is nonsense to talk of technical education in the Public schools, but we should have it in the higher schools.

After a few remarks by Mr Burnham, Messrs. Jas Kendry, M.P., and John Lang, M.P., were appointed delegates to attend the conference.

The Trent Canal was touched upon. Mr Dumble advised that a delegation of the Montreal Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce be invited to visit this district to inspect the route and work done. On motion of Mr Dumble, seconded by Mr Fair, the matter was referred to a committee consisting of the chairmen of the different committees of the Board and the representatives of the ridings in the Dominion House and the Legislature. To this committee also was referred the matter of holding the annual excursion of the Board of Trade.

Adjournment took place at 10 o'clock.

THE CREIGHTAN'S MEMORY,

increased interest it aroused this year. Among the chiefs of the Conservative party present were Hon. Sir Charles Tupper, M.P., Mr. J. P. Whitney, M.P.P., Mr. E. F. Clarke, M.P., Mr. J. J. Foy, Q.C., M.P.P., Dr. Roche, M.P., Mr. G. V. McInerney, M.P., Mr. H. A. Powell, M.P., Hon. T. Casgrain, M.P. Prior to the decoration ceremonies, which began shortly after 3 o'clock, a reception was held in the rooms of the Conservative Club in the Toronto Arcade.

The floral tributes were splendid and very numerous. Handsome wreaths were sent by all the ward Conservative associations of the city, the Conservative Club, the Albany Club, the House of Commons, the Macdonald Club, the Central Conservative Association and many private individuals. That from the Conservative Association was a very beautiful design of a Union Jack, bearing the motto, "British Subject, 1815 to 1891."

Mr. Dumas presided over the proceedings at the monument. Addresses were delivered by Hon. Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Whitney, Dr. Roche, Mr. Clarke, Hon. T. S. Casgrain, Mr. McInerney, Mr. H. A. Powell and Mr. J. J. Foy. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed throughout.

The Kingston Ceremony.

Kingston, June 7.—In accordance with their annual custom the Macdonald Club of Kingston yesterday afternoon decorated the grave of Sir John Macdonald in Cataraqui Cemetery. Wreaths were deposited upon the mound by representatives of the Macdonald Club and the Conservative Association of this city and the Conservative members of the Dominion Parliament. Rev. J. Mackie offered the opening prayer.

In his address, as president of the Macdonald Club, Mr. T. J. Shanks said that as the living Sir John Macdonald receded from view, the characteristics which endeared him to his contemporaries would gradually fade out of memory, and yet more would be gained than would be lost, for an ideal would arise more truly conveying to posterity his lofty spirit and his genius as a constructive statesman.

Mrs. Mitchell Drowned Herself.

DEWEY LEAVES HONGKONG.

British and Italian Salutations Extended and Replied To.

Washington, June 7.—Admiral Dewey's flagship Olympia sailed yesterday from Hongkong, returning to the United States.

While passing the British cruiser Powerful the band of the Olympia played the British National Anthem and gave a bugle salute. There was no firing. The Powerful replied with a similar salute, and her band played "Hail Columbia."

As the Olympia passed the Italian Admiral's ship the Olympia band played the Italian National Anthem and gave an admiral's salute, which compliments were returned. Then the Olympia band played "Auld Lang Syne," and the band of the Powerful played "Home, Sweet Home." Admiral Dewey is apparently anxious to avoid all demonstrations.

DANGER IN SODA.

Serious Results Sometimes Follow Its Excessive Use.

Common soda is all right in its place and indispensable in the kitchen and for cooking and washing purposes, but it was never intended as a medicine, and people who use it as such will some day regret it.

We refer to the common use of soda to relieve heartburn or sour stomach, a habit which thousands of people practice and one which is fraught with danger; moreover the soda only gives temporary relief and in the end the stomach trouble gets worse and worse.

The soda acts as a mechanical irritant to the walls of the stomach and bowels and cases are on record where it has accumulated in the intestines, causing death by inflammation or peritonitis.

Dr. Harlandson recommends as the safest and surest cure for sour stomach (acid dyspepsia) an excellent preparation sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These tablets are large 3-grain lozenges, very pleasant to taste and contain the natural acids, pepsinone and digestive elements essential to good digestion, and when taken after meals they digest the food perfectly and promptly before it has time to ferment, sour and poison the blood and nervous system.

Dr. Wuerth states that he invariably uses Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach derangements and finds them a certain cure not only for sour stomach, but by promptly digesting the food they create fresh and strengthen the action of the heart and liver. They are not a cathartic, but intended only for stomach diseases and weakness and will be found reliable in all stomach troubles except cancer of the stomach. All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents per package.

A little book describing all forms of stomach weakness and their cure mailed free by addressing the F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

To Be Grouped Into a Province.

Montreal, June 7.—Premier Haultain of the Northwest Territories is here, his mother being very ill. He says that autonomy will be granted the Territories by the end of the present Legislature, and he thinks the new province will comprise Alberta, Saskatchewan and Assiniboia, for all agree that the boundaries will not be changed.

Ex-Mayor of Guelph Dead.

Guelph, Ont., June 7.—Ex-Mayor William Stevenson died at his residence here yesterday after an illness of some time. He was mayor of Guelph about 10 or 15 years ago. Mr. Stevenson was 69 years of age.

Mrs. George Porter, residing on Cork street, while hanging out clothes yesterday, received a severe sunstroke. She was taken into the house, but died in a few hours.

CROOKEDNESS IN ELECTIONS

Bill to Change the Word "May" to the Word "Shall."

Mr. Ingram Insists Upon Having "Shall" Inserted in the Election Act—Some Other Notable Changes Proposed—The Grand Trunk Resolutions Occupied Most of the Time and the House Sat Late.

Ottawa, June 7.—In the House yesterday afternoon Mr. Ingram introduced a bill to amend the Election Act, and in doing so explained that it was intended to meet some of the questionable methods now resorted to in elections: for instance, the impossibility of outsiders to act as deputy returning officers, was to be stopped. The bill also proposed to abolish the clause which required a deposit of $200. Section 85 of the Election Act proposed to be amended by enacting that when a voter has spoiled his ballot, the deputy returning officer "shall," not "may," furnish him with another. The bill further provides that the deputy returning officer, when the ballots are being counted, "shall" expose the face of each ballot to the view of the agents present. There are also a number of clauses dealing with minor disabilities. The bill was read a first time.

That Disallowed Act.

Mr. W. W. B. McInnes (Liberal, Vancouver) asked the Premier for a statement as to the correctness of the press reports as to the disallowance of an act of the British Columbia Legislature.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that after certain correspondence with the Government of British Columbia in regard to legislation passed by the Legislature during its session of 1898, in reference to the excluding of Japanese labor, the Government came to the conclusion that the law should be disallowed, and so recommended to His Excellency. The correspondence, he added, will be brought down in a few days.

Klondike Mail Arrangements.

There was a further discussion on the Klondike mail arrangements, Mr. Taylor, the Opposition whip, referring to the case of a constituent of his who had had returned to him from the Dead Letter office in Victoria two parcels mailed for Dawson.

Mr. Mulock repeated his explanation that until navigation opened, about June 15, only letters could be sent by the Yukon mails.

The Grand Trunk Lease.

The House went again into committee on the Grand Trunk lease.

Col. McLennan disagreed with Mr. Blair's estimate of the cost of a right-of-way and other expenses of construction of a line from St. Rosalie to St. Lambert.

Mr. Blair defended his estimate of the cost by saying they were prepared by the officers of his department. Mr. Borden, Mr. Bergeron and other members said some of these estimates of cost were absurd, particularly that of $300,000 for the Yamaska bridge—831 feet long.

After recess the House resumed in committee the consideration of the bill. The debate was kept up by Col. McLennan, Mr. Foster, Dr. Sproule, Mr. Powell, Mr. Marcil, Mr. Bergeron and others.

The committee rose at 3 a.m., reported progress and the House adjourned.

THE SENATE.

The Upper Chamber Did Some Business on Monday—The Act to Amend the Companies Act Reported.

Ottawa, June 7.—In the Senate yesterday afternoon the bill respecting the Hamilton Powder Company was read a third time and passed.

The House then went into committee on the act to amend the Companies' Act, and after discussion the bill was reported.

Several bills were read a second time and referred to their respective committees, and a number of bills from the Commons received their first reading, after which the Senate adjourned.

THE USURY BILL.

Five Per Cent. Per Day Charged by Montreal Usurers.

Ottawa, June 6.—At a meeting of the Senate committee on banking and commerce yesterday the Canada Life Assurance bill was passed without any amendments.

An act incorporating the Imperial Loan & Investment Company was also adopted, as was also an act respecting the Home Life Association of Canada.

An interesting discussion took place on Senator Dandurand's bill respecting usury. Mr. Dandurand gave some instances where as high as five per cent. per day was charged, and there were numerous instances of 50 per cent. per annum. In some cases men had their wages garnisheed for two years for small loans of $10, and $10 was still owing at the end of two years.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell gave similar instances of how the usurer operated. There was a strong feeling at the committee in favor of the bill, the only difference of opinion being that the bill did not go far enough.

Hon. David Mills stated that, after discussing the matter with Senator Dandurand, he decided to suggest that the bill be amended so as to reduce the maximum rate of interest from 25 to 10 per cent. per annum on contracts, and from 10 to 5 per cent. per annum after judgment.

Senator Dandurand announced that it is his intention to move a further amendment to the measure, so as to provide for a fine of $1,000 for the practice of professional usury.

The measure was referred to a special committee, consisting of the Minister of Justice, Senators Miller, Clemow, Dandurand and Wood.

Another Stolen Child Sensation.

New Britain, Conn., June 7.—Anna Escholtz, the 6-year-old girl who has been missing since Sunday afternoon, was found about 2.30 yesterday afternoon in a clump of trees about one mile from the place where she was last seen. The child was alone and seemed not to have fared badly. It has not yet been determined whether she was lost or whether she was taken off by someone.

Richard Hughes Was Killed.

London, Ont., June 7.—Richard Hughes, aged about 45, a shoemaker residing here, was struck by a Grand Trunk special train last night while crossing the track. He died from the injuries sustained a couple of hours later.

METHODISTS AFTER MR. TARTE.

Bay of Quinte Conference Demands an Apology From the Minister.

Belleville, Ont., June 7.—Following is a copy of the resolution moved, seconded and carried in the Bay of Quinte Conference yesterday afternoon:

That, whereas, it has come to our knowledge that statements derogatory and insulting to the whole Methodist Church were made by the Hon. J. Israel Tarte, a prominent member of the Dominion Cabinet, on the floor of the House of Commons, in certain false and malicious charges which he preferred against a small and feeble company of members of that church living on the Island of Anticosti, and which charges appear on the pages of Hansard as uttered by him, we, as a conference, representing more than 120,000 members and adherents of that church, desire in the strongest and most emphatic terms to resist these unjust charges against our brethren, and the odium cast on our whole denomination throughout the Dominion, and demand a full retraction of them in the place where they were made, and an ample apology for the grievous insult offered to us, and we call upon our brethren of the Methodist Church in Parliament to insist on compliance with our demands on the floor of the House of Commons, and we would further suggest that the attention of the general superintendent be called to this matter, and he be requested to take it up and press the case till full satisfaction be given. Copies of this resolution to be sent to the Premier and to the several members of Parliament who are ministers or adherents of the Methodist Church within the bounds of this conference.

CANADIAN ARTIST DEAD.

Duncan A. McKellar, Who Worked for Toronto and New York Papers.

Penetanguishene, Ont., June 7.—There passed away at Penetanguishene yesterday morning Mr. Duncan A. McKellar, in his 36th year, eldest son of Mr. Alexander McKellar, storekeeper of the Reformatory for Boys. Mr. McKellar was considered an artist of marked ability. Some few years ago he spent four years in connection with Toronto Saturday Night, but lately he has been in New York, contributing to such papers as New York Life, Harper's Weekly, Brown, King & Company's Journal. A year or more ago Mr. McKellar found his health failing and so returned to his home, to see if the bracing air of northern Ontario would not be beneficial. His hopes, however, were not realized, and his death, although not altogether unexpected by his friends, was yet somewhat startling in its suddenness.

Left the C.W.A.

Montreal, June 7.—The Y. M. C. A. bicycle club, which is affiliated with the Canadian Wheelmen's Association, is about to secede from the association because the association has sanctioned Sunday racing in Quebec.

Matoafa Cannot Be King.

Auckland, N.Z., June 7.—At the Queen's Birthday celebration in Samoa it was officially announced that Great Britain would absolutely veto any proposition that Matoafa should ever become king.

In the mythology of Ancient Greece Hymen, the god of marriage, was the half brother of Esculapius, the god of medicine. The ancients believed that marriage and health should go together, and as a result the Greeks of that time have ever since been looked upon as types of physical perfection.

Sickly mothers cannot bear healthy children. The prospective mother should use every precaution to preserve and foster her health. Not alone for the sake of the little one to come but for her own sake. A perfectly healthy woman is in no danger and in very little pain at her time of trial.

There must be due preparation for this time. Nature makes the preparatory period three-fourths of a year and women who take the hint from nature and use the time properly need have no fears of the outcome. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a medicine designed to cure all distinctly feminine ailments and taken during the period of gestation it renders childbirth easy, safe and comparatively painless.

It is the invention of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., a regularly graduated physician and skilled specialist in the cure of all diseases of woman.

Mrs. Orrin Stiles, of Deerning, Dunn Co., Wis., writes: "I take your 'Favorite Prescription' enough, for I have not been so well for five years as I now am. In July last I had a baby boy, weight 11 lbs. I was only sick a short time, and since I got up have not been sick one day."

Sick women can consult Dr. Pierce by letter free of charge. Every letter is held strictly private and sacredly confidential.

Designing men work on women's feelings, by advising women to "write to a woman who understands woman's needs." It is useless to seek advice about disease of any woman who is not a physician. So far as known no qualified woman physician is connected with any proprietary medicine establishment.

Warts and Helpless Doctors.

The doctors excuse their incompetence by declaring that these nuisances disappear as a child grows older. I profess to believe them. No one in the household remembers the historic case of Cromwell, fortunately. His warts did not vanish. You see them as plain as his nose on the mask taken after death preserved at Warwick castle.

And there is Cicero. Not that he himself had warts to speak of, though I have seen that statement in a schoolbook recently. It was an ancestor of his who won distinction that way, astonishing the Roman public with an excrescence on the tip of his nose of trefoil shape. Wherefore they called him Cicero (vetch), and the nickname clung to the family.

It is rather comforting than otherwise to learn that the heroes and sages of old were afflicted with warts. Even the "godlike Greeks" had them, as Lucian tells us in passing, and their mothers applied to old women for charms. The doctors were as helpless then as now, of course with more excuse.—Pall Mall Gazette.

FASHION HINTS.

Facts Concerning the Details of Present Styles.

The draped tunic and the redingote opening over the skirt are enjoying eminent success in fashionable circles and appear in all sorts of gowns, from the tailor made costume to the evening toilet. The skirts over which the tunic or redingote appears need not be of the same color or goods. It may be entirely different if the general scheme of the costume demands such variation, or it may be covered with lace or guipure while the tunic is left plain. In some of the summer models of light gowns the body of the gown is of silk or satin, the tunic of gauze of the same color.

The favorite fashion of fluffy neckwear —bows, ruches, etc.—is gradually leading to the revival of tulle and mousseline bonnet strings. These pretty soft scarfs are seen on some of the newest hats and are likely to be welcomed, as they are usually very becoming when tied in a fluffy bow under the chin.

Bolero and coat bodices divide empire over the upper part of the costume. The coat bodice is the more dignified of the two and is therefore more suitable for mature women, but as the bolero now comes down to the waist line behind and sometimes a trifle below it while in front it is frequently elongated in points or squares it is not very flippant and may be appropriately worn by almost any woman.

A picture is given of one of the simplest of the present fashionable petticoats. It is of fawn and blue glace taffeta and, like the skirts of gowns, is molded to the figure at the top. Around the foot is a deep flounce, increasing in height toward the back and headed by a pinked ruche of taffeta. The flounce is bordered by a pinked ruffle of taffeta. The corset usually matches the petticoat in color, or at least harmonizes with it, and in this case a corset of either fawn or blue satin might be chosen.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough.

IN THE FASHION.

I know you drew all hearts to you
To hold them in distain,
And, teaching men the way to woo,
You let them woo in vain.
I knew to worship at your feet
Mere prudence would forbid,
And yet I sought and found you sweet
And loved, as others did.

In matchless style with many a wile
You played a charmer's part
Still, without of your craft and guile,
I shrined you all my heart;
Then, lightly meeting love with scorn,
Of me you soon were rid
And left me, hopeless and forlorn,
To sigh, as others did.

Now well I know one may outgrow
Full many a greater care,
But then I thought no human woe
Could equal my despair.
My hopes foregone, my life undone,
The cruel fates I chid,
Then—not my own, loved, wooed and won
And wed, as others did!

LYNN'S FLOATING BRIDGE.

In Use For a Century and Growing Better All the Time.

A new set of three inch planks is required every third year in replanking the floating bridge on Glenmere pond. Few people of the hundreds who cross the bridge daily have any idea of its great thickness, which has been proved by recent soundings to be as much as 17 feet in some places. Although so much thicker and heavier than when first built, it seems to have lost none of its flexibility and always adapts itself instantly to any changes in the level of the water.

Floating bridge is one of the curiosities of Lynn, and it is claimed to be the only structure of its kind in the world. In 1803 a bridge of somewhat similar design was built across Lake Quinsigamond, near Worcester, but it was constructed simply of two tiers of logs covered with planks and was never satisfactory. The Lynn bridge, on the other hand, has been in constant use for nearly a century and is stronger now than ever, as the wood does not rot under water, and the pine logs which form the foundation are as firm as on the day when they were hewed and put together.

Captain Moses Brown was the originator of the idea of thus bridging Collins pond, as it was then called. In March, 1803, a charter was granted to the Salem Turnpike and Chelsea Bridge corporation, and the bridge was completed in 1804 at a cost of $55,400. A diver has investigated the foundations of the structure and has found that the original bridge was made of five layers of pine, laid at right angles to each other. The first two layers of pine logs were on one side and the upper three of hewn timber one foot square, the whole secured together by three inch dowels and covered with planking 5¼ feet thick.

The bridge is 511 feet long, 36 feet wide, and the pond which it crosses is about 17 acres in area and about 64 feet above the sea level. The bed of the pond appears to be a bed of quicksand, and it would be very difficult to build a road around the pond without making a very long detour, owing to the boggy nature of the soil. The bridge is kept from tipping over by being moored at the ends, imbedded in long trenches dug in the shores of the pond at the approaches.—Boston Transcript.

Chinese Arrogance.

It is not realised here how proud—indeed arrogant—the Chinese are. The idea that any other race is equal to their own is one that cannot find place in their brains. They believe all foreigners to be a sort of savages. They look at European men and women mixing together and believe that these savages have no morals, but live in a rough sort of promiscuity. They look at our dress, our men with short coats and nether garments showing their two legged forms, our women actually clearly indicating their waists and much of the outline of their figure, and they believe we are without decency. They do not see us observing their ceremonial, and they believe we are without manners.

A recent minister, accredited to Germany, was talking to Sir Robert Hart before leaving Peking and, on the latter's regretting his lonely condition without his wife, said to him, "Ah, but, of course, you have a No. 2." Sir Robert proceeded to explain that such a course was impossible to him, as it would make his wife very angry and indeed arouse the sovereign displeasure of his queen. The Chinese diplomatist patted him good humoredly on the shoulder, saying, "Let us hope by longer intercourse with us you may become more civilized."

REVIEWS.

The June Ladies' Home Journal reaches the top notch of excellence in both its pictorial and literary features. It opens with a page drawing of Longfellow's Evangeline, and gives a group of pictures showing some Fetes of College Girls. An interesting description is given of The Creole Girl of New Orleans, and Housekeeping on an Ocean Steamship is graphically portrayed. How a Young Man Can Work His Way Through College has a practical value for every poor boy ambitious for higher education, and Telling the character from Handwrighting is interesting and entertaining. Bishop, priest, rabbi and minister contribute to a symposium on What is the Good of Going to Church? and the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, D. D., discusses Pains that Polish Perfection.

The Miserable Moors.

The lives lived by the Moors are without perhaps any exception the most precarious, and miserable that can be imagined. The poor man is thrown into prison for sums he never possessed and can never pay, the rich to be squeezed of all he possesses, while those only can hope to escape who are members of families sufficiently powerful to arouse the fears of the local governor should he attempt extortion and not sufficiently powerful to stir up the jealousy and avarice of the sultan.

Even the governors of the provinces suffer themselves as they make others suffer, for just as they squeeze the agriculturist and the peasant so are they in turn squeezed by the sultan and his viziers, and, should they fall by constant presents to maintain a good opinion at the court, they can expect only imprisonment and often death.—Blackwood's Magazine.

She Had Had Experience.

"Ah," he cried, kneeling at her feet, "say you will marry me, and I will be your devoted slave for life."

"Arise, Henry," she answered, "you will not do. That was what my first husband said, and before we had got fairly out of the church he began telling me how he wanted me to wear my hair."—Chicago News.

What She said.

Mrs. R Peek, E 18'h street, New York City, visited Canada last year, and had the good fortune to pick up something which not only suited her, but her neighbors also. Writing the manufacturer of Nerviline she says:—"I bought three bottles of Nerviline while in Canada and treated my neighbors to some of it, and all think it the best medicine for internal or external pain they have ever used." Nerviline deserves such a commendation, for it is a most powerful penetrating, and certain remedy for pain of all kinds. Take no substitute.

A DOZEN LITTLE THINGS

Count in the jauntiness of a shirt waist, yet most makers think them insignificant—if they think of them at all.

We see to it that the little things are neither skipped nor slighted. We buy off makers whose reputation has grown on careful, painstaking work; whose patterns are up to the hour, whose choice of material is in the line of the best taste and the best style.

No, not a cent more to pay because these Shirt Waists are just right—not a cent more than you'd be asked for the boggy, sloppy kinds in the stores that keep them. Very likely our prices are lower. There is no percentage of loss from bad bills or bad methods that we are forced to sprinkle over the goods that are paid for.

We will mention but one line here—but its to your interest to see them and others of our family of Blouses.

A smart lot of designs in Blues, Helios, Pinks Fawns, etc. Some are effective chain stripes and others broken line stripes, others broken checks and plaids—pointed yokes, pleated backs and double stitched.

Materials are American Percales that will wash

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7, 1899.

THE STRIKE.

The Local Men Still Out and No Change in the Situation.

There are none of the local trackmen at work to-day, except one who is in the yards here. This man was out in the first instance, but did not quit work with the other men when the strike was resumed yesterday.

The local men held a meeting last night and discussed matters. They will proceed quietly and, with the general sympathy which is their's, they hope to win ultimately. They were loyal to their brotherhood and quit work as soon as word came that the strike was to be resumed in consequence of some of the men not being taken back and the repudiation by the G T R authorities of any agreement to arbitrate.

Nothing new has developed in the situation to-day. The general opinion seems to be that the railway made a mistake in not meeting the men in arbitration as proposed.

BATTALION NOTES.

The regular Tuesday parade of the battalion was held last evening. It is satisfactory to note that the number of recruits is growing.

On next Tuesday evening the battalion band will attend the parade and discourse music. This will enliven the evening and is hoped to be an attraction for more men to turn out. It will also probably play on every second Tuesday following.

The following orders were issued:

SYMPATHY FOR THE TRACKMEN

RESOLUTION PASSED AT THE MEETING OF THE BOARD OF TRADE

Expressing the Hope That the G T R Authorities Would Grant the Demand of the Men—The Speeches on the Subject—Other Business at the Board Meeting.

The Board of Trade had an interesting meeting last night. There was a fair attendance of members and an interesting discussion took place. Resolutions were passed regarding the inspection of Manitoba wheat and regarding the Grand Trunk trackmen's strike and action was taken regarding a technical education conference.

Mr John Carnegie, president, occupied the chair, and there were also present Messrs J H Burnham, D W Dumble, B Shortly, J A McCaig, B A, R C McHarris, Macfarlane Wilson, D Morrison, Ed Dawson, W E Conway, J W Butcher, A H Stratton, R Fair, R R Philip, F D Kerr, A J McClellan, T E Bradburn, M L Henry, Wm Might, T Q Quartermaine, secretary, and others.

The communications were read. One of these, from the Ontario Millers' Association, referred to the present system of the inspection of Manitoba wheat and asked the Board to endorse a memorial which is to be presented to the Government petitioning that the wheat be inspected in Ontario.

A communication of some length on this subject was received from Mr C B McAllister. He endorsed the resolution of the Millers' Association and regretted that he could not be present to assist the Board in the matter.

Mr J H Burnham stated that the matter had been discussed at some length in the newspapers and had awakened considerable interest. He regarded the present system of inspection as a swindle. This was generally known. The people in the Old Country have objected to the mixing of the grain. It is evidently a case where a few people with a good thing are determined to exploit it to their own benefit, no matter whether trade may be ruined or not.

Mr Dumble differed somewhat. The Board had not studied the matter thoroughly and should not support the resolution without more investigation. Still prompt action was necessary, and if the Board was willing to support the Ontario Millers' Association it might be well to support the resolution which had been received. The inspection of exports was a matter of great importance and should be honest and reliable.

It was moved by Mr J H Burnham, seconded by Mr R C McHarris, that in view of the illegal impropriety in the inspection of Manitoba wheat and in view of the consequent detriment to the good name of Canada, it is desirable that the Dominion Parliament be memorialized to investigate the said inspection with a view to the adoption of a proper and reliable standard.—Carried.

GRAND TRUNK STRIKE.

The Grand Trunk trackmen's strike next came up for discussion. Mr Dumble questioned the wisdom of dealing with the strike. He was under the impression that the question was in an unsettled condition.

Mr F D Kerr made an eloquent appeal for action on behalf of the strikers. If the matter was in an unsettled condition it was the best time to interfere. An honest day's labor was entitled to an honest day's pay. 97 cents is too little. The C P R pays $1.25 a day to its trackmen and no man could say that this was too much. Besides the injustice to the trackmen there was the matter of great danger to the travelling public. A man who can raise a family honorably on 97 cents a day is a wonder. Everybody should show their sympathy for the strikers and the Board should as a body express their's. The men had shown their willingness to return to work and had been deceived. No time could be more opportune for the expression of sympathy. Why rush to the help of the millers of Ontario and the people of England unless something were done for the laborers of Ontario. Mr Kerr's remarks were received with warm applause.

Mr J H Burnham took the same stand. Knowing the standard of living in Ontario no man could live at 97 cents a day. The Grand Trunk might say that under the law of competition they might get men at 97 cents a day, but why breed native Galicians as well as import them.

Mr R C McHarris stated that while some of the men might receive 97 cents a day, there were others receiving more.

Mr Dumble stated that the ordinary men received 97 or 98 cents a day. This had been stated everywhere and had not been denied. He also stated that the sympathy of the entire community seemed to be with the strikers, especially in view of the increased earnings of the railway companies and the increased prosperity of the country generally. He feared also that the company was showing some vindictiveness in refusing some of the strikers employment. It would be well to show the company that the Board disapproved of sweating the men and of sticking for the last cent. (Applause).

The following resolution was moved by Mr Kerr, seconded by Mr Dumble and carried unanimously:—

That the strike of the trackmen in the ODD OLD GERMAN BARON.

He Withdrew Himself From Society and Built a Hut in the Branches of a Tree.

In the neighborhood of the "House in the Woods," where the Czar's peace conference will meet, there lives an eccentric baron. His title of baron is not assumed, for he is really of noble blood.

During the reign of the old King William 60 years or so ago this Baron von Hyussen held the post of chamberlain at the court, and was one of the gayest dogs among the gilded youth of his time. It has been rumored that he and his royal master carried out many a reckless escapade. Suddenly in the midst of his pleasures he withdrew himself entirely from the society in which he was such a prominent figure, went deep into one of his forests, spent a month in putting up a house among the branches of a tree, and then, after discharging his servants and selling all his possessions, he said good-by to the world and has seldom or never spoken to anyone since.

The home which this eccentric old man built for himself is a shanty ten feet in height, eight feet broad and ten deep. It stands high up among the branches of a great oak in the very thickest part of the forest.

On one of the few times when he was known to speak to anyone, he said that his house was cool in summer, being protected by the green roof, and was not too cold in winter, and that far from being dissatisfied with his present mode of living, he would not exchange his hut for any or all of the magnificent palaces he had been in during his former life.

He reaches his odd home by a ladder, but no one else is ever permitted to climb into that tree. He has no friends and is not on visiting terms with his relatives.

When, 15 years ago, he moved up among the trees, the servants he then employed brought to the nest a small folding-bed, a rocking-chair, a tiny table, a cooking stove and a safe. These things are known to be in the shanty—whether there is anything more, besides the Baron's fierce watchdog, nobody knows.

It is fairly certain, however, that Baron van Hyussen keeps considerable money in his cottage, for he is not only a wealthy man, but such a miser as would not let a dollar of his money out of his sight.

Shooting is the only pleasure he allows himself, and, being the owner of the forest where he lives, he provides all the meat for his table. Wonderful stories are in circulation respecting the man's skill as a crack shot. Maybe that is one reason why he never yet was molested by burglars or robbers.

Sure Symptom of Lunacy.

Dr. Burton Ward, after a long experience in the treatment of cases of insanity, says that there is one infallible symptom by which the question whether a person is or is not insane can be determined. Let a person speak over so rationally and act over so sedately, if his or her thumbs remain inactive there is no doubt of insanity. Lunatics seldom use their thumbs in writing, drawing or saluting.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "Or Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

There came a day when he entered brusquely the room where the young wife sat, and told her the crisis had come—they were ruined. He had only a few pounds left in the world. They must leave the villa, and take two small rooms in the city somewhere, where lodgings were cheap. He showed her all he had, and asked her if she would write to Sir Rupert now.

He looked so desperate, so hard, that her heart went cold with an unknown fear. She dreaded refusing, yet would never consent.

"Will you write?" he asked, doggedly. "By this time next week we shall have neither food or money! The price of my commission is all gone! Will you write?"

"I can not, Lyster!" she said, quietly raising her fair, patient face to his.

He struck it—leaving a red mark on the white cheek! Struck the face her father had been wont to kiss so tenderly! the face Rupert Ducre carried shrined in his heart! He was beside himself with anger at her refusal.

She did not cry out or weep, or fling herself on the ground. Her lips turned a shade paler, and a shadow fell over her eyes. She only said to herself, over and over again, that God had punished her—her sin had found her out.

He was a little ashamed and sorry and bent over her to make some excuse. To the day of his death, Lyster Ayrton never forgot the glance she turned upon him—so full of the dignity of despair!

In less than a week the squire's daughter had left the pretty villa, and found her home in two very dingy rooms in Pentonville. Here some of the realities of life came to her for the first time. She realised vulgar cares: she learned what it was to want money, and have none; to be hungry and not find enough to eat; to feel faint, sick, and weary, yet not to obtain relief; to be dunned by small tradesmen and insulted by wealthier ones; to tremble at the sound of her landlady's voice; and, when things came to the worst the petted darling of Glynn Castle walked through the dark, cold streets at night, seeking some place where she could sell a dress before she could purchase food.

She would have borne it all with smiles had she loved Lyster as she once did. But her misery was not lessened by love; her solitude was never lightened by the sight of a loving face, or the sound of a loving voice.

The day came at last when Lyster Ayrton, worn and haggard, stood before her, and told her he must leave England. She never asked why, and never knew. He asked for the jewels he had once flung so contemptuously from him. She gave them up. She had been keeping them for some such crisis as this, and it had come at last!

"He would sell them," he said; "and the money would pay their passage over to Australia."

She asked, tremblingly, if she were to go with him, and he said "Yes." She had helped to ruin him—now she must help him work. She had better set about packing at once, for he intended sailing in five days' time.

She wrote a despairing letter home, for her strength and courage gave way, and her broken heart was revealed in every line.

There came an answer from the squire, telling her he sent his pardon, and his blessing to go with her over the wide waters, but his vow he could not break. From Irene came a loving letter, that was like balm to the aching heart. It contained, besides, a check for fifty pounds—money the elder sister had saved by degrees for the child she loved so well. It was meant for herself, but Lyster clutched it eagerly; the very sight of it did him good—it seemed a promise of more to come. He enjoyed himself thoroughly for two days and two nights with it; made Mlle Coralie a parting present of a pretty opal ring; and never noticed, until they were on board, that his wife had no decent shoes to wear.

So they left England, and went to begin another life in the world called "New."

She went without hope. She knew him too well for that, now. She saw before her long years of pain, of suffering, and sorrow. But the childish heart was growing strong, and learning to place its hopes on that bright home "where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest."

CHAPTER XX.

"I HAVE NO DEAD ASHES OF LOVE TO GIVE."

Sixteen months had passed since Sybil Ayrton fled from her home, leaving gloom and desolation behind her. Nothing was changed there. The squire went his daily rounds. Irene fulfilled her usual routine of duties. Nothing was changed—yet a dark cloud lay over Glynn and all in it.

As he rode over his farms and among his tenantry, the squire no longer met his humble neighbors with a kindly smile. The gray head was bent beneath its load of trouble; when his eyes were raised to the face of man, woman or child, each read bitter, gnawing anxiety there.

He had never known a happy moment since she left him, and never would again. His proud, beautiful darling, whose golden head used to droop so lovingly on his breast was always before him. At night, in his dreams, he felt the clasp of the tender arms, the touch of the sweet, warm lips. He would wake, crying out that he had had a bad dream, then remember it was all true.

People respected his grief and seldom intruded upon it; they knew how the squire loved her for whom the whole neighborhood mourned. They knew what had brought those deep lines on the brow, and round the grave lips. They knew why the squire so seldom spoke, and never smiled.

He never knew afterward how he had endured that part of his life; how the summer days and winter evenings passed—how he bore the silence, the anxiety, and suspense.

There was one person Squire Jocelyn never pardoned, and that was Lady Marche. They had one most stormy interview, and when it was ended nothing could induce the squire to speak to or look at her, or endure her name mentioned.

He reproached her most bitterly. He accused her of shameless carelessness in bringing a man like Captain Ayrton to her house.

In vain Lady Marche wept, and said she had met him at her brother's, where every one seemed to think so much of him; that there had been a rumor of his engagement to Lady Helena Pierrepoint, Lord Severne's daughter. He would not hold her excused. She was a mother, with daughters of her own to shield and guard; she had done a grievous wrong in bringing such a man into her house. He told her his daughter's ruin lay at her door, and that it was women like her, who overlooked vice for the sake of a handsome face and pleasing manners who really demoralized society.

Lady Marche received a lecture that day she never forgot; it did her good. She was a wiser and better woman after it.

No one felt more sorry than she did for the tragedy that had blighted the life of the squire's best-loved child. She owned afterward that she had been wrong; that if she had made inquiries over Captain Ayrton, before asking him to Ling, she should have discovered that he had lost caste among those with whom she had seen him associate.

Lady Helena Pierrepoint, for instance, far from being engaged to him, had resented his attentions most haughtily; and at her request Lord Severne had forbidden him the house. Lady Marche had heard the first rumor, not its contradiction, and never stopped to ask if it were true.

Perhaps the greatest change of all had come to Sir Rupert Ducre. His youth seemed to have died away. He never spoke of his sorrow to any human being—not even the squire—it was an untold secret between them. But the squire knew it well, as though Sir Rupert had spoken of nothing else.

He spent the greater part of his time at Glynn. The squire became quite dependent on him; he loved him, and treated him in all respects as though he had been his own son.

Violet remained at Glynn some time, then went on a long visit to Mrs. Travers. She grieved most sincerely for them all, but she could not help hoping that now, perhaps, Sir Rupert might seek the solace of her love.

They never forgot the morning poor Sybil's letter came to Glynn. She had not meant to complain; she was too brave, too true to utter a word against her husband, let him do what he would; but, unconsciously, her sorrow was told in every line—in the passionate pleading for pardon—in the despairing cry for home and love—in the bitter, heart-breaking words of farewell. It was a letter that would have brought tears into the eyes of the strongest man who read it, for she who had written it was young and helpless.

Sir Rupert was at Glynn when the letter came. The squire opened it with trembling hands, and then gave it him to read.

"The cursed villain!" said the old man. "As sure as I live, Rupert, he ill-uses her. No happy wife—no happy woman—ever wrote so!"

"If I thought he did," cried Rupert. "I would follow him to the world's end, and hunt him like a hound! If he loves her, and makes her happy, God bless her in her choice; if he does not, I will revenge her."

"We shall never know," said the squire, sadly; "she is gone so far away—she is so young and so fragile. I shall never see her face again, Rupert—never, never, more!"

(To be continued).

The Power Behind Finland's Ruin.

General Alexei Nicolaievitch Kuropatkin, the genius who has engineered the usurpation of Finland, is probably the most faithful, the most trusted and the most powerful servant of the Czar. Years ago, when he was a young man, he was sent to Turkestan with the Russian advance and for a long time he was engaged in fighting and winning promotion for himself. After having served his apprenticeship in the east, he returned to Europe, resumed his studies in 1874, and while in Paris won the Legion of Honor, the first Russian officer to do so. Next year he went to Kokand and fought around the Pamirs, in the country of Khubis Khan. He rode 2,500 miles on horseback, came back, wrote a book and won the gold medal of the Geographical Society. In the Turkish war he distinguished himself nobly and came out of it a colonel. Slowly he rose in the service of the Czar, trusted with important undertakings and advised with upon every movement of the army. Last year he was appointed Minister of War of Russia, and in all the working out of the recent Finland usurpation his able and strong hand is seen everywhere.

GENERAL KUROPATKIN.

No Hope in 2078.

Statisticians claim that the earth will not support more than 5,994,000,000 people. The present population is estimated at 1,467,000,000, the increase being eight per cent. each decade. At that rate the utmost limit will be reached in the year 2078.

STRIKE ON AGAIN.

Toronto Men Say They Will Win This Time—Some Have Other Jobs—Kicks Registered in Montreal.

Toronto, June 7.—The strike of the Grand Trunk trackmen is still on, and the men have fully recovered from the shock which they received on discovering on Monday morning how little there was in the report that they were all to go back. It now appears that the three members of Parliament who went to Montreal on Saturday had returned to the capital with a mistaken idea of what General Manager Hays intended to do with the men. Very few of the strikers accepted the company's conditions to apply for reinstatement individually and return to work. The executive at Montreal have called the entire force out again, and it now looks as if the fight between the men and the company will be carried on to the bitter end.

At the strikers' headquarters, 96 Tecumseth street, the only message received was the following from Chairman William Pole:

"Hays has played us false. Call out all men again. Will send instructions by registered letter."

The letter referred to in the message will arrive this morning. The men seem content with the present state of affairs, and are prepared to hold out any length of time. They say they feel disgusted at Manager Hays' action, and intend to show that official what trackmen are.

Kicks Registered.

Montreal, June 7.—Chairman Pole, Secretary Harris, Organizer Lowe and other members of the trackmen's executive were in conference last evening, considering what steps to take in view of the men's act in refusing to go back to work. Telegrams have been pouring in on the executive, protesting against the way in which they managed affairs, and there is apparently a feeling amongst the men that they have not been treated properly. The men were apparently led to believe by the executive that the Grand Trunk had made an agreement to consider the men's grievances, and all they had to do was to go back to work and get their places. The Grand Trunk management absolutely deny that any such agreement was made, and that the understanding was that after the places could be taken back. When this was found to be the case, after what the men were led to believe by their executive, there was naturally a good deal of bad feeling. The executive has now to face an ugly position, and it seems they are going to square themselves with the men by again ordering the strike on. According to members of the executive, the strike will be on again to-day.

More Complicated Now.

Things in connection with the Grand Trunk labor troubles appear more complicated now than ever before. Messrs. Pole and Lowe state emphatically that when the members of Parliament left here for Ottawa everyone understood that all the men were to be taken back, and that since then the company have broken faith with the men.

What Mr. McGuigan Says.

General Superintendent McGuigan was also seen about the new state of affairs, and asked if he had any statement to make.

"No pledges were broken," he replied, "because no pledges were given."

This is all he would say.

TRYING TO CHEAT RADCLIFFE.

Donald Perrier Makes a Determined Effort to Commit Suicide.

Vancouver, B.C., June 7.—Donald Perrier, the condemned murderer, made a determined attempt to commit suicide yesterday morning. Every indication goes to show he was aided in the attempt by some person unknown. Perrier was sentenced to be hanged on May 30 for the murder of his former paramour, Jennie Anderson. On entering Perrier's cell at New Westminster yesterday, the officials found Perrier bleeding from a gash in the abdomen and from another in the left wrist. The prisoner's bed was a sea of blood. Although he was just conscious, he was unable to speak. Medical men on their arrival did all they could to arrest the flow of blood, but they decline to express an opinion as to the possibility of recovery until they can ascertain the nature of the wound in the abdomen. If it severed the intestines it will be almost certain to prove fatal. The cut in the wrist severed the main artery. Perrier is quite conscious, but is very weak. He has not spoken since he was found.

HON. HUGH JOHN MACDONALD

Will Tour Prairie Province and Work to Overthrow Greenway.

Winnipeg, June 7.—The Conservatives intend to hold a grand rally here about the end of June, and Hon. Hugh John Macdonald afterwards will make a stumping tour of the province. He is in good fighting trim and the Conservatives are hopeful that his trip may doubly inspire his following with enthusiasm.

The Transfer of School Lands.

Premier Greenway, speaking of his mission to Ottawa in connection with the transfer of school lands to the province, stated that the proposition presented to the Federal Ministers had been favorably received, but it was, in view of the prolonged session of the Dominion House, doubtful whether the Government would have time to get the matter before Parliament this session, no matter how anxious they were to meet the wishes of Manitoba. However, he hoped that ultimately there would be a satisfactory issue of the question.

Cookeville Assault Case.

Cookeville, Ont., June 7.—The preliminary examination of James Mallough, who brutally assaulted his wife last Saturday night, was held at Dixie last evening. Mrs. Mallough declined to appear against him and Mallough was taken back to Brampton jail. It is understood no action will be taken except in regard to his sanity.

THE MARKETS.

Chicago Wheat Dropped Two Cents and Is Now Below 75—Liverpool Futures Also Declined—Quotations.

Liverpool, June 7.—Wheat futures declined 1⅝ per cental yesterday.

Chicago, June 7.—Wheat yesterday opened down a fraction from Monday's close, but firmed up on fresh crop damage reports from both sides of the Atlantic. Futures broke sharply later in the afternoon, however, when Bradstreet's announced last week's increase in the world's visible wheat supply to have been 1,963,000 bushels. Prices went two cents below Monday's final figures and closed near the low point for the session.

From the Terrible Itching, Burning Tortures of ...

Eczema on the Scalp

Some of the cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment are more like miracles than anything else. The case recorded here was one of the worst ever brought to the attention of Toronto's best physicians, and when doctors gave up all hope of recovery Dr. Chase's Ointment was successful in producing a perfect cure.

Mr. James Scott, 156 Wright Ave., Toronto, states: "My boy Tom, aged ten, was for nearly three years afflicted with a bad form of Eczema of the scalp, which was very unsightly and resisted all kinds of remedies and doctor's treatment. His head was in a terrible state. We had to keep him from school, and at times his head would bleed, and the child would scream with agony. For two and a half years we battled with it in vain, but at last found a cure in Dr. Chase's Ointment. About five boxes were used. The original sores dried up, leaving the skin in its normal condition. To say it is a pleasure to testify to the wonderful merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment is putting it very mildly."

TESTIMONIALS

Allister, March 1st, 1898.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully. JAMES CONWAY.

Sheddon, February 28th, 1898.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

GEO. BURNHAM,

The report was adopted.

SAVING BANKS SYSTEM.

Dr. Burnham presented the report of the special committee to consider a savings bank system as follows:

Gentlemen,—A special committee appointed at the last meeting of the Board to consider the advisability of establishing a system of Savings banks in connection with the Public schools, beg leave to report

That the committee have carefully investigated the matter including the evidence furnished by reports of the success of the system in other places where it has been adopted and in many in which it has been enforced for a number of years.

This success is represented by the formation of habits of thrift and saving at the impressionable period of child-life and influence in a most beneficial way the citizenship of the Province. Instances are frequent in which the savings of the child or children have come to the rescue of the family when the bread winner has been prostrated by illness or out of work.

Under the system, properly administered, there is no rivalry between children of the school, because one has no means of knowing the amount to the credit of the other unless voluntarily disclosed; the importunities by children of parents for money for deposit is within the control of the parents themselves. The intention of the system is to provide a safe depository for the earnings of children and for the trifling sums often given by parents to spend on childish luxuries; the encroachment on school time is extremely limited, being only ten or fifteen minutes per week, and the cost of opening the system is merely nominal, stationery being the chief item.

Your committee would therefore recommend that the system of Savings Banks be introduced into the Public schools on September 1st next, and that this committee be empowered to make the necessary arrangements for giving their recommendation effect.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

GEO. BURNHAM,
Chairman.

When the adoption for the report was moved, Mr. Bamford asked for further information regarding the system. In reply Dr. Burnham said the money was collected by the teachers, and entry of it made in a pass book of the child, and deposited by the principal of the school in trust for the pupils in a chartered bank. The bank books are kept by the principal until a child is leaving school or at the holiday time when the book is given to the child and the money can be drawn.

The committee would safe-guard all interests in making arrangements for the system's inauguration.

Mr. Hill, in referring to safe-guards which could be taken to make the system satisfactory, suggested that the matter be referred to the Finance committee as well as the Special committee to arrange.

This suggestion was accepted and the report was adopted.

A FEW MOTIONS.

Mr. McBain moved, seconded by Mr. Bamford, that the Department be requested to have the Forth Form examinations held in Peterborough as heretofore.—Carried.

The payment of the accounts of Thos. Williams, $13, and T. H. Shepherd, $100, was confirmed on motion of Messrs. Hill and McBain.

Mr. McBain moved, seconded by Mr. Hill, that the chairman of the Property committee be empowered to call for tenders for making the necessary improvements in the closets at the Central school and report at the next meeting.—Carried.

Mr. Hill verbally reported that the committee would be prepared to report on the cadet corps at the next meeting.

A communication from the Windsor Board was read regarding some innovations they proposed making and asking if the Peterborough Board could give any information. The matter was referred to the Supervision committee and the Inspector.

On motion the payment of an account for a map bought from A. J. Cameron was authorized.

The meeting then adjourned.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

The Electric Current Runs Through a House on Parnell-st.

During the storm that arose yesterday afternoon about four o'clock the house of Mr. Wm. Lloyd, 24 Parnell-st., was struck by lightning. The current struck a chimney at the end of the house, shattered it, and followed down the pipe, damaging the stove and passing through the floor into the cellar where it made a big hole. The route of the current was plainly marked, and the stroke was evidently a powerful one.

Mrs. Lloyd had just stepped out the back door and in so doing probably saved her life. As it was, standing just outside, she received a severe shock and was quite stunned for a time. She had a very narrow escape.

The lightning was very severe last night between 12 and 1 o'clock and was no yellow stuff but the pure electric blue thing. It was accompanied by a strong wind.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

REGULAR MEETING OF THE ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

Communications and Accounts Disposed of and a Budget of General Business Discussed.

Ashburnham Council met in regular monthly session Monday night. There were present Reeve Adams in the chair and Councillors Craig, Rutherford, Sheridan and Pollock.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

Communications were received from a number of villagers complaining that Geo. Stevens' junk yard is a nuisance and asked that steps be taken to ensure its abatement.

From Messrs. McFee and Scott asking permission to open a drain from the south side of creek on Brown-st. along to Elizabeth-st., thence on the south side of the latter street to their respective houses, and agreeing to close it in again to the satisfaction of the street inspector.

From Peterborough Light and Power company, re electric light contract, and expressing its willingness to make changes asked for, and to place a lamp at wharf during season of navigation, provided the expense therefore is borne by the corporation.

A petition was received from a number of ratepayers asking for extension of waterworks on Robinson-st.

Another petition was presented complaining of lack of fire protection and asking that the watermains be extended from corner of Douro and Stewart-sts., along Douro-st., thence north on Concession-st. to Macfarlane-st. and that a hydrant be set at corner of Macfarlane and Concession-sts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Councillor Rutherford moved, seconded by Councillor Sheridan, that the request of Messrs. McFee and Scott to open a drain on Brown-st. be granted, provided they make good any damage done to water or gas mains, or any other existing drains, and also that the street be left in as good condition as before.—Carried.

In reference to the petition for extension of fire protection, Councillor Craig moved, seconded by Councillor Pollock,—That a special meeting be called for Friday evening next to consider the water works extension question.—Carried.

In the matter of the complaint made against Geo. Stevens' junk yard, some of the Council thought the Board of Health had neglected their duty in not exercising their authority by fining Mr. Stevens, and decided that it would be time enough for Council to act after Board of Health's extreme measures to secure abatement of the nuisance have proved futile.

Councillor Pollock moved, seconded by Councillor Craig,—That more gravel be put on Oxford-st., and some clay on Stewart-st., opposite Mr. Clark's.—Carried.

Councillor Sheridan moved, seconded by Councillor Rutherford,—That the drain at Mr. Boswell's on Cameron-st. be fixed, the cost not to exceed $6 or $7.—Carried.

Councillor Craig moved, seconded by Councillor Pollock,—That the Street Inspector be instructed to have sidewalks blocked up where required.—Carried.

Councillor Pollock moved, seconded by Councillor Sheridan,—That Rose-st., Mr Thompson's to Mr. Davidson's be repaired.—Carried.

At this juncture Councillor Sheridan said he would like to know the Council's opinion on extending the watering of Mark-st. He thought it rather shabby that the watering cart should stop at the brow of the hill. It was finally decided to leave the matter over till it seen that Mr. Valois can perform the work he has under contract satisfactorily.

Councillor Pollock moved, seconded by Councillor Rutherford,—That the hill in front of St. Luke's church be cut down and a crossing be laid, that a block crossing at Mark-st. church be constructed and that side-walk at east side of Stewart-st. be removed.—Carried.

Councillor Rutherford moved, seconded by Councillor Sheridan,—That Mr Fowler be given contract for building sidewalk on Concession-st. for the sum of $12, the same to be done to satisfaction of Street Inspector.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

STRIKERS APPRECIATE

The Expression and Practical Demonstration of Sympathy at St. John's.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—At a meeting of the local G T R trackmen who are now out on strike, held last evening, I was instructed by resolution to return through the press the sincere thanks of the men to Rev J C Davidson, Rector of St. John's church, and his congregation for the kindly sympathy expressed with us and our cause, and also for the practical demonstration of that sympathy shown in the collection taken in our behalf at last Sunday's service. The trackmen have received many expressions of warm sympathy in their present trouble, and none was more appreciated than that given by the Rector and congregation of St. John's. The men, while standing out for what they deem is only fair and just, will endeavor to conduct themselves in a manner that will show them worthy of this sympathy which has been extended to them.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,
Yours respectfully,
C Norris,
Chairman Local Committee.

LEG BROKEN.

John Pallin, Blacksmith at Jermyn, Ontario, Kicked by a Horse.

Mr. John Pallin, postmaster and blacksmith, at Jermyn, Ontario, met with an unfortunate accident a few days ago, which resulted in his right leg being broken just above the knee. A colt owned by Mr J Laing, M P, while being shod by Mr Pallin kicked and broke the limb. Under the care of Dr Harrison, of Keene, the patient is doing remarkably well. During the time that Mr Pallin will not be able to work in his shop he has secured the services of a reliable and efficient blacksmith from Norwood and all work coming in will be promptly attended to.

LINDSAY'S WRITE-UP.

The Town's Little Muddle with the Journal of Commerce.

Lindsay Post:—The desire of our city fathers to see their pictures in print led them to close a bargain a few weeks ago with a trade paper published in Quebec, and having practically no circulation in Western Ontario. Through some bungling, or owing to the laudable desire of the photographer to make the pictures presentable, the cabinets arrived at the office of publication some days late, and the item appeared unadorned except by the good-looking countenance of the Napoleon of finance. As a result of the "chaffing" administered the council ordered Clerk Knowlson to return the batch of 200 papers and the following letter since received shows that a lawsuit looms on the horizon. It's all very interesting and should be instructive to our rate-payers. The town cannot be poor, as Alderman Horn alleges:

Montreal, May 29th, 1899.

Mr. F Knowlson, Town Clerk, Lindsay, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Your favor of the 22nd; the papers were printed according to the instructions given us by Mr. Goffe, who obtained them at Lindsay. We cannot accept this package. I think that you owe us an explanation. In our over 25 years experience this is the first time that anything of the kind has taken place.—Yours, etc.,

M. S. FOLEY.

THE ORIGINAL.

There is only one remedy known that has a combined action on the kidneys and liver and cures the most complicated ailments of these delicate filtering organs, and that is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pill, the original kidney pill. This world famous kidney and liver cure has an enormous sale in all parts of Canada and the United States.

The Trackmen's Situation.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—With your usual sympathy, we desire to call your attention to the fact that our oldest foreman, Mr. G Clarke, living in town and on George-st., is the only member of the Union at work to-day, and he has mislead many would-be casuality laborers in this way. Casuality-laborers seeing him at work have asked him if the trouble was over, and he has answered yes, thus leading them astray.

We as a body are sorry for Clarke, and we hope no harm will come to him, but if he persists in working after this letter or statement appears he will not have our sympathy at least.

We now desire to make things plain and our position clear. We went on strike on the 22nd ult., and we had orders to resume duty by the Executive committee on the 6th inst., and we were told that all would be right. But now Mr. Hays has backed down and consequently there is nothing left but to continue the strike. We know, sir, we have your sympathy and we are also sure that you will make our position clear as far as this section is concerned. We shall also leave it in your able hands to deal with Clark in your own way.

Yours etc.,
TRACKMAN.

Two Men Boiled Alive.

Buffalo, N.Y., June 7.—By the caving in of a floor in Moffat's Brewery yesterday, two men, Gus Zube and Andrew Louden, were precipitated into a huge vat of boiling beer. Before they could be gotten out they were almost boiled. At the hospital it is said that both men will die.

Scuffle and Knife Wound.

Brockville, Ont., June 7.—As a result of a scuffle yesterday between two employes in J. Smart & Co.'s foundry, a man named McKinley is laid up with an ugly wound in the thigh, inflicted with a knife by a lad named Pitt. McKinley was taken to the hospital.

When Oliver Cromwell Peremptorily Dissolved the Long Parliament.

Sir Peter Wentworth was the only man who dared to rise amid Cromwell's tempest of wrath, says Samuel Harden Church in The Atlantic. He said that this was the first time he had ever heard such unbecoming language given to the parliament and that it was the more horrid in that it came from their servant—their servant whom they had so highly trusted and obliged.

But when Wentworth had gone thus far, Cromwell clapped on his hat and interrupted him with, "Come, come, we have had enough of this!" He walked furiously up and down the floor. "I will put an end to your prating," he cried in a high voice. He stamped his feet upon the floor. No man had ever seen the like of such rage in a parliament before. "It is not fit that you should sit here any longer. You are no parliament! I say you are no parliament!" To an officer he cried, "Call them in! Call them in!" And the grim companions of his battles entered with eyes alert and guns ready and waited his further orders.

"I say you are no parliament!" They are on their feet now, their faces blazing with amusement. Sir Harry Vane gravely speaks: "This is not honest; yea, it is against morality and common honesty." Cromwell is all passion. "Sir Harry Vane! Sir Harry Vane! The Lord deliver me from Sir Harry Vane!" He glares on Tom Challoner and says, "Some of you are drunkards!" His eye lights on Harry Marten, and he cries, "Some of you are lewd livers, living in open contempt of God's commandments!" His flashing eyes pass from face to face, and he says: "Some of you are corrupt, unjust persons; scandalous to the profession of the gospel!" As the once great parliament stands cowering before him he thunders out their final doom, "Depart, I say!"

They began to go out. There was no gainsaying the man. They understood then perhaps why he had never been defeated in his battles. His eye fell upon the mace, the emblem of authority, but it aroused no respect in his mind. "Take away that bauble," he said to one of his soldiers. Lenthall still sat in the speaker's chair. His dignity was imperturbable, and when Cromwell ordered him to come down he tarried. Harrison then took him by the hand and helped him down, and he vanished.

Mosquitoes on the Warpath.

Kingston, Ja., June 8.—Mail advices from the Mosquito Coast say the Indians there have rebelled against the Government of Nicaragua, are taking the warpath and are sending a delegation to invite Prince Clarence to head the rising, which, it is added, will probably receive financial support from the foreign residents of the Mosquito Coast. Prince Clarence is now at Kingston, but he recently declared he would never break faith with the British Government, preferring his easy retirement here to active life as King of the Mosquito Coast.

IT'S ON TIGHTER THAN EVER

Was the Statement of the Trackmen's Executive.

"We're Quite Satisfied With It," Says the Grand Trunk Management—Trackmen's Executive Says No Settlement Will Be Considered Unless It Is in Writing—Alleged in Toronto That the Company Is Trying to Settle.

Montreal, June 8.—"The strike is on again tighter than ever."—The Strikers' Committee.

"We are quite satisfied with everything."—The Grand Trunk.

That is how matters stood last night in connection with the difficulties between the Grand Trunk and the Trackmen's Union. The strike inaugurated by the latter more than two weeks ago and called off on Saturday last was yesterday morning officially declared on again, and the men once more summoned to lay down their tools and quit work. Mr. Lowe says that when it was found that some were accepted and others rejected, indignant protests were telegraphed to the executive, and they responded to these by issuing an official notification from headquarters ordering a resumption of the strike. A call at the offices of the Grand Trunk revealed the fact that the management regarded the strike as over. The men who have come out the second time have nothing to look for from the company, who say that, with the new labor they have secured during the time the strike was in active operation and those who returned to work and have remained faithful, they have practically all the men required for their purpose at present.

A Settlement in Writing.

The executive committee of the Grand Trunk trackmen claim that nearly all the men on the system have again gone on strike. The executive say that no settlement will now be considered unless it is in writing. The Grand Trunk officials apparently do not attach much importance to the latest developments, and say they can get all the men they require. They deny most emphatically that any promises were given.

Now Trying to Make Terms.

Toronto, June 8.—Late last night there were a few new developments in the end of the Grand Trunk Railway trackmen's strike which go to show that the officials are doing their utmost to get the men back again. All efforts so far have proved unavailing, and the men are still not at work. The men say here that, to their knowledge, not a man has resumed his work since the strike re-commenced, and that only 60 trackmen are patrolling the middle division.

The Men Had Their Eyes Opened.

James Imrie received the following telegrams yesterday from the executive committee in Montreal: "Yes, things going finely all over. Tell the boys this."

"Brothers turning out like bees. Hays helped more than hurt us. Will not deceive committee twice. Your response is gratifying; post us daily."

"Thanks. No return to work till signed and sealed, sure."

What the Officials Say.

The officials said yesterday that 60 per cent. of the trackmen on the middle division were back at work again. General Roadmaster Ferguson was sure that 400 men were on the middle division alone. That official said that the men were returning and the road was in a good condition.

CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION.

Manitoba Will Meet on June 27—Death of a Celebrated Character.

Winnipeg, June 8.—The Provincial Conservative convention will be held in this city on June 27, and will be composed of presidents and secretaries of district Conservative associations, candidates in the House and the provincial executive.

Death of Joseph Monkman.

A celebrated character, Joseph Monkman, who rescued the late Sir John Schultz and took him out of the country during the first Riel rebellion, died yesterday at Peguis. He was 89 years old.

Death of Augustin Daly.

Paris, June 8.—Mr. Augustin Daly, the well-known theatrical manager of New York and London, died suddenly yesterday afternoon. Mr. Daly's death was due to heart failure. Mr. Daly was born in Plymouth, North Carolina, July 20, 1838. For several seasons he managed the Grand Opera House in New York.

Had a Rib Broken.

Niagara Camp, June 8.—Only one accident of any moment has occurred, and the victim is Pte. Heffernan of the 3rd Dragoons, who was tethering his horse when the animal kicked him, and broke one of his ribs. He is getting along all right. The heat was intense yesterday, and there were several prostrations.

More Rioting in France.

Lyons, France, June 8.—Noisy demonstrations took place here yesterday, growing out of the Royalist affront to M. Loubet on the Auteuil race course last Sunday. The mob came into collision with police and many arrests were made.

STRIKE GROWING SERIOUS.

Mr. Maclean Brings the Matter Up in the House.

A Spirited Debate, in Which Many Things Are Cleared Up Somewhat—Messrs. Taylor and Fowell Put Themselves Right—All the Men, Unless They Were Criminals, Were to Go Back—Statements of Ministers.

Ottawa, June 8.—After the orders of the day being called in the House yesterday afternoon, Mr. W. F. Maclean rose to call attention to the trackmen's strike on the Grand Trunk, and was received with hearty applause from both sides of the House, this being the first occasion on which the hon. gentleman had addressed the House this session, his absence being due to a serious accident, which happened to him on the Sunday before the opening of the House.

Mr. Maclean on the Strike.

Mr. Maclean said: Before the orders of the day are called, I would like, in the public interest, and in the interest of public safety, to direct the attention of the Government and of the Minister of Railways and Canals to the present strike on the G.T.R. To that end I would like to read a statement that has been made this morning and published in the evening papers in connection with the event.

Mr. McKenny's Statement.

Mr. H. F. McKenny of this city, Grand Secretary of the United Brotherhood of Railway Trackmen, this morning issued the following statement in reference to the strike on the Grand Trunk Railway, which began on May 22nd, and has been in force since, except for a few hours on June 5th. In the course of the circular Mr. McKenny says:

"During this momentous struggle for fair living wages and humanitarian hours of duty, the men on the G.T.R. remained true and carefully guarded against any acts of lawlessness or any infringement of the statutory laws of Canada.

"We believe they have earned for themselves the respect and admiration of every fair-minded citizen by pursuing this course, and as ultimate victory is now assured, but the trackmen who only through long experience have acquired the work they perform have reached the conclusion that the company is only determined to defeat the Union, and is ignoring the prospect of passenger trains becoming derailed, which is likely to occur at any moment owing to the road being out of condition while it is not patrolled, the workmen watching for such irregularities.

"Recognizing the great risk that the shippers and the traveling public are subject to, the Union submitted a requisition to Sir Wilfrid Laurier asking that the differences between the company and the men be settled by arbitration. It was promised that the best arrangement possible should be made, but Mr. Wainwright afterwards intimated that the company desired to settle.

"Messrs. Taylor and Fowell, M.P.'s offered to act as mediators, and accompanied the deputation to Montreal, where Mr. Hays, General Manager of the G. T. R., guaranteed that the grievances of the men would be satisfactorily remedied.

"Believing him to be sincere the men were prepared to resume work, and the requisition for arbitration was withdrawn.

"On Monday morning when ready to go to work they were informed that no employment could be guaranteed them except an application was made, and even if this was done certain of them would be dismissed.

"The company now denies any agreement that all the men should be put to work, and the executive has consequently ordered another strike.

"We leave it to the people to determine if we are not justified in perpetuating the struggle against a corporation which by word and action shows itself unreliable."

Duty of the Government.

Now, Mr. Speaker, here is an instance where the leaders of a body of men seeking to have decent pay and decent hours accorded to them, say that faith has been broken with them by this great corporation. If that is the case and the men feel that faith has been broken with them, I think that the public safety is doubly endangered, and it is now the duty of the Government, and especially of the Minister of Railways and Canals, to interfere on behalf of the people of this country and to compel that great corporation immediately to consider the grievances of the men and to rectify them.

Standing on a Matter of Form.

The G.T.R. put forward the defence now that the men are simply a little out

THE Grand Trunk should have arbitrated and settled with its trackmen as proposed. Dignity on both sides could have been sustained and the trouble settled.

MAY the Toronto Conservatives always observe their decoration ceremonies on June 6th, and thereby keep green the memory of their Old Chieftain, Sir John Macdonald.

THE Mail and Empire makes a strong point when it says that Sir Charles Tupper, than whom no one living can speak with greater force or more intimate knowledge of Sir John Macdonald, for the two statesmen worked together on behalf of a united and progressive Canada, made the remark at the decoration ceremony of yesterday that had Sir John Macdonald lived he would have found his vindication in the tribute which his old opponents are paying to his policy to-day. It ought to be added that Sir Charles, whose principles were, and are, those of Sir John, happily remains with us to participate in a justification which is also his. Both Sir John and Sir Charles are amply revenged.

THE Conservative press is not the only section of the community that does not consider Mr Ogilvie's investigation satisfactory or his report as sufficient to vindicate the Government. The Ottawa Journal, an independent Liberal newspaper, puts the case in this forcible manner:—

"Such a report as Commissioner Ogilvie makes regarding the official troubles in the Yukon would be a crusher against the charges of mal-administration if made by an independent judicial tribunal.

"Made by a Government representative, the report will hardly by many be thought so conclusive, even though the representative be Mr Ogilvie, in whom we have all confidence.

"Mr Ogilvie should not have been placed in the position of having to investigate the report on charges reflecting on his friends, his colleagues, his relatives and his employers. Human nature is not cast iron."

IT is a grave mistake for any one to attempt to engender political feeling into the trackmen's strike owing to the fact that three Conservative members of Parliament interested themselves in an effort to effect a settlement of the difficulty between the trackmen and the railway authorities, and that their negotiations, which at first appeared to be successful, did not in the end prove satisfactory. The trackmen themselves cannot afford to take a political view of this matter. These men were animated by the best of intentions and acted at the request of some of the strikers. It was no selfish desire to make political capital that actuated them, and the attempt of Grits to make it appear so and to blame them for the "hitch" that occurred is as unfair and unjust as it is damaging and injurious to the betterment of present circumstances.

THE HAMADRYAD.

Reptile That Will Track You Down If You Kill Its Mate.

There is only one beast that will track you down to avenge the death of its mate, no matter how far you go, and that is a snake.

Moreover, it is the most terrible of all snakes, and the largest of the poisonous variety. Its name is the hamadryad. A bite from this reptile will kill the strongest man in two minutes and, of course, there is no remedy. No one bitten by a hamadryad has ever survived. It chiefly belongs to the far east.

There are generally two hamadryads. If there is one, and if you kill one of them the other will be on your track before long in all probability. Short of taking a ship across the sea, there is no way of escaping unless you watch for the snake and shoot it. It will follow you for miles for the chance of a stealthy stroke, and you may climb trees or mountains or ford rivers, but there is no way of evading the hamadryad. It is a sort of nightmare hunt to be chased by one, and when the chase begins either one or the other will have to die within a day or so. The mate of the slain never makes a mistake, but always kills the slayer of its companion, and him alone. This reptile grows to a length of 15 feet sometimes, and is fairly common in Malay and New Guinea. One scratch from its fangs is certain and instant death.

of form, and they are telling people privately that they are on duty. The G.T.R. people send me a message that they do intend to do something for the men and they do intend to pay them better wages, but that they object to the form in which the men are moving. Well, that is not a fair way to treat the public or the men. The men are only seeking their rights and if anything is to be conceded to them it ought to be conceded to them now, before the public safety is jeopardized. I hope that not only the Prime Minister, whose name is brought forward in this statement, will make a statement to the country to-day, but that also those members of Parliament whose names have been brought into this discussion, and who, I am told, alleged that the Grand Trunk Railway had broken faith with the men, will also make a statement, and that these statements will have the effect of bringing this dispute to an end and guaranteeing safety to the public in travelling over the lines of this company.

People Are Afraid.

I can state from my own observation that last week a distinguished man in this country, who is a great supporter of the G.T.R. and who always travels by that line, in coming to Ottawa thought that it was in the interest of his own safety to abandon the line he has always patronized in the past and to take the C.P.R. I know there are others who are feeling the same way. All these things go to show that the public think there is something wrong with the line and that there is more or less risk.

Government Should Interfere.

It is time, I think, that the Government should interfere. I may say that only last Saturday I was travelling from Hamilton to Toronto on a crowded train when some passengers were on the platform, and a signal was made to stop the train by people at a way station, which had been left there by some mistake. The signal was taken to mean, by the engineer and the conductor, that a rail had been removed and that an accident was likely to happen, and a very worthy young man of the city of Toronto was so frightened at what was taking place between the officers of the train that he jumped and broke his leg in two places. These are only a few instances of the uneasy feeling that pertains in the country over this strike, and I say it is high time that the Government should interfere and that Parliament should interfere, as it is empowered to do, and bring this strike to an end, and restore public confidence in the G.T.R. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The Prime Minister—I am somewhat sorry that my hon. friend did not give me any intimation that he would bring up this question to-day.

Mr. Maclean—I only saw the paper just now.

The Premier's Statement.

The Prime Minister—I do not make any reproach at all to my hon. friend, but I may say that if he had given me any intimation that he was going to bring up this question to-day and asked me to make a statement, I would have been able to bring with me the correspondence which I have upon the subject and of which I would have been glad to give communication to the House. But in the absence of this correspondence I will state to the House from memory what took place, not only after, but before the motion of my hon. friend from Toronto West (Mr. Clarke), who brought up the question the other day. Last week, having read of the strike which has taken place, I placed myself in communication with Mr. Wainwright, the deputy superintendent of the G.T.R., and asked him to put himself in communication with me with regard to the strike that was then taking place. I saw him on Wednesday night and Thursday night as well.

A Delegation Visited Him.

On the following day I was waited upon by a delegation from the Trackmen's Association, and they placed in my hands the terms to which they thought they were entitled from the G. T.R. authorities. Of course I promised them that I would exert my best endeavors to promote their views with the Grand Trunk Railway Company. I intended to see Mr. Wainwright on that day also, but could not do so. But on the evening of that day, which was Friday, I learned that the same committee had placed themselves in communication with some gentlemen belonging to this House, and I thereupon wired to Mr. Wainwright and asked him if this was true, supposing that if it were true, my services would be no longer required. I received an answer from Mr. Wainwright that I was misinformed in some particulars. At the same time I received information that several members of this House had gone to Montreal to interview the Grand Trunk Railway. Therefore, under those circumstances, I sent away by mail all the statement which was left in my hands by the committee of trackmen. I sent it to Mr. Wainwright with the prayer that he would place it in the hands of Mr. Hays, and I gave what recommendation I could as to the prayer of the trackmen, stating at the same time that if my information turned out to be untrue, if the matter was not settled, I would be happy to resume—I would deem it my duty to resume the correspondence with the parties concerned. This is the position which, therefore, I took in reference to this matter, and is all the information I have. It would have been more satisfactory to me if I could at this moment place on the table of the House the whole correspondence and read it so that the House could follow from day to day what took place.

Sympathizes With the Men.

I have only this word to say, as I have only repeated again what I stated on former occasions, that my sympathy personally was strongly with the men who are seeking to better their circumstances from the G.T.R. I have nobody to blame in this matter, I do not want to make any reflections against anybody, but, if at any moment the trackmen consider that I can be of any assistance to them, if there is any good purpose that I can further, and the trackmen apply to me to have the influence of the Government in their favor so that this unfortunate strike may be brought to an end, I shall deem it my duty to exercise this influence so that at the earliest possible moment this unfortunate condition of things may cease.

Mr. Casey Supports Mr. Maclean.

Mr. George E. Casey (West Elgin) thought that the time had come for Government interference.

He Employed Engineers.

The Minister of Railways and Canals, Mr. Blair, detailed the representations of danger made to him, and the means taken to avert the same. He employed several engineers and arranged that they should start out on Monday morning. They had actually, he believed, left home for the purpose of going over those points on the line to which they had been detailed, when notice came to him on Monday morning, all the public prints contained a notice, that the difficulty was over and the men returned to work, and he therefore recalled the engineers. He had not sent them out since. He had not any information which led him to believe that there was any great urgency in the matter, because as practical men we know that a railway that has been maintained, that is, cared for, and is built up in solidity and strength in every particular as the G.T.R., does not become dismantled and does not fall into a dangerous condition very speedily.

Mr. Casey—Spikes and rails might get loose any time.

The Minister of Railways and Canals—The spikes and rails might get loose, it is true, but the manager of the G.T.R. assured me most positively that he had a sufficient number of men going over every section of the line to see that anything that might occur, accidental or otherwise, was cared for and that there was every assurance given to the public. The House might rest convinced that he would not neglect his duty.

Mr. William B. Ives (Sherbrooke) said the whole matter was in the hands of the Government. The G.T.R., like any other railway in Canada, could, under the act, be controlled by the Department of Railways and Canals. If the track did run down, if accidents did occur and lives were lost, the Government would have to answer to the country for what they did or failed to do in the matter. It seemed to him that when the men were ready to come back to work, and thought the strike was settled and had been disappointed, they now felt, whether rightly or wrongly, that they had been taken in by Mr. Hays, and the head officers of the G.T.R. That disappointment and the feeling which naturally resulted from it rendered the situation more dangerous than it had been at any previous stage.

Mr. A. McNeill said he disapproved of what Mr. Blair had said. It was that the company was as much interested as anyone else in the country with reference to this matter. The principle thus laid down by the Minister was absolutely unsound.

Mr. Powell's Statement.

Mr. H. A. Powell (Westmoreland), after calling how he came to be interested in the matter with Mr. Taylor, said that in accordance with the suggestions of the trackmen's executive, they went over to see Mr. Hays. Continuing, he said: "I shall say very little concerning the interview with Mr. Hays and nothing more than the proposition I am going to state. Mr. Hays took this ground firmly and distinctly. He would not treat with the men so long has they were strikers and would not make any promise whatever to them until they had returned to their employment, except this: He would be willing to meet Mr. Taylor and myself or any other two members of Parliament immediately after their return, whatever place and what time an appointment was made for, and he made the rather peculiar statement that if it was necessary in order to keep an appointment he would walk either to Gananoque or to Ottawa. He would not vary from that or promise anything further than that. We returned and saw the men. After some conversation with the trackmen, I gave expression to my opinion, that probably if they had relied upon Mr. Hays, the best thing to do under the circumstances was to accept his proposition. But I told them that before accepting that they should communicate by telegram with the subordinate lodges and get their assent before they accepted Mr. Hays' proposition." The men accepted Mr. Hays' proposition, and that gentleman was so notified by Mr. Taylor. To that message Mr. Hays made no reply whatever that it was not in accordance with the terms of any agreement. Continuing, he said: "I might say there is no possibility of there being any error on my part as to the agreement being to take back all the men who had gone on strike."

Mr. Powell then read the telegrams and letters which passed between himself, the trackmen, Mr. Hays and Mr. Taylor, and the tenor of them all is that it was agreed that the men were to go back, and after they had ceased to be strikers their differences would be adjusted by the company, with this exception that Mr. Hays' letter to Mr. Powell pointed out that under an order issued all the men who had not gone back within 24 hours were considered by the company as having voluntarily left the company's service, and that the company reserved to itself the right to deal with them as they saw fit. As they had employed a number of others to take their places they could not take back all of them pending a settlement.

In answer to questions by Mr. Ingram, Mr. Powell said: "So far this was the conclusion that the men were to go back. There was no qualification in any way. The men were to go back, and Mr. Hays made no promise whatever, except that if they were to go he then would immediately treat with Mr. Taylor or myself or any other members of Parliament in respect to the grievance that the men had. He advised us, and we so advised the men. I may say that since then these gentlemen applied to me and asked me what it meant. Mr. Lowe came to Ottawa, and I told him plainly that there was no question about an agreement and had not the slightest idea that they would accept Mr. Hays' proposition without notifying the subordinate lodges."

Taylor Backs Powell.

Mr. Taylor referred to his meeting with Mr. Wainwright, and related the subsequent proceedings of Mr. Powell and himself very much in the same manner as had been already done by Mr. Powell. He also gave a number of instances in which men who claimed they had not interfered had been refused by the G.T.R. He also said that he mentioned in the discussion with Mr. Hays at Montreal that every credit was due to the striking trackmen, who were two weeks on strike, and yet not an accident of any kind had happened and nothing was interfered with. There was some little trouble at Kingston, but it was not caused by the trackmen, and he was told by one of the conductors that the trackmen themselves interfered to prevent that trouble.

The debate was continued by Mr. J. Ross Robertson, Mr. Davin, who said it was clear from Mr. Hays' communication there was something more behind it than he was willing or able to admit, and Messrs. E. F. Clarke, McMullen, Bell (P.E.I.), Hughes, Reed, Kendry, Ingram and McHugh until 10.30, when the motion to adjourn was withdrawn.

G.T.R. Resolutions.

It was nearly 11 o'clock before the House got back into committee on the Grand Trunk resolutions, and the probability is it will sit very late.

INCREASED THEIR PAY.

Montreal Street Railway Men Get Better Wages.

Montreal, June 8.—The Montreal Street Railway Company has decided to increase the pay of all its men, a sum aggregating $35,000 per annum. The men will also get $1,000 free insurance for accident on or off duty, and half that amount for total disability. Men in the service over five years will receive free uniforms. Motormen and conductors of two years' service will have their pay increased to 15 cents per hour. The increase means that permanent employes will receive $6.50 additional per annum, the increase to conductors and motormen of two years' standing being $35 per annum, and of five years, $49. The increase affects 1,200 men.

Brakeman Most Killed.

Lucknow, Ont., June 8.—A fatal accident occurred at the Grand Trunk station yard here on Tuesday night. Harry Best was instantly killed while coupling cars. He was standing on the cow catcher of the engine, and as the locomotive approached the car he raised the heavy iron drawbar to attach it to the car, but in the dim light at the time he missed the coupler, and the engine and car came together. The body was terribly mangled, the heart and other vitals being torn out. The deceased, who was unmarried, and about 21 years of age, came here from Palmerston some four weeks ago.

Milk Combine for Toronto.

Toronto, June 8.—A proposition from an American syndicate has been made to the Milk Dealers' Association, in which it is proposed to buy up the routes of city milk dealers at the rate of $1,000 cash per each eight-gallon can of milk delivered each day. The quantity of milk delivered daily is about 8,000 gallons, so that to effect the purchase $1,000,000 would have to be expended.

George Garbutt Badly Crushed.

Owen Sound, June 8.—While assisting in carrying a 900-pound steel shaft, George Garbutt, an employe of the North American Bent Chair Company, accidentally stepped from a low scaffolding along which he was walking, and was seriously injured. The shaft fell on him, breaking his right jaw, injuring his ribs and badly bruising his neck and right side.

A man dragged by a wild horse would cut himself loose if he could. He would not

The man who is losing flesh and vitality—who is worn-out, run-down, tired all the time—is on the road to death. He is holding out an invitation to disease. Consumption comes by neglect. Heart disease is a growth from other disorders. Nervous prostration doesn't come in a day.

A few months ago I began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and now can eat, sleep and work, and I feel like a new man."

JINGLES AND JESTS.

'Twixt Fork and Lip.

Stubborn man was Uncle Nick;
Temper, too, was pretty quick;
First rate neighbor and all that,
But as set as Ararat.
When he couldn't have his way,
T'other old Nick was to pay.

Once—I never shall forget
How it worried him—he met
With a sing'lar circumstance;
Call it providence or chance—
'Nough to teach him, sure's you live,
Not to be too positive.

Recollect just how he sat
Eatin breakfast—old gray cat
Sly'y watchin every move,
While he undertook to prove
That the hope of God's elect
Couldn't anyhow be wrecked.

"Heaven is as sure for me
As this piece of fat," said he.
Guess he trembled, for it dropped
Off his fork and never stopped
Till it subby cat it went—
End of Nicky's argument.

What She Said.

Mrs. P. Peck, E 18th street, New York City, visited Canada last year, and had the good fortune to pick up something which not only suited her, but her neighbors also. Writing the manufacturer of Nervoline she says:—"I bought three bottles of Nervoline while in Canada and treated my neighbors to some of it, and all think it the best medicine for internal or external pain they have ever used." Nervoline deserves such a commendation, for it is a most powerful penetrating, and certain remedy for pain of all kinds. Take no substitute.

Forgive Them This One Time.

Spring poets are a nuisance,
Of that I'm well aware.
They harrow the poor editor
And make the printer swear.
But think of the past season
In this fair, sunny clime,
And if of spring the blithe bards sing
Forgive them this one time.

While honeysuckles are in bloom,
And birds carol all day,
And the strawberry man appears
And pipes his roundelay;
When the disheartened plumber seeks
A more congenial clime,
If the bards sing of balmy spring,
Forgive them this one time.

The Wrong Leg.

"Mamma," cried the editor's boy, rushing in excitedly, "dad's just been run over by the railroad train!"

"Why," said the mother, "how kin you say that when yonder he comes, limpin along as usual?"

PRETTY ACCESSORIES

Attractive Details of the Summer Fashions.

Some of the new parasols have painted designs of flowers thrown across them or forming an elaborate pattern around the entire circle. The simplest painted parasols are of plain, thin silk, white or of a delicate color, with a spray of apple blossoms or roses at one side, but more elaborate ones are ruffled with gauze and almost covered with painted flowers. Another novelty in parasols has the edge cut in deep tabs or scallops and bordered with little ruchings.

Incrustations of cloth have been much worn, but now there is a new development, in which the cloth designs are appliqued on a foundation of heavy net, the goods thus created being used for parts or the whole of costumes.

Violet and blue are the most fashionable millinery colors, and therefore violets and bluets, or cornflowers, are used in great profusion in both dark and light shades.

Children's hats are extremely attractive this season. They are large and are usually simply trimmed. Some of the prettiest are chiefly ornamented with field flowers—buttercups, daisies, poppies, cornflowers or red and white clovers, with grasses and plain or plaid ribbons. The hat shown in the sketch is of the old fashioned leghorn variety and is trimmed with pink taffeta ribbon at the top and under the brim on each side, the ribbon also forming strings which tie in front. NAMES OF COUNTIES.

THE ROLL CONSTITUTES A NATIONAL SAINTS' CALENDAR.

It Is, In Fact, the Walhalla of Departed American Heroes, the Westminster Abbey Where Our Illustrious Dead Have Their Monuments.

There are 2,743 counties in the United States, and the titles by which these numerous divisions are known present material enough to form the basis of a profound study in the derivation of geographical names.

Had there been given in the beginning to the American people the task of agreeing upon nearly 3,000 such names invention and choice would doubtless have been paralyzed by its magnitude. The way this problem has solved itself during the past century certainly throws some side lights on national characteristics, and if the list of names evolved is on the whole not a very melodious one or as good a one as might have been expected considering the material there was to choose from it is yet better than the beginnings made 80 or 90 years ago would lead one to expect.

For at that time, when the first great waves of population rolled westward and a large part of the counties in the midwest were laid off and named, there seemed to be a regular poverty of thought on the part of those who bestowed geographical designations. Jedediah Morse, a quaint old geographer of about the year 1810, thus complains of this when speaking of the state of Ohio in particular: "While we are on the subject of towns we cannot forbear alluding to a practice of very perplexing effects which prevails more or less in all our new states, but particularly in Ohio. We allude to the custom of naming a great many towns in the same state after some distinguished character or after older settlements. In the single state of Ohio there are 9 towns by the name of Salem, 9 by the name of Greene, 9 Jeffersons, 9 Madisons, 10 Waynes and 18 Unions, besides a multitude of less frequent repetitions. Indeed we confidently assert that the names of a majority of the towns in Ohio are repeated from two to a dozen times."

The same was true of the several newly formed western states in naming their counties. One after another slavishly repeated the county names of its nearest neighbor, and the result is that the county rolls of such nearly related states as Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are singularly alike. There are the same Washingtons, Jeffersons, Franklins, Marions and so on down the list, and the rest of the newer states have followed their lead until nearly all the great men of American history have each given names to from a dozen or so to as many as 20 counties.

During colonial times a greater part of the county names adopted were those of British shires and localities and of members of the English royal family. Thus all of the original 13 states have their Cumberlands, Montgomerys, Somersets and the like, and the whole nomenclature of Massachusetts, Connecticut and some other states is composed of English geographical names. Virginia and Maryland in the south adopted more extensively than the northern colonies the custom of naming counties after princes and rulers for whom the Puritans ever had but little love. Thus Virginia has not only a King and Queen county, but King George, King William, Prince Edward, Prince George, Prince William and Princess Anne besides. In Maryland counties there are found thus remembered Prince George and Queen Anne.

The Declaration of Independence, however, at once put a stop to the adoption of English names for new counties. The names of American patriots blossomed forth everywhere as the favorites to whom this distinction was given. Even the beautiful native Indian names, which as early as this period had often been bestowed, were now less frequently given. It is only a few of the original 13 states and of their earliest successors that made much use of this source of supply. The more recent western states, although having abundance of such material, have drawn from it very little. Less than 400 of the counties bear names of this kind, but they are among the most beautiful in the list, and it is much to be regretted that they were not more extensively used. Certainly the Cayuga, Chautauqua, Chenango, Onondaga, Oswego and Saratoga of New York, the Lackawanna, Susquehanna, Tioga and Wyoming of Pennsylvania or the Ashtabula, Cuyahoga, Scioto and Tuscarawas of Ohio are more euphonious and pleasing to the ear, as well as more distinctive and thus more serviceable, than the monotonous repetition of Washingtons, Jeffersons and Lafayettes.

Speaking of these Indian names, it is noticeable that they are generally rough and guttural in the northern parts of the country and more liquid in the south. Thus contrast such county names from Maine as Androscoggin and Sagadahoc with the Alachua and Suwanee of Florida or Michilimackinac and Gogebic from Michigan and Snohomish and Klickitat from Washington with the soft and sibilant Tuscaloosa and Tallapoosa of Alabama. In the central states the names are generally of a type equally removed from these extremes of ruggedness and softness.

But the red man's names form but an inconspicuous part in the roll of counties, more than half of which commemorate Americans of national, state or even local reputation. In fact, this roll constitutes a sort of national saints' calendar, the Walhalla of departed American heroes, the Westminster abbey where the nation's illustrious dead have their monuments. Lord Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar is reported to have said something to the effect that "here goes for a peerage or a tomb in Westminster abbey." Unfortunately fate awarded the battle to the great admiral in his hour of triumph, or rather a tomb in St. Paul's, which was still less. But Perry, at the battle of Lake Erie, might still better have said, "Here goes at any event for a name spread over ten great American counties," for that is what his countrymen have awarded him, a monument certainly more lasting and imposing than a little bit of hideous marble, with a full quota of epitaphic mendacities.—Indianapolis Journal.

Dean Swift and the Masons.

When the masons were building it (as most tradesmen are rogues), I watched them very close, and as often as they could they put in a rotten stone, of which, however, I took no notice until they had built three or four perches beyond it. Now, as I am an absolute monarch in the liberties and king of the rabble, my way with them was to have the wall thrown down to the place where I observed the rotten stone, and by doing so five or six times the workmen were at last convinced it was their interest to be honest.—Unpublished Letters of Dean Swift.

DON'T SEE IT.

Some Humor Which Women Have Difficulty in Catching—How a Sister Explained It.

Now, that species of humor sometimes described as "rollicking," which men complain that women cannot see, is often more or less in the nature of a practical joke—that is to say, it lies in the matter rather than the manner, says Cornhill Magazine. It appears, for instance, in much (by no means all) of the humor of Pickwick, or in the farcial situations on which the dramatists of the Restoration rely so largely, strong as they are also in humor of a different kind. The point, if we must say so, is not infrequently supplied by the fact that some one is exhibited in a more or less undignified position. It may be freely and at once conceded that women are not amused by humor of this class. They think it silly, undignified and often coarse, and so far as the last indictment is concerned men do not contradict them.

More than this, such jokes, like the practical jokes that amuse a boy, are often enough not only coarse, but cruel, and it may very well be that a woman refrains from laughing at them, not so much because her perceptions are dull in one direction as because they are keen in another. To see a human being made a fool of is too painful to be amusing. Moreover, she often finds that the joke consists in some time-honored witticism against her own sex, supported rather by tradition than by observation, and if she has any spirit she naturally resents it. It is a curious evidence of the strength of custom, by the bye, this naivete with which women are expected to join in jokes against themselves "by men," all has been well said in a different connection, "incapable of a deliberate insult." But because a woman does not laugh it does not always follow that she does not see what she is expected to laugh at. A brother once complained of his sister that she could not see a joke, and the criticism was of course duly conveyed to her. "No, I don't see any joke. I see what amuses him, but you don't really expect me to laugh at that?"

THE NEW LIBERAL WHIP.

Herbert Gladstone Is More Than the Son of His Father.

Herbert Gladstone, who has been elected the "whip" of the Liberal party, is a little more than the son of his eminent father. While it is true that he has not developed that great aptitude for statesmanship that so distinguished the late Premier, he has shown marked ability as a member of Parliament, in which he has been sitting for Leeds since 1880. Mr. Gladstone was born at 19 Downing street in 1854, and was educated at Eton and at University College, Oxford. From 1877 to 1880 he was lecturer of history in Keble College, and thereafter entered upon the political career in which he has been since engaged. He was private secretary to Mr. Gladstone from 1881 to 1885, and in 1886 he was made financial secretary of the War Office. In 1892 and 1894 he was under secretary of the Home Office, and in 1894 and 1895 he was first commissioner of works and president of the National Physical Recreation Society. He likes cricket, golf, football, cycling, fishing and yachting. His work as whip does not promise to be easy, but he will probably be able to do it, and do it well.

HERBERT GLADSTONE.

Sound in the Air.

A writer in The Strand Magazine describes the astonishment he experienced when, riding over London in a balloon at a height of more than half a mile, he heard the deafening roar of the great city beneath him as it could not be heard when on the ground. The noise, even at that height, was so harsh and intense as to be painful to the ear. How perfect a sound conductor the air is was shown when the balloon drifted far over the city to a wooded part of the country, where the murmur of the leaves moved by the wind, half a mile below, was distinctly heard.

THE LIGHTNING'S WORK.

A Fine Barn in Cavan Township Burned to the Ground.

The storm last evening was the cause of considerable loss to Mr. John A. Sutton, who resides on the 10th concession of Cavan, about ten miles from town. A large frame barn situated in an open field across the road from the house was struck by lightning about 8.30 o'clock and was entirely consumed. The fire was well under way before it was discovered by the family and nothing could be done to save the building. In it were stored a binder, a mower, plows and other implements and these also were totally destroyed. The loss would amount to fully $800 and there was only a slight insurance on the building and none on the contents.

Streets well Washed.

The rainstorm of last evening between eight and nine o'clock was a great downpour and for a while threatened to equal the flood of Monday afternoon. In the centre of the town the street crossings were overflowed and the streets were deserted except for the men who were out keeping the sewer gratings open. This precaution was taken in time last evening and though for a time the streams at the roadsides were very high the water was all carried off safely.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Sabine Celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of Their Marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Sabine, Water-st., celebrated their golden wedding yesterday, when they received the hearty congratualtions of many friends, who also extended well wishes for many more years of happy wedded life. Their daughter-in-law, Mrs. W. E. Sabine, of Ohio, was here to join with the friends in commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the wedding day. Mr. and Mrs. Sabine were the recipients of many appropriate gifts.

Peterborough friends will extend congratulatory greetings to the aged bride and groom on this fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

St. Andrew's Y.P.S.C.E.

St. Andrew's held their regular C.E. meeting Monday at 8 p.m. Some new members were present and altogether the attendance was good. Miss Bathgate presided. The topic was "Wheat and Tares," Matt. 13, 24-30. Some thoughts were: If we are God's children we should know it and if not we are amongst those who sow tares. The tares are burned! What will be the fate of those that sow tares! While those in charge of the seed slept in indifference the enemy sowed the tares—sin had entered. In our daily lives we must not think ourselves better than others or try to cut them off or judge them. Christ says, let our lives be an example and shining light for Him. To save others we must be firm ourselves. Solos were rendered by Miss Waddell and the pastor. A hearty welcome would be given any young people who would visit the Society.—Com.

Improvements at Hooper's.

The carpenters, painters and paperhangers have been at work for some some time at Mr. Thos. Hooper's confectionery and ice cream parlors, on George-st., and have given the premises a neat and creditable appearance. Everything has been freshened and brightened up in attractive manner and changes have been made to give increased accommodation and convenience. The store and parlors now present a highly pleasing appearance and summer customers will find everything in first class shape.

THE TRACKMEN'S STRIKE.

West Peterborough's Member Speaks of it in the House of Commons.

The trackmen's strike continues today, with the situation unchanged.

When the matter was up in the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Jas. Kendry, M.P., took occasion to say a word in the cause of the men. He said that on the section where he lived there was nobody looking after the Grand Trunk track at all. The C.P.R. was paying $1.25, and the Grand Trunk should pay as much. The men had evidently been deceived. If the word of the president of the Grand Trunk was not as good as his bond he was not fit to manage the road. In his opinion Mr. Wainwright, the lobbyist of the road, was the man who was to blame. He hoped the Government would take the first opportunity to compel the company to settle the trouble.

The local committee of the striking trackmen has had bills posted up around town with the object of having the public in view of the strike to refrain from travelling or working on the Grand Trunk.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.

The Spot Cash Grocers add new Departments to their Business.

Some time ago the Spot Cash Grocery Co., 353 George-st., announced that on June 1st they would add two new departments to their business. They have purchased the retail liquor business of Alex. Elliott & Co., and will carry it on in connection with their other business at the George-st. store. They will carry a full and complete line of whiskeys, wines and other liquors, ales, lager beer, porter, etc. The business is an established one and a high standard of excellence will be maintained.

The other department which the firm has added is that of mineral waters and general temperance drinks. A complete assortment of these will be carried in stock. This will be a great public convenience during the summer months. The firm has exceptional facilities for supplying all drinks ice cold and ready for use and will be pleased to show their capabilities in this line.

The liquor department is in charge of Mr. W. H. Dayman, long and favorably known in this business in Peterborough. This is a guarantee of excellence. Mr. Dayman's many friends will be pleased to see his efficiency recognized.

REMANDED TILL TUESDAY.

Authorities hold Thos. Crowe by Extending His Time.

Thomas Crowe, of Dummer, was this afternoon remanded by County Magistrate Edmison till Tuesday next on the charge of using threatening language.

Nothing has come to light regarding the whereabouts of the missing boy. On the night of May 25th, the night when he was last seen, a young man rode some distance on the back of a conveyance and got off south of Warsaw. Nobody in the vehicle had any converse with him, however, and there was nothing to identify him with Herman Crowe.

Lacrosse.

Toronto Telegram:—Mr. Herb Lennox, ex-president of the C.L.A., has been asked to referee the Orangeville-Orillia lacrosse match, on June 9th. If Herb does he had better do business from a balloon, where he would be safe out of harm's way. In a match between these two teams a referee's life isn't worth much, especially in one of the towns.

The Varsity team has arrived home from New York. Lionel King, who is on the Varsity team, says the combination of the Crescent's home Dobbie, Wall, Westman and Ross, can't be beaten in the C.L.A. or anywhere else. Their defence is also strong, Jouel being particularly fast. Lionel says 'Varsity were up in a balloon for the first half, and didn't know where they were at, but in the second half had things their own way most of the time.

A Lady who Wants Her Garden Protected From Boys.

Miss Scott, residing at the corner of Hunter and Rubidge-sts, owns a very nice garden of flowers and fruit but she has entered a complaint with the police that boys in the neighborhood make a practice of robbing and destroying her place. Already this spring many flowers have been destroyed. This is mischief which is not to be tolerated and the police are determined to put an end to it even if they have to keep a man on constant watch. Anybody offending after this warning will be severely dealt with.

WEATHER FOR MAY.

Rainfall Above the Average—Weather was Not Typical.

The weather statistics for the month of May have just been prepared by the observatory officials. The mean temperature for the province was a little above the average. In Ontario generally the rainfall was above the average to a small amount, but locally, in the counties of Elgin, Lambton and Bruce there was a deficiency.

In Ontario the weather, though comparatively fine and warm during the first and last ten days of the month, was hardly typical of May, and from the 14th to the 21st it was often unpleasantly cool. The rainfall was also somewhat excessive, excepting in some counties in western Ontario, where, on the other hand, there was great drought.

THE AGE OF WISDOM.

Ho, pretty page with the dimpled chin
That never has known the barber's shears,
All your wish is woman to win!
This is the way that boys begin—
Wait till you come to forty years!

Curly gold locks cover foolish brains;
Billing and cooing is all your cheer,
Sighing and singing of midnight strains
Under Bonnyhall's window panes—
Wait till you come to forty years!

Forty times over let Michaelmas pass;
Grizzling hair the brain doth clear.
Then you know a boy is an ass,
Then you know the worth of a lass,
Once you have come to forty years!

Pledge me round, I bid ye declare,
All good fellows whose beards are gray.
Did not the fairest of the fair
Common grow and wearisome are Ever a month was passed away?

The reddest lips that ever have kissed,
The brightest eyes that ever have shone,
May pray and whisper and we not list
Or look away and never be missed
Ere yet over a month is gone.

Gillian's dead! God rest her bier!
How I loved her twenty years syne!
Marian's married, but I sit here
Alone and merry at forty year,
Dipping my nose in the Gascon wine.

VALUE OF SELF EDUCATION.

More Lasting Than Academic Training Because It Takes More Effort.

Edward Bok answers a girl correspondent who inquires "How can one learn other than at college and still realize the highest living?" in The Ladies' Home Journal. "The inestimable value of mental training," he says, "is undeniable for girl or boy, man or woman, but mental training is not alone to be had at the college or university. It can be had more systematically there, perhaps, but not more effectively than anywhere else if the desire to learn and study is present in the heart. There is a mistaken idea present with many that we go to college to get a certain amount of information or a number of facts in our heads. The legitimate use of all colleges is mental discipline—in other words, the training of our faculties so that they will be of use to us as tools. The school, the college or the university is simply the beginning of our learning. It gives us not learning, but trains us how to learn in after years; for the life of a woman, like that of a man, begins after college has been left behind.

"Now, mental discipline may be just as easily acquired at home as at college, provided a girl so wills. What developed the hundreds of thousands of women who never went to college and yet who are today women of the very finest minds? Not one in 5,000 girls in this country can or will ever go to college. That is possible only for the smallest minority, yet the majority will not fail of the 'highest living' because the opportunity of an academic training was withheld from them. Self development is far more lasting than mental training, because it calls for greater effort, and efforts well directed are of themselves the greatest means of development we have. What we find out ourselves we remember better and longer than what is taught or told us."

Legally Dead.

In Mexico, when a man is condemned to death, he is executed by being shot by a file of soldiers, and the body is left where it falls, to be taken away by the man's friends, if he has any.

Not long ago a worthless fellow was thus executed and left in the open country outside a small village.

But after the officer in charge had inspected him, pronounced him dead, and the soldiers had left the man got up, walked to the City of Mexico, 80 miles distant, and entered a hospital.

He had a wound in his shoulder and two more on his skull, but soon recovered.

The authorities now wanted to shoot him again, but the governor of the province decided that the man was legally dead, the lieutenant having said so, and the Mexican was released.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "Dr. Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

They cheered him and soothed him; but that letter tortured Sir Rupert—it was the cry of a wounded bird longing for him. The torture was so strong upon him, that, unknown to the squire, Sir Rupert went to Liverpool, hoping to see Lyster Ayrton and his wife, but the vessel had sailed before he reached the city, and he never spoke of his journey.

Four years passed, and they heard often from her. She was living quite alone, she told him, in the little town of Witana, near the gold diggings, where her husband had gone to work. Quite alone, save that at odd times he went to see her, and "took good care of her." Those words she prayed Heaven to pardon as she wrote—they were to comfort her father, and she thought them, though false as sin.

They answered all her letters, sending her sweet and loving messages over the sea—sending her love and blessings—kind, cheering words—bright pictures of the home where she was so surely missed—but they never named him.

Irene did more; she sent a substantial chest, and Sir Rupert aided her. They sent dresses, tea, shoes, preserved meats, books—the most curious assortment of things ever packed—and it was well they did so; but for them Sybil Ayrton would have been half-starved and poorly clad.

Four years—and Violet Ruthers, looking on the face she loved so dearly, wondered if her hour had come. She was in the prime of her magnificent beauty; she was rich, clever—why could he not care for her? Surely he never dreamed of wasting all his life in mourning for the fair, foolish girl who had preferred such a man as Lyster Ayrton to him?

She was a good woman—modest, true and sensible; yet there was no art, no subtle charm she did not try, in order to win him. She met him at all times and in all places. If he went to the library to read or write, there sat Violet; if he strolled in the grounds, thinking only of his lost Sybil, by some strange chance he was sure to meet Violet. She had always something interesting, either charming, piquant, or pleasant, to say. If he showed any signs of weariness, she would begin speaking of Sybil, knowing that he would never tire.

She loved him very deeply and dearly. She wondered how a man like him could care so much for a girl like Sybil—a girl capable of giving him up for the fair-haired soldier, whose only recommendation was a handsome face. Would he never learn to appreciate her, so ready to give him true and womanly love?

It seemed not. Four years had passed since Sybil went away, yet he was no nearer coming for her than he had been then; his face was just as grave, the shadows lays as deep in his eyes.

One evening—it was at the end of June, and all nature wore her most luxuriant dress—Sir Rupert Dacre, leaving the squire to take his usual after-dinner siesta, went out into the garden alone.

He went to his favorite seat—a low garden chair, placed under the boughs of a large laburnum tree—and, of course, found Violet there. She rose at his approach, and turned to leave the spot. He liked her pleasant, bright companionship, and prayed her to remain.

She was nothing loath, and they sat down on the pretty chair, the garden blossoms falling over them.

She talked to him; first, of the book she was reading, then brought the conversation round to his own life.

"I used to be ambitious for you, years ago," she said, "and believed you would do great things. Will all the rest of your life—forgive me for speaking so—will all your life be spent in mourning for a dead love?"

"My love is not dead," he said gently, his noble face bent over with its kindliest expression. "My love is my life, Violet. How good you are to take such an interest in me! How can I reward you?"

She looked up at him; her woman's soul shining in her beautiful face.

"Has it never struck you," she asked, breathlessly, "why I take such an interest in you?"

He looked at her in surprise, wondering at the flushing and pallor on her countenance, her humid eyes, and trembling lips.

"Have you never wondered why I who have many lovers, never married?"

"No," he said; "I have not thought of it. Violet, why is it?"

"I must tell you," she said. "It is because I have been waiting, hoping, and praying that in the years to come I might—I can not say the words—I might console you, and make up to you for all you have suffered."

The words were said; a burning flush covered her face. She buried it in her hands, and would have given worlds to recall them.

"My dear Violet," he said, in great distress, "how kind and good you are to me! I did not know. I never discovered—"

"Of course you did not!" she interrupted. "I will tell you all my secrets now, Sir Rupert. I have loved you all my life, and I—I care so much for you, I would rather have the dead ashes of your love than the devotion of any other!"

"My dear Violet," he said, "I am so very grateful to you! You are noble and truthful! Your love might bless any man; but even the 'dead ashes' are not mine to give! I loved that bright, fair child, Sybil, too well ever to forget her! I must be true to my love for her as long as I live!"

CHAPTER XXI.

LYSTER AYRTON HAD BEEN SLAIN.

Sir Rupert Dacre turned gently to the beautiful woman by his side.

"You have always been kind to me, Violet," he said. "Long as I remember anything, you have consoled and cheered me. I am grateful to you. I offer you my sincere friendship. I have nothing else worthy of your acceptance, all the love in my heart went from me years ago."

Her face had grown white as marble, her lips cold.

"I shall never forgive myself," she said; "my secret ought to have died with me. I ought to have died myself rather than tell it."

"Nay," he said, gently; "the noblest and proudest of women have offered their love before now to comfort the men they pitied. I shall always bear your words in grateful memory. I know the world holds no gift like pure, true love."

She rose and pushed the laburnum branches impatiently aside.

"Try to forget it, Sir Rupert," she said, "as I shall. I have made a grand mistake. I shall leave Glynn to-morrow, and not return for many long months. I have life all before me; but is it possible that you will waste yours in dreaming over that most unhappy child? She is not worthy of it."

"Hush!" he said, gently. "You mistake. See, Violet. She is in sorrow and deep distress, I know, though no one has told me so. I could no more think of love and happiness while she was miserable than I could fly. Do you understand?"

"Yes," she replied, slowly. "I understand. One woman in a century perhaps is loved so—not more. For your sake, if I can ever befriend her, I will. Good-bye, Sir Rupert. I shall not see you again to-night, and you leave Glynn this evening, I believe."

He held her hand for one minute, looking into the magnificent face, longing to say more to her, yet not daring, wishing everything had been different, and that she had been happy in her love.

Then she turned slowly away, and walked through the fragrant flowers alone.

Sir Rupert Dacre sat thinking for some time how wonderfully everything seemed managed in this world. Violet loved him—he loved Sybil; Sybil loved Lyster Ayrton, and he did not doubt but that Lyster Ayrton, in his turn, loved some one else.

He sat until the stars began to shine, and the dew fell on the flowers. It was a mystery; but the bright skies shone above him, and he knew that in another world all would be made clear.

Another year, and the skies that shone so brightly on Glynn looked over lonely Australian wastes and forests where the foot of man had never trod; over the vast gold-diggings, where men thronged to seek that they love best; over the small town of Witana, where Sybil Ayrton dragged out the long day in unutterable misery.

She had been so tenderly loved and cared for—it was as though some brilliant, dainty bird had been carried from the sunshine and flowers, and placed in a dark iron cage against which he beat his fragile wings in vain.

She often asked herself was ever punishment so great as hers? did ever retribution so quickly follow sin? For in the coarse, dissipated, disappointed man, whose daily amusement was the torture of an innocent victim, there was but little trace of the handsome, debonair soldier who wooed her under the shades of Glynn Woods. Not that she saw much of him—Lyster Ayrton spent most of his time at the gold-diggings. If he was successful, she dreaded one kind of misery; if he worked for some weeks in vain, she dreaded another.

When he succeeded, he returned home in a flush of triumph; then followed days of such coarse dissipation as sickened her whole soul, even years after, to remember—when coarse men came by his invitation, and crowded her little house, and drinking, gambling, cursing, until the unhappy wife, in sheer despair, would lock herself in her room and try to shut out the dreadful sounds from her own.

She, who had never heard a rough word, who only knew sin by name, passed through scenes that would have shamed a wicked woman; yet it seemed that angels guarded her, for she stood pure and unharmed—the pollution of sin falling from her, evil spirits falling back, scared by the sweet innocence that nothing could soil or stain.

He made her grace his triumphs. He would tell his dissolute companions before her face how she was Squire Jocelyn's daughter, and how she had run away from home with him.

"A love match," he would say, in sneering tones—"a love match, gentlemen, but it has not turned out well."

One would wonder, and think the picture overdrawn, but there is no deceit so easy as that which leads to perdition. All there was of good in Lyster Ayrton had disappeared under the combined influences of disappointment, drink and dissipation. He had never possessed a refined or delicate nature, and the artificial polish produced by long straining and mixing in good society had vanished when those influences were withdrawn.

If he returned from the diggings disappointed and unsuccessful, he revenged himself on her—he railed against the fate which had given him a penniless wife; he spoke bitter, cruel words of the father and sister she loved so well; he taunted her until the unhappy Sybil almost lost her reason under the pressure of those stinging words. That was not all. He never deliberately struck her in his sober moments, but when he was furious with drink and beside himself with rage, he would grasp those delicate arms so violently as to leave the marks of his fingers for many days upon them.

"There is one thing I never mean to do," he said to her once. "I will never give you any pleas for getting a divorce from me. Your people in England would like that—but it shall never be."

CONFERENCE A TOTAL FAILURE

Milner and Kruger Accomplished Absolutely Nothing.

Oom Paul Was Obstinate, and Any Concessions Offered Were Hedged so That They Could Not Be Accepted—Details Sent to the Transvaal's Representative at Brussels—Mr. Balfour Regrets the Outcome, But Still Hopes.

London, June 8.—The Exchange Telegraph Company yesterday published an interview with the Parliamentary Secretary of the Colonial Office, the Earl of Selborne, in which he is quoted as declaring that the conference at Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, between President Kruger of the Transvaal Republic and the British high commissioner and Governor of Cape Colony, Sir Alfred Milner, proved unsatisfactory, and that there is no probability of its resumption.

A telegram was received at 1 o'clock in the afternoon from Sir Alfred Milner stating the President Kruger obstinately refused all concessions tending toward a settlement of the Transvaal difficulties.

Upon receiving the despatch, Secretary Chamberlain, Lord Selborne and others held a consultation concerning the failure of negotiations, which created a serious situation.

KRUGER WANTED ARBITRATION.

But Milner Would Not Thus Acknowledge Equality Between Them.

Brussels, June 8.—Doctor Leyds, the European representative of the Transvaal, has received an official despatch from Pretoria confirming the report of the failure of President Kruger and the British high commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, to reach an agreement at the conference just held at Bloemfontein.

It is added that although President Kruger offered important concessions he made them contingent upon the British acceptance of the principle of arbitration on the differences existing between Great Britain and the Transvaal.

This Great Britain heretofore has invariably refused on the ground that it would be an acknowledgement of the equality of the two countries.

According to the despatch received by Dr. Leyds, President Kruger proposed that a sojourn of two years be necessary for naturalization, and that the full franchise be acquirable five years later, coupled with property and other qualifications. The British high commissioner regarded the proposal as insufficient and made a counter proposal. President Kruger, it is further asserted, intends to submit both proposals to the Volksraad, subject to the favorable decision of Great Britain relative to arbitration.

Effect of the Failure.

London, June 8.—The report of the breakdown of the Bloemfontein negotiations has created considerable anxiety in political and official circles, and there is much speculation as to the next move of the British Government. While Great Britain does not mean war, it is generally thought that, at any rate, there will be military preparations.

Mr. Balfour still Hopes.

London, June 8.—The Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Treasury and Government leader in the House of Commons, in the course of a speech at a political banquet last evening, said the failure of the Bloemfontein conference was a source of deep regret to the Government. It was England's duty, he said, not to allow her rights to be trampled upon; but he did not believe that the controversies were incapable of solution.

In concluding his references to the conference, Mr. Balfour said:

"My sanguine forecast of a successful issue out of the troubles is based on facts that principles as obvious as the elementary rights of civilization, which we demand for our fellow-countrymen, must commend themselves to the citizens of the Transvaal, and I venture to think that the good sense, justice, policy and wisdom of the leaders of public opinion in the Transvaal will make for some settlement which will rightly preserve the independence of the Transvaal."

ALASKAN NEGOTIATIONS.

Prospective Settlement Considered a Triumph for Chamberlain.

London, June 8.—A high authority of the Colonial Office has informed a representative of the Associated Press that the negotiations with reference to the Alaskan question are in the readiest possible condition. After the interview United States Ambassador Choate had on Tuesday with the Marquis of Salisbury, the lines of a prospective settlement and for carrying on the discussion in the high commission were formally submitted by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, who throughout has had most potent influences with the Canadian side. Every arrangement in the negotiations here between Mr. Choate, Lord Salisbury and Sir Julian Pauncefote has gone through him, and the prospective settlement, in a great degree, may be considered a triumph for Mr. Chamberlain's tact and perseverance.

An Agreement On.

Washington, D.C., June 8.—Although the State Department will make no official statement in the matter, it is positively known that an agreement has been reached between Lord Salisbury and Ambassador Choate on the Alaskan boundary question. The boundary settlement is said to be satisfactory, and that it is hard to see why it will not receive the necessary ratification. It cannot yet be learned what the terms of settlement are.

Dreyfus Cannot Be Interviewed.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, June 8.—Despatches from Cayenne say all efforts to interview Dreyfus have been futile. He is now under the guard of Captain Corbeux of the gendarmerie and four gendarmes. The prisoner is apparently in good health, but seems to be fatigued. The verdict of the Court of Cassation has caused a very favorable impression here and in French Guiana.

Extradition of Esterhazy.

Paris, June 8.—The Matin says that the Government has taken steps to demand the extradition of Esterhazy.

According to The Echo de Paris General Zede will replace General Zurlinden as Military Governor of Paris.

Dreyfus to His Wife.

Paris, June 8.—Madame Dreyfus has received the following telegram from her husband: "Leave Friday; await with joy moment when I kiss you."

Lost in the River.

Brantford, June 8.—Nelson Horning, recently from Goderich, and employed in the Waterous Engine Works here, was drowned in the river on Tuesday night. He was in the river swimming, when he got beyond his depth, and was carried down the stream. The firemen, with the lifeboat, were called out, but the body was not recovered until about two hours after.

Chicago, June 8.—Wheat market was active and irregular, prices fluctuating several times a cent either way. Crop damage talk was still in evidence, but on the other hand spring wheat has enjoyed the weather it needed and is said to promise exceedingly well. The close was half a cent higher than Tuesday's.

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

TESTIMONIALS

Alliston, March 1st, 1899.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Sheldon, February 28th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it perfectly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

This conference is under the auspices of the Toronto Bible Training School and is in connection with the Y M C A. Instruction will be given by Revs Dr Stewart, Elmore Harris, D D, and R W Frost, of Toronto. The programme will include the study of the English to the Hebrews, the Gospel of John, the abundant life and other topics on how to study the Bible. The conference will be interdenominational, evangelical and spiritual. Local ministers will preside at the sessions.

Bible students, Sunday school teachers and other Christian workers, indeed all who desire a better knowledge of God's Word with helpful suggestions as to the best methods of studying it and using it in Christian service are cordially invited to the conference.

Remarkable Statement.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

AT BOBCAYGEON.

A Farmers' Picnic Largely Attended at Bobcaygeon.

On Tuesday there was at Bobcaygeon the annual picnic in connection with the Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon and Galway Roman Catholic churches. It was largely attended.

Rev. Father O'Leary, the popular parish priest, of Fenelon Falls, welcomed the guests in his usual hearty manner and there were also present Rev. Father McCall, Eamismore; Rev. Father O'Brien, Peterborough and Rev. Father Brotherton, of Emily. The steamer Majestic brought from Doaro, Young's Point, and Lakefield fully 250 passengers and the steamers from Lindsay and Fenelon Falls also brought large numbers from those places, making probably a thousand people on the ground.

The ladies of the various parishes had provided most bountifully, expecting a large number of guests and they were not disappointed, as the number present even exceeded the expectations of the clergy under whose auspices the picnic was held.

The dancing platform was fully occupied by the young people, who enjoyed themselves in this manner while the older visitors enjoyed themselves renewing old acquaintances. A shower scattered the crowd for a short time, when the steamers were taken possession of at the water's edge, but the rain was only of short duration and the programme was completed afterwards.

During the afternoon Father O'Leary occupied the chair and short addresses were delivered by Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., and Mr. Daniel O'Connell, of Peterborough.

Rose d'Erina in Washington.

Miss. Rose d'Erina and Mr Venton, so well and favorably known in Peterborough closed a very successful season in Washington, D C, during the past week. On Sunday the Solemnity of the Feast of Corpus Christi was observed in all the Catholic churches of the national capital. At St. Patrick's church the especial features were the beautiful procession of the children preceding the rev clergy bearing the Sacred Host and the singing of Miss. Rose d'Erina. Miss. d'Erina also played the Festival. After the service she held quite a reception of enthusiastic admirers. Miss. d'Erina and Mr Venton will probably spend the summer in Canada.

THE PACIFIC CABLE.

DIFFICULTIES OF CABLE LAYING IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN.

While They Are So Great as to Discourage Enterprise, Great Britain and Her Colonies Could Undertake the Work—The Proposed All-British Line—The United States Proposition.

Although ocean cables loop and overlap each other along the shores of the Pacific basin, as yet it is the one ocean whose deeps have not been subjugated by the long lines of copper and steel wires that gridiron the other oceans and annihilate time and distance. The difficulties that confront the cable companies in the Pacific are not unsurmountable, but they make up a total which is not encouraging to private enterprise. This great ocean is not only an ocean of magnificent distances, but also of magnificent depths, and in cable work it is the depths that count. Lines drawn across the Pacific along trade routes look simple enough, and do not seem at all formidable, but when one remembers that the ocean bottom under them may represent a sheer descent of 20,000 feet, a greater depth below the sea level than the height of Mt. Everest in the Himalayas is above it, some idea of what laying a Pacific cable means is given. Not only does the Pacific show some extreme depths, but the general level of its bed beneath the surface is about as far down as Pike's Peak rises in the air above sea level. Some experts figure out the general depth at 14,000 feet, others at 18,000. However, none of the selected cable routes are likely to strike a greater depth than about 20,000 feet, but this is nearly four miles down in the watery deeps!

While the depths are thus a concern, the distances are not slight along the two routes mapped out. The all-British route, which has been under discussion for 13 years, is to run from Vancouver, 3,360 nautical miles, to Fanning Island, south of Hawaii, thence 1,000 miles to Fiji, and 1,600 miles further to Brisbane, Queensland, Australia, via Norfolk Island. The American route on paper is a little longer. From San Francisco to Honolulu is 2,089 miles, thence to Wake Island, a little coral island in the mid-Pacific, which the United States owns, 2,000 miles, to Guam 1,980 miles, and to Manila 1,580 miles, nearly 7,000 in all. Just as Australia is connected with the Australasian and Asiatic cables, so Manila is in touch with the other land and water systems, by a line to Hongkong, 630 miles long.

So far as is known to-day, if the British Government decides to pay the subsidy which has been allotted to it by those who have planned the all-British Pacific cable, it will beat the United States up the cable-laying, since the last Congress refused to subsidize the Hawaiian cable, the first step in the trans-Pacific scheme.

Preliminary surveys are particularly important in the Pacific, as the bottom may drop down thousands of feet in a sort of chasm, leaving the cable hanging high in the water from cliff to cliff, either to be snapped by its own weight or to be broken by sharks and whales, or to be worn away by friction on the rocky cliff edges. Not only does the cable survey have to study the topography of the ocean floor, but, in order to insure the success of the cable, it must ascertain the chemical and biological condition of the water and its temperature at the bottom. To begin with, only by repeated soundings can the total length of cable be determined, as it fills not only the plains, but mountains and chasms, of the ocean bed, and thus, too, must be discovered the composition of that bottom on which the line must lie, for the cable must be made to harmonize or meet the conditions imposed by each locality.

From one shore end to the other a cable varies many, many times in its constitution to agree with the circumstances fixed by nature. Near the shore line and within the 100-fathom area there are vegetable growths that decompose and form sulfine, which will attack the iron sheathing of the cable. There, too, and even much deeper, currents may set up a constant erosion that will wear away the strongest armoring of steel wire, while even to a depth of a thousand fathoms may be found the minutest of foram capable of injuring the cable coatings of hemp and gutta percha. Only in the case of the deepest sea is the cable safe from harm, and even there the corruptive influence of mineral veins or deposits must be guarded against.

The temperature, too, must be known at the bottom not only as a warning of the life to be met there, but as a check against injury to the gutta percha through rises above 70 degrees, and this is not abnormal to a considerable depth in the tropics, and under the influence of certain of the ocean currents. The knowledge of the temperature has perhaps even a more vital importance as regards the transmission of messages, for the conductivity or power of the copper core to transmit electric impulses decreases as the temperature rises, so that away down in the icy depths of the sea the cable is doing better duty than that further up and within the direct influence of the sunlight.

When the first cables were laid in the experimental period from 1850 to 1860, when the Atlantic was first successfully bridged, the preliminary soundings were crudely made. Lord Kelvin introduced the use of wire instead of hempen rope in 1872, and made other improvements.

The Pacific, along the cable route from San Francisco to Honolulu, in one place dips about 8,400 feet to 18,800, and it is just such surprises of topography and other conditions that the survey must prepare for. In consequence cable laying is a rather costly job. To-day we have gotten over the mistakes of the past, however, and a modern cable is not a mere gutta percha covered wire, but a bundle of wires having a central copper core, surrounded by numerous layers of non-conducting material, hemp and gutta percha, and protected by steel wire wound spirally about it and in turn with this protected by waterproof wrappings.

THE MAKING OF GOLD BRICKS.

An Established Industry With Which the Law Does Not Interfere.

The making of the gold bricks with which confidence men rob the granger "come ons" and even smart merchants and bankers has become an established industry. It is not a crime to make a gold brick. The crime only comes in when the spurious article is sold. The value of the standard "brick" would be about $650 if composed of pure gold. The cost to the purchaser when the article is prepared for the market varies from $10 to $75 a brick, according to the value of the material used. The purchaser from the factory makes his terms with his victims.

"You want to know of the very best brick we turn out?" said a maker. "Well, the brick most likely to deceive is made from a copper and zinc mixture. It is not the most expensive, but it will stand knocking around for five years without losing tint or tone, and, I tell you, it's pretty near the real thing. Half a dollar's worth of gold is more than enough to do the job. Our science is known as water gilding because the last touch we give the brick is to chill it in iced water. We buy our gold in leaves from the banker. These leaves we place in a crucible with mercury, seven parts of mercury to one of gold. The mercury is first heated, and under the action of a furnace the mixture is made redhot. Then it is allowed to cool down. We squeeze the amalgam through chamois leather for the purpose of ejecting the superfluous mercury, and the gold, with twice its weight of mercury, remains behind. It is then a yellowish mass of the consistence of butter, and with this the metal is coated with a brush. This is the first step in turning the brick into gold.

"After receiving the first coat the brick is subjected to a strong heat for the purpose of evaporating the remaining mercury. It is then in fine form, but far from perfect. There will be little irregularities, and these are removed with a delicate touch brush. After the brushing a look of true golden tone is apparent, but we have an easy remedy for this. We coat the brick over with gilding wax, which is a preparation of red ocher, verdigris, alum and borax. Then the brick is again exposed to the action of fire till the wax is entirely burned away. It's real gold then, but we are bound to make it a few carats finer, so our customers can have no possible ground for questioning the quality of their treasure. We do this by covering it with a saline composition and again exposing it to a high temperature. It is finally chilled in cold water and is beautiful to look on—a perfect gold brick. It is proof against time, moisture and weather of all kinds and will stand constant handling for years without losing tone or luster. Goods made as I have described are guaranteed for five years."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

SCHOOL GIRLS' NERVES.

Many a pale, weak school girl, suffering the evil effects of an exhausted nervous system, and thin, watery blood, has been fully restored to the vigor and buoyancy of robust health, by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. The healthful glow on the cheek and the brightness in the eye tell of the building up process which is taking place in the body.

Hurt in His Foot.

Mr Dan McCabe, the pitcher of the baseball team, met with a painful accident a couple of evenings ago. He stepped on a nail projecting from a plank and it entered his foot for some distance inflicting a nasty wound. Dr. Moher attended to his injuries. He may not be able to be around for some days.

Former Dummer Pastor Wedded.

A quiet wedding took place at Belleville yesterday morning at the residence of Mr. John B. Robinson, Bleasington, when his daughter, Miss Annie Balsche Robinson, was wedded to Rev. W. H. Rodgers, Methodist pastor at Coboconk, and lately of South Dummer. Rev. Mr. Saxsmith performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by the immediate friends of the bride and groom.

Cuba's Many Names.

Cuba is known in history under several names. The first was Antilla; then Juana, after a Spanish prince. Fernandina came third, followed by Santiago and the Isle of Ave Maria. The original Indian name, Cubanacan, signifying "where gold is found," was finally adopted, and usage shortened it to the first two syllables.

Para received its name from its principal river, the Rio Para, upon which stands the ancient city of Pararo. The Brazilian term para, however modified, is at all times suggestive of a river.

Quebec is an Algonquin term signifying "take care of the rock."

MANY LIVES HAVE BEEN LOST.

Cloudburst in Texas and a Disastrous Landslide in Arkansas.

Austin, Texas, June 9.—By the cloudburst of Wednesday many people perished, meagre reports placing the number at 26. Yesterday's reports came from San Saba and Menardville, small towns 90 miles north of here in the mountains, saying that both towns had been swept by the raging floods, and were badly devastated. In San Saba eight people were drowned, and the entire town was reported under water last night. The river at that point is one mile wide, and running like a mill race.

At Menardville 18 houses were swept away, and 17 persons were drowned.

Twenty-Eight Buried Alive.

Little Rock, Ark., June 9.—It was reported here last night that a landslide occured at Ross Hollow, and engulfed 28 men, all of whom are supposed to have been killed. Ross Hollow is a pass between two small mountain ranges about 25 miles west of Little Rock, on the line of the Choctaw & Memphis Railroad, now under construction from Little Rock to Howe, I.T.

Shoe Company Goes Under.

EDMONTON TRAIL HORRORS.

200 Mining Prospectors Have Lost Their Lives by Drowning.

Vain Endeavor of American Miners to Reach the Yukon Gold Fields by the Canadian Route—It Is Hard to Find Out the Names—A Gruesome Story Brought From the North by the Steamer Lauzada.

Seattle, Wash., June 9.—The steamship Lauzada is in port from Wrangel, Alaska, with news of the death and suffering of American miners who tried to reach the Klondike gold fields over the all-Canadian route from Edmonton. Several parties reached Wrangel last week from the interior, after spending from 18 to 20 months on the road in a vain endeavor to reach the gold fields.

They say that no less than 200 prospective miners have lost their lives by drowning, starvation, exposure and freezing during the past winter. Most of those were Americans from the eastern States. Scurvy is now ravaging the miners who are stalled on the trail, and before relief can reach them many others will have died.

The Hudson Bay Company and the Northwest Mounted Police have started small relief expeditions from Telegraph Creek. Government action on a large scale will alone rescue hundreds who are unable to get out of the country by their own resources. The list of dead from various causes furnished by miners who have reached Wrangel numbers but 22. It is extremely difficult to secure names, although miners tell of many accidents which cost the lives of parties of five and ten.

Identified Dead.

The identified dead are: Drowned—C. B. Preston, Trenton, N.J.; Harry Hitchcock, Texas; F. L. Brenner, Brooklyn; F. Preston, Philadelphia; Capt. Mann, Alaska; C. P. Smith, St. Louis; H. P. Munson, Chicago.

Frozen—Dan Taylor, Nanaimo, B.C.; —— Hutton, Vancouver, B. C.; John Paine, Vancouver, B..C; —— Leighton, Victoria; H. Reardon, Cincinnati; J. P. McCrumm, Pittsburg; Robert Tonstle, New Mexico.

Scurvy—Fritz Klingman, Buffalo; James Monat, San Francisco; E. W. Thomas, Los Angeles.

Starvation—W. Z. Brock, P. Healy, Sault Ste. Marie.

Suicide — C. Richter, New York; Arthur M. Collins, British Columbia.

Exposure—Valentine Wendler, Philadelphia.

Fifty miners lost their lives by drowning on Great Slave Lake. Of these but three are known by name. The boats foundered when a great distance from shore and no one knows the identity of the unfortunate miners. Many others were drowned while fording various rivers. Boats were wrecked while trying to shoot the rapids of Mud, Liard and Nelson Rivers, and parties of from two to five were lost.

Fuller details of the deaths by scurvy, exposure and starvation will be had when a big party of miners, now fighting their way out of the country, arrive.

ALASKA BOUNDARY.

No Settlement Reached, But an Arrangement Made Which Is to Last for Two Years.

London, June 9.—The correspondent of the Associated Press learns upon high authority that the Alaskan modus vivendi does not imply that the boundary question has been settled, but simply that a temporary boundary has been arranged and will be preserved for two years, which interval will be available for the settlement of the main question at issue.

Pauncefote to the Hague.

London, June 9.—The Birmingham Post says it is asserted in official quarters that Sir Julian Pauncefote will leave The Hague as soon as the peace conference will permit, and come to London for the purpose of having an interview with Lord Salisbury and Ambassador Choate on the Alaskan boundary question. According to The Post, it is authoritatively said that much difficulty arises from the misinterpretation of a Canadian despatch on the subject, but the proposed discussion of the matter by the Premier and the two ambassadors will probably arrange this.

No Word of Henderson.

Ottawa, June 9.—The missing bank clerk, John H. Henderson, of the Union Bank, has not committed suicide, as has been rumored on the streets. At least that is the report of Detective John C. Gross of Montreal. No one saw him leave as any of the depots, and he was well known. After he spoke to a gentleman in the Russell House at 9.30 Monday morning he disappeared as completely as if the earth had swallowed him.

THE DANGEROUS SITUATION.

Reports From British Sources Concerning the Conference.

President Kruger Stood for Arbitration, But Sir Alfred Milner Would Not Listen to Introducing Any Foreign Element Into Affairs of the Transvaal—The Boer President's Other Qualifications Also Impossible of Acceptance.

London, June 9.—The advices received here yesterday from South Africa, emanating from British sources, show more completely the utter failure of the recent conference at Bloemfontein between President Kruger and the British high commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner.

The London afternoon newspapers all refer to the dangerous situation.

A despatch from Maijes Fontein says Sir Alfred Milner's proposals included granting the Uitlanders additional seats in the Rand district, and that President Kruger, under pressure, finally offered three additional seats. The British high commissioner thereupon pointed out the inadequacy of the President's proposals, adding that he had come to the conference in the hope of being able to inform Her Majesty's Government that the President of the Transvaal was prepared to afford such liberal measures of reform as would enable the Uitlanders to help themselves and relieve the Government of their obligations to intervene in order to redress particular grievances.

Throughout, it is added, President Kruger sought to use the franchise proposals as the means of obtaining a pretext to settle the differences under the convention by arbitration, and the British commissioner refused to frame the two subjects as interdependent, taking the ground that internal reform in the Transvaal was necessary in any case in order to preserve the independence of the republic, and, as regards arbitration, that those certain conditions upon which it could not be admitted, while on other questions arbitration was possibly admissible, provided a suitable tribunal was suggested, not involving the introduction of a foreign power, which the Government would never allow.

Mr. Chamberlain's Remarks.

In the House of Commons yesterday the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, replying to various questions on the subject, confirmed the reports of the failure of the Bloemfontein conference, and also admitted the accuracy of the statements made in the despatch from Maijes Fontein, explaining that the British high commissioner informed President Kruger that Great Britain would not consent to the intervention of a foreign power in Anglo-Transvaal disputes.

With reference to the Jameson raid, Mr. Chamberlain added, the commissioner informed the President that the British Chartered South Africa Company, while protesting against the unreasonable amount of the claim, would consent to submit to arbitration the question of the amount of damages to be paid.

Must There Be War?

London, June 9.—The morning papers are beginning to talk quite seriously of the possibility of war in South Africa. Mr. Chamberlain, in his speech in the House of Commons yesterday, announced that his reply to the petition of the Uitlanders, which had been held back pending the result of the conference at Bloemfontein, would now be presented to the Transvaal. This reply is semi-officially described as "explicit, but conciliatory," but it is believed to be in the nature of a practical ultimatum. The resources of diplomacy are regarded as exhausted with the failure of the conference. Nothing is left, it is felt, but a recourse to force.

Milner Has His Back to the Wall.

London, June 9.—The Daily Mail says it learns that it was President Kruger himself who suggested the conference, and it claims to have reliable authority for declaring that Sir Alfred Milner, the British high commissioner, has his back to the wall and is supported to the utmost by the Cabinet.

Commenting editorially on the situation, The Daily Mail says: "If we know

The majority of mankind employ their first years to make their last miserable. The exceptions to this rule are those who employ their first years to make their last happy by means of life assurance.

The man who is so unfortunate as to be unable to avail himself of the benefits of a policy in The Sun Life of Canada is entitled to all the sympathy he can get.

FRIDAY, JUNE 9, 1899.

THE Hamilton Methodist Conference has decided to abolish the billeting system. The feeling has been growing that the billeting system has to go, and no doubt other bodies will follow the lead of the Hamilton Conference.

WEST Peterborough's member, Mr. Kendry, was right in speaking out in the House of Commons for the G. T. R. trackmen in their demand for a fair wage, and he was also right in urging the Government to exert the power which is their's to bring about a satisfactory settlement of the difficulty.

THE Drummond County Railway discussion was mashed again, says the Montreal Gazette, by a refusal of the Government to give information as to the cost of works in connection with the road. It looks very much as if all the Ministers bothered to learn about their gold brick was the price the vendor sought for it.

THE Ottawa Free Press has a reference to Senate reform in a recent issue. This Grit talk of reforming the Senate has grown beautifully less of late when death was making vacancies in the Upper House that were being filled with good Grit friends, and the bad Tory majority was thus being slowly but surely wiped out. With a Grit majority in the Senate that would allow full scope to all kinds of deeds the necessity for reform would be gone so far as the Grits are concerned.

ONE of the few points agreed upon at the Peace Conference has been that the use of "dumdum" bullets has been prohibited. Now, some reader may ask what are "dumdum" bullets, and why were Italy and Great Britain two of the countries that voted against the prohibition of these bullets? For general information it may be explained that the "dumdum" bullet is one with a soft point, which when it meets with obstruction flattens and therefore has a much greater check. These bullets were first used in hunting big game, such as tigers and elephants, which it was found would rush on the four regardless of being bored by one of the small, hard bullets. The "dumdum" bullet was invented so that when the soft point flattened it made a more severe wound and the shock stopped the rush of the animal. Britain has found it necessary to a small extent to use these soft-pointed bullets in fighting the savage tribes of Africa, and Italy had also had experience with these savages, who were not stopped by the hole made in their body by an ordinary rifle ball. Thus it was probably that Britain and Italy voted against the prohibition of the soft-pointed or "dumdum" bullet.

Cayenne, French Guiana, June 9.—The despatch boat Gosland was sent to Devil's Island ahead of time by order of the Governor of French Guiana, leaving here at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. In addition, the Governor refused to all persons permission to go to the island by any other means of transportation.

NO STRIKE NOW.

Says Supt. McGuigan, Who Was in Toronto—Mass Meeting of Citizens Favor the Strikers.

Toronto, June 9.—The arrival of General Superintendent McGuigan and the holding of a big mass meeting in the interests of the trackmen were the new developments in the local situation of the Grand Trunk Railway trackmen's strike yesterday. The official said everything was running smoothly on the road, and that they have plenty of men. On the other hand, it was demonstrated at the meeting that public sympathy is with the strikers. It was addressed by Rev. J. B. Kennedy, Mayor Shaw, Ald. Woods, Dr. Lynd, Ald. Graham, Dr. Spence, Messrs. Evans, Clark, Bates, Rev. Father Minahan and others. President Low and F. Mahaney said they were willing to continue the fight, after which a strong resolution of sympathy with the strikers was passed, concluding with the words: "And in order to give effect to this resolution, we also pledge ourselves to do everything legitimate in our power to constrain the Grand Trunk Railway corporation to comply with which we believe so to the just demands of the trackmen."

Supt. McGuigan.

General Superintendent McGuigan was in the city yesterday on a tour of inspection over the line. It was his first visit to Toronto since the strike commenced. In answer to a question regarding the going out of the men he replied: "There is no strike so far as we are concerned. If anyone is on strike it is the politicians."

It was his opinion that the company were masters of the strike ever since it started.

"The road is well patrolled," he said, "and at no time were there less than 600 men employed on the tracks, and now 90 per cent. of the trackmen are working east of Kingston, while on the lines west of that point there are 60 per cent. on duty." Mr. Guigan wired a message to General Manager Hays last night that 75 per cent. of the old hands were now working on the Middle Division. The Northern Division, the officials say, is not in such a good working order. It was given out that unless the strikers returned in a few days all their places would be filled.

Officers Not Needed.

Windsor, Ont., June 9.—Constables Wilson and Lappan of Windsor went to St. Thomas Wednesday evening to accompany the non-union Grand Trunk Railway trackmen from that town to Windsor. The men, under the protection of the officers, were working along the line yesterday, and the strikers have made no disturbance.

Will the Government Do It?

Montreal, June 9.—There was nothing new in connection with the Grand Trunk trackmen last night. The executive claim that the men all stay out, and the company say they are getting all the men they require. Chairman Pole says that they expect the Government to take the matter up.

NOW IN THE CABINET.

Hon. Wm. Mulock Said to Be at the Bottom of the Trouble.

Montreal, June 9.—There is a report current here in political circles that a big row prevails in the Cabinet over the gerrymander bill. The Opposition, it is said, comes chiefly from Ontario, and Hon. Mr. William Mulock is credited with being at the bottom of the trouble.

A French-Canadian Liberal, who returned from Ottawa yesterday, declares that the Postmaster-General purposely absented himself from the House the day the bill was introduced, the task thus devolving upon the Prime Minister.

MADE MR. BLAIR BACK WATER

But the Opposition Had to Sit Up All Night to Do It.

At One o'Clock Thursday They Brought the Minister to His Senses, and He Brought Down the Necessary Information—The Figures Were Those Regarding the Grand Trunk Lease Bill.

OTTAWA, June 9.—Theoretically speaking, the House was not in session yesterday, but as a matter of fact it sat from 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon until 6 o'clock last evening, with a recess of an hour and a half for luncheon yesterday. This, however, all counts as Wednesday's session of the House. The House went into committee on the Grand Trunk lease bill, and thanks to the bull-headed obstinacy of Mr. Blair in refusing to give information to which the Opposition was clearly entitled, the House sat all night, and until past mid-day yesterday, when Mr. Blair yielded and gave the information required. The tactics adopted by the Opposition were not in any sense for the purpose of obstruction. It was a fight for a principle. The principle involved was that of Parliamentary government by Parliament, and not by the Government, which is simply a committee of Parliament, and that the Government is bound to supply to Parliament any information it possesses with respect to any question involving an expenditure of public money.

The Point at Issue.

The particular point at issue was with regard to the proposition borne by the Intercolonial Railway of the terminal facilities of the Grand Trunk, which were covered by the lease under consideration. Mr. Borden asked for the details, and Mr. Blair flatly refused to give them. The Opposition persisted in its efforts, and after a long and wearisome night session, Mr. Blair was over-persuaded by his colleagues, several of whom were strongly opposed to his course, and about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon he gave in.

Mr. Blair Gives Up.

Mr. Blair said he had received a telegram a few minutes ago, dated June 8, under the heading: "Montreal Joint Section, Combined Engine and Car Mileage." Taking the Grand Trunk and the Intercolonial, he would give the percentages of the Intercolonial for the last six months, for which these accounts were available, from a point between St. Lambert and Point St. Charles, which was the first division, and the accounts were made up from November to April last, the percentage of the Intercolonial being: November 12.61, December 10.46, January 9.49, February 10.65, March 11.60 and April 14.61. All this information was made up in different sections, and the next section was from St. Lambert to St. Hyacinthe, which was the general division of the G.T.R., but did not take in St. Rosalie. The Intercolonial percentages were. November 20.90, December 16.90, January 14.69, February 16.16, March 16.44, April 20.73. From St. Rosalie to St. Hyacinthe: November 22.02, December 17.13, January 15.60, February 16.88, March 19.40, April 20.07. On the Chaudiere branch: November 62.30, December 70.98, January 60.66, February 63.69, March 66.64, April 70.61. They would find instead of the combined mileage of the Intercolonial system being only in the neighborhood of 5, 4 or 5 per cent., is averaged over 24 per cent., in fact something like 27 per cent.

Actual Cash Matters.

He had a statement also showing the actual cash matters as to the line between St. Lambert and St. Rosalie, for which they had acquired a title or lease of half the profits. Between March 1, 1898, and March 1, 1899, $66,188 in the gross represented the amount the Grand Trunk was paid, and of which amount the Intercolonial's share was $16,143. The Intercolonial percentage was 26.40. The total amounts paid by the Grand Trunk, including salaries, was $16,961, of which the Intercolonial share was $4,813, and on which the Intercolonial percentage of the whole was 13.91, or nearly 28 per cent. For repairs at stations, operating section, and other expenses the Intercolonial share was $18,566. The Grand Trunk, including the Intercolonial, for maintenance, repairs and operating expenses was $73,094 on a percentage over 26 per cent.

The Struggle Ended.

This practically ended the struggle. By agreement the committee of the House remained in committee, took a recess until 5 o'clock, when the discussion of the bill was resumed and continued till 10 minutes to 8, when the bill was reported without amendment, and stands for third reading next week, Mr. Blair having promised to supply some further information which the Opposition had asked for.

In Supply Again.

The House immediately went into committee of supply, and resumed the consideration of the last of the votes for the Marine and Fisheries Department. After an hour's discussion the item for the fisheries service branch was allowed to pass, on the understanding that when concurrence is reached a motion will be made to reduce it by $5,000, which is the amount asked for this year in excess of last year's vote. The House then adjourned until 3 o'clock to-day.

THE SENATE.

Ottawa, June 9.—In the Senate yesterday afternoon Senator Power moved that when the Senate adjourns to-day it stands adjourned until Tuesday next. After debate, the motion for the adjournment was adopted.

In committee on the bill to further amend the Adulteration Act, Sir William Ringston stated that the bill simply made law of a system which already existed. All prescriptions were now made under the British Pharmacopoeia. The colonies had been endeavoring to secure uniformity in the matter of pharmacopoeia, Canada taking a leading part. The bill was reported without amendment.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell asked whether any correspondence had taken place between the Federal and Provincial Governments relative to the adoption by some of the Local Legislatures of amendments of their election laws, giving voters the right of appeal from the decision of the revising officers to the judges.

Hon. David Mills promised to look into the matter.

The Senate adjourned at a quarter past 5.

LUDGATE SIGNS.

Deadman's Island Squabble Wearied Him—Gone to Puget Sound.

Vancouver, B.C., June 9.—Theodore Ludgate says he is tired of waiting for lawyers to settle the squabble over Deadman's Island, and he left for Puget Sound yesterday morning to find a location for a saw mill on the American side. Meanwhile another claimant for Deadman's Island has turned up in the person of John Collier, who says his father purchased the island in 1843.

A Fleeter at Leamington.

Leamington, Ont., June 9.—About 10 o'clock yesterday morning the body of a man came ashore here, and was first discovered by Charles Pearce and Peter Ives. Coroner Chamberlain was at once notified, who examined the body and found it to have been that of a man about 5 feet 6 inches in height, weight about 160. He was unrecognizable, the flesh being badly worn off. The body is supposed to be that of one of those who were drowned crossing from Kingsmill to Pelee Island last fall, when Barnes, Hooper and White, with the two Miss Hoopers, were drowned. Barnes came ashore lashed to the boat, but the bodies of the others were never recovered, and this is supposed to be the body of either Hooper or White.

Wealthy Rochester Killed by Lightning.

Mitchell, Ont., June 9.—A very sudden call came to Mr. Dan McCarthy of Logan on Wednesday about 6 o'clock in the evening. McCarthy, with a hired man, was filling manure in the stable yard as a storm came up with several heavy flashes of lightning. One flash came very near where the men were working, and Mr. McCarthy remarked that they had better get away from there. The words were scarcely out of his mouth before the fatal stroke came. The current seemed to have struck Mr. McCarthy on the temple, as a distinct mark is made there. Deceased was 45 years of age, unmarried and the well-to-do owner of a 200-acre farm.

Anybody That Can Carry a Gun.

New York, June 9.—It was said at the United States recruiting office yesterday that an order had been received to get as many white recruits for the Philippines as possible. No definite number was stated. The official order reads as follows: "Make all enlistments you can—infantry, light artillery and heavy artillery—for the Philippines. Select men wanted."

Will Have to Lose a Leg.

Belleville, Ont., June 9.—Whilst stealing a ride on the G.T.R. city line yesterday afternoon Willie Goyne was thrown from an oil tank car by a sudden jolt and, the wheels passing partly over his leg, crushed it above and below the knee. He was removed to the hospital, where he lies in a very weak condition. Amputation will have to be performed.

Sham Fight in London.

London, Ont., June 9.—The camp on Carling Heights is fast drawing to a close and by Saturday all the men will have left the city. It has been a decided success in every way. The sham fight, which took place along the north branch of the river yesterday, was the most practical and the most realistic ever held in this military district.

MRS. ANDERSON'S BABY.

You couldn't convince Mrs. Anderson that Cupid ever was as pretty as her little girl.

Mrs. H. C. Anderson is well known in South Britain, Conn., where she lives. She is very enthusiastic about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription although no more so than thousands of other women who have been similarly benefited. She writes:

"During the first month of the period of gestation I could not keep anything on my stomach. I was in bed the fifth of June and never got up till the first of August. I tried different doctors, but with little benefit. I began to take your 'Favorite Prescription' in November and had a nice little baby girl in February following. I was only in hard labor about one hour and was up and dressed on the eighth day. I never had the doctor with me at all; just the nurse and two friends. This makes my second child; with the first one I did not take the 'Favorite Prescription,' and the little one was sick all the time and lived just about two months. This last baby is as plump and healthy as any mother could wish. She is about three weeks old now and is gaining in flesh every day."

Mothers who suffer undue pain prior to or succeeding the baby's birth are invited to consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, by letter, absolutely without charge. The great success which has attended the careful methods pursued by Dr. Pierce, has caused imitators to spring up, who make offers of free advice, which they are not competent to give, not being physicians. When you are invited to "write to a woman," ask the simple question, "Is this woman a physician?" You will find that she is not, and does not, and dares not claim to be, a physician. To offer such advice is deceitful. To receive it is dangerous.

Prospective mothers should send for a free copy of Dr. Pierce's great 1,008 page book the "Common Sense Medical Adviser." A copy in paper-covers will be sent on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay cost of customs and mailing only; in cloth-binding 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Overwhelming Montreal Scoop.

Another streak of Good Luck enabled us, last week, to rake in what is, perhaps, the most fortunate scoop of the most Up-to-Date Clothing, which has ever come our way since starting business in Peterborough.

The McKenna-Thompson Co. of Montreal

the Premier Wholesale Clothing Manufacturers of Canada, were in search of a safe outlet for an over production of Spring and Summer Weight Suits. They had to have prompt cash as well as a prompt clearance, in order to secure warehouse room for their winter manufactures. They were willing to stand a pretty big shrinkage in prices to accomplish their object, and Gough Bros' "had the call". We made our little bid, and stuck to it, capturing the whole mangnificent lot of

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, JUNE 9, 1899.

Queen Victoria is a great lover of bull-finches and has a number whose pretty tricks and charming piping give her great pleasure. To ensure the safety of her majesty's little feathered pets it is forbidden to any one to have a cat in the royal household—at least, any one whose apartments is at all near the queen's.

Grand Duke Constantine of Russia recently acted the part of Hamlet in a translation of his own from Shakespeare before the czar and czarina and the Russian court. The grand duke's conception of the part was quite original, and his portrayal of the character differed from that usually seen on the stage.

PITH AND POINT.

The combination of a safe is an open secret.

A counterfeit coin may be lead, but it's hard to push.

Any man who is engaged in business is a fortune hunter.

The bad actor is neither more nor less than a stage robber.

The plumber is the only man who is really benefited by hitting the pipe.

As a rule the man who is unable to trust himself displays pretty sound judgment.

A man is a bachelor until he marries; then he is whatever his wife chooses to call him.

When a man knows he is a fool, he knows more than some people give him credit for.

If a man lets his beard grow, people say he is too stingy to patronize a barber, and if he shaves daily they say it's because he is getting gray.—Chicago News.

What She Said.

Mrs. R Peck, S 15th street, New York City, visited Canada last year, and had the good fortune to pick up something which not only suited her, but her neighbors also. Writing the manufacturer of Nervoline she says:—"I bought three bottles of Nervoline while in Canada and treated my neighbors to some of it, and all think it the best medicine for internal or external pain they have ever used." Nervoline deserves such a commendation, for it is a most powerful painbreaking, and certain remedy for pain of all kinds. Take no substitute.

THINKS LIKE A MAN.

THIS IS WHAT BOZZIE, THE WONDERFUL DOG, DOES.

More Than This, He Will Give You an Hour's Seance, and Send You Home With an Ache in Your Head and a Vacuous Feeling That Accompanies the Occult.

If the London Society for Psychic Research desires some material for investigation and experiment more promising than ghosts, let them see Bozzie. Bozzie is a dog that thinks like a man. Not only that. Bozzie is a dog that will give you half an hour's seance and send you home with an ache in your head and that miserable feeling of vacuity that always accompanies the occult and mysterious and uncanny. Yet Bozzie is a loveable dog withal, and your first wish after seeing her is to have yourself a dog like her who loves you as she does her master, George R. Clason of Chicago, Ill.

Perhaps the reader will not believe what is here written down, and small blame to him. It is hard enough to believe that even a human being could do what Bozzie does, but the matters set down here are matters of fact, says The Times-Herald, and some day may be explained when science has learned more than it now knows about those subtle forces that are only in the present time engaging the attention of scientific men.

Bozzie is a beautiful black Scotch collie, with white breast, white feet, white nose and white tail tip. She is the daughter of Ben, the famous collie that amazed the kings and queens and princes of Europe a few years ago. Wonderful as was Ben, his child outstrips him in intelligence and intuition. But let us see what Bozzie can do.

Mr. Clason during a visit the other day with his wonderful dog gave an exhibition for the benefit of the others. Four men were sitting in the room.

"Bozzie," said Mr. Clason, "how many men are in the room?"

In response came four sharp barks. Now, be it observed that Mr. Clason does not practice the signal system, such as was used by the famous Sioux. A little thought will show this to be necessarily true. For if a dog could work with the signal system the fact would be still more marvellous than what she does, as meaning that a dog's intellect is as capable as is man's, which is, of course, nonsense.

Bozzie simply counted the number, and not having the vocal apparatus to enable her to say "four," communicated the number after her own fashion.

Examples of what Bozzie can do in mental arithmetic were also given. Bozzie has no stage setting, no apparatus, nothing but her own sharp intellect. Nor is it necessary that her master shall do the questioning. One of the persons present at the matinee the other day was so persistent in his skepticism that Bozzie's master turned that very modest little animal to the doubter, who questioned her himself and was floored. Still he doubted. There are times when one doubts the evidence of his own senses, and this was one of them. Mr. Clason, seeing he had an unusually stubborn subject to deal with, suggested that all possibility of signaling be eliminated. The skeptic and another of the party retired from the room and closed the door. One of them wrote down on a bit of paper the figure "4" as his own number and the figure "6" as the number selected by the other. Then the skeptic called out, after opening the door:

"Bozzie, what numbers are on this paper?"

The dog barked four times, then paused, and then barked five times. The first answer was right, the second wrong. But the man who selected "6" insisted that the dog was right. The written figure was shown and the "6" man explained: "But you made a mistake. I said '5,' or at least I was thinking of '5.'"

This disclosed a power in the dog the claim for which seemed preposterous. A mind-reading dog! Absurd!

But Bozzie is really and truly a mind-reader. The skeptic was requested to think of a number and ask the dog to tell it. He thought of "4," and Bozzie gave four barks. Then he thought of "2," and Bozzie barked twice. This was at least embarrassing. The doubter was placed in the position of admitting that Bozzie could know that he was thinking of or denying that he had thought of the numbers Bozzie told. The truth was a secret that was locked up in the minds of the man and of the dog. But the honest, plain truth is that the dog was right.

Yet the cap of this [illegible] climax was still to come. The office boy, John Lick, one of the brightest boys in Chicago, had observed Bozzie's performance with open eyes and admiration. The collie's master invited the little fellow to place his hand on Bozzie's head and think of his own age. Now, no one but John knew John's age. That is, no one but John and Bozzie, and the latter, strange creature, immediately began to bark until she had counted 13. John admitted the collie was correct. That was his age. Then the skeptic placed his hand on Bozzie's head and thought of the number four, but instantly changed it to three. His hand had scarce touched the dog before she began to bark. She first counted three, then hesitated a moment, and added one bark more. A longer pause and three were counted in sharp, loud barks, with every expression of certainty.

"You thought of seven," said her master.

"No," replied the skeptic, "I thought of four first and then of three. The dog knows."

In arithmetic Bozzie is as expert as any school child of 9 or 10 years old. She can multiply, divide, subtract and add with a quickness that is not to be found even among very bright children of the years named. But, while her mathematical accomplishments are really very fine, they are commonplace beside her capacity for thought transference.

Struck a Barn.

Stolen Horse and Buggy.

Chief Rossel has received a card from the Bowmanville Chief of Police asking him to be on the lookout for a horse and buggy stolen from Cartwright township early in the week. The animal is a bright bay mare 11 years old, 15 hands high. The rig is an open square box buggy. Two tramps are suspected.

Children Cry for CASTORIA.

THE STORM.

Some Effects of the Storms of Monday and Tuesday in the Country.

On Tuesday afternoon last, Mr. Wm. Rosseborough, of Smith, had his barn blown over by a big wind storm. The barn had been raised on posts about seven feet from the ground preparatory to having a stone wall built under it, when the storm came along, blowing it over and smashing it up. The building is a total loss.

On Monday afternoon last a terrific hail and wind storm was experienced at Stony lake. The steamer Sunbeam was on her way to Burleigh at the time and had all the windows in the pilot house broken by the hail. In Lakefield very little hail fell but the wind was very strong.

On Monday night of last week, Mr. J. J. Northey, of Smith, had an experience with lightning which he will not soon forget. He was in a field working when a storm came up, and he hastened to the barn for shelter. While he was engaged in taking the harness off his horse lightning stripped the harness off the horse, throwing it against the wall of the barn. He was thrown down and stunned by the shock. On recovering he experienced no ill effects from the shock. On the same day Mr. Walter Rosseborough, of Smith, while engaged in putting a stick of wood in the stove, also had an experience. The lightning came down the chimney, and striking him, threw him across the stove. Fortunately there was very little fire in the stove at the time, and he escaped uninjured.—Lakefield News.

The returns of the Fitzsimmons-Jeffries fight will be given at The Palace to-night.

MEN WHO FLY.

The Law of Gravitation a Dead Letter with These Champions.

No two performers on earth are attracting greater attention just now Dupres and Delmar, the international aerial champions, whose first American appearance is being made this season with the combined Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' circuses, which will come here Saturday, June 24th. They were induced to come across the great pond only after extended negotiations and the offer of a fabulous salary, which is without doubt the biggest money ever paid two gymnastic experts. The act which made them famous the world over includes extremely sensational single and triple somersaults from the pendulating trapeze to the net beneath, and other almost incredible feats which have created the profoundest impression everywhere seen. This and other astonishing features fully justified the New York dailies in pronouncing the Forepaugh-Sells performance the greatest of the century.

FIELD OF GENERAL SPORT

Wheeling.

The next run of the C.G.E. bicycle club will be to Chemong park on Saturday, June 10th, leaving the Central park at 2 p.m. sharp. All the wheely men of the factories are invited to turn out. Base-ball and bathing.

Football.

On Saturday evening the Otonabee football team will play against the Allandale team in the East Nicholls park. Game starts at 5.30. The Allandale eleven are a strong team and a good game is expected.

Baseball.

What promises to be a warm baseball match will take place at the P.A.A.A. grounds to-morrow afternoon, the gong sounding at 3 o'clock, when the Peterboroughs will take on the fast Argyles, of Toronto. The latter club has a big reputation and the home team is making one. The Argyles recently defeated the Toronto Varsity team by three runs to two in a spectacular game but the boys will try to serve up the defeat to the city men to-morrow. They expect at the least to corral a fair share of whatever runs are to be found around. The team has been practicing faithfully and thinking hard all week and show an improvement in their general play. It will be a great feather in their hat if they defeat the visitors.

All that is wanted to make the match a success is a big crowd of spectators. The managers of the game are somewhat up against it in that baseball has been dead in town for a couple of years. But they know it is a good game and are making heroic efforts to revive it. They have done well so far and are hoping to do better. The match to-morrow can be seen from any part of the bleachers by gents for the small fee of fifteen cents and by ladies for nothing. Of course the game will be worth as much to ladies as to the other fans but the management think the presence of the ladies is worth something also and so they are all invited to come and admire free of cost.

Everybody that can spare an hour and a half on Saturday afternoon is requested to see the match. They are also asked not to view the game from the fences, though this is a somewhat fashionable mode, but to walk in at the front gate and pay the little fee. Fences and side gates will be guarded by officers. The charge is made low so as to prohibit no one but rather to encourage the multitude to come.

As will be seen there are some changes in the personnel of the team, which are expected to add to its strength. The match will be called at 3 sharp.

The following will represent the Peterborough team against the fast Argyles of Toronto to-morrow at 3 p. m., on the P.A.A.A. grounds:—Johnston lb, Melrose 2b, Parnell ss, Sheridan 3b, Thompson lf, Grady cf, DaRussia or Donovan rf, Connors and McCabe p, C. Graham c, Paxman and Raley utility men.

Arm Crushed.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr John McCormick had his arm severely crushed below the elbow while working on the canal at Lakefield. He was engaged at the concrete plant when the car came along, and before he could get out of the way it caught his arm and crushed it against the dry box. The arm is very severely bruised and he will not be able to use it for a while.

SOME OUTSIDE MEN WERE BROUGHT IN

FROM MONTREAL TO TAKE THE PLACE OF LOCAL STRIKERS.

The Only Man Who Could Talk English Quit When Approached by the Strikers—Others Were Evidently Expected.

The new features of the G.T.R. trackmen's strike locally was the arrival in town this morning of a gang of five men from Montreal to take the place of strikers on the road in this division. The party came up on the Belleville train. They included two detectives, a boss and five men. They were all French-Canadians except one man, John Gilmore, who could talk English and who when interviewed by the local strikers decided to quit work and he went away with the strikers. Gilmore says he was to receive $1.25 a day, with $2 deducted for board. These Montreal men went down the line towards Belleville with the detectives and boss on what the strikers call "the scab train," being one that runs out every day to take the "scab" men down the line.

The men think that the officials expected a big crowd of men from the east, as preparations had been made for one hundred and fifty or more. A special train was here from Lindsay, provisioned with bread and meat, ready to take the men out over the Midland, but the men did not arrive.

The man Gilmore says it is hard to get men in Montreal because work is plentiful down there. When he left he said he understood that the strike was over but that they were short of men. He readily quit the job when he learned the facts here. The other men with him could not be communicated with as they could not talk English.

It is said that a down train on the Midland was stopped by a boy near Best's station who found a broken rail, and with a lantern covered with a red cloth stopped the train to prevent accident.

Local men, it is said, were offered $1.50 a day and board to go to work on the line.

A PUBLIC MEETING.

A public meeting under the auspices of the Brotherhood of Railway Trackmen will be held to-morrow night in the Sons of England hall where the strike will be discussed. The clergy and leading citizens will be there and the public are invited to attend.

THE EXCURSION.

The Trip Made to the Experimental Farm at Guelph.

The excursion of the West and East Peterborough Farmers' Institutes to Guelph held yesterday via the Grand Trunk was attended by about two hundred and twenty-five excursionists. Numbers also went up by the O.P.R., which gave the same rates.

At Guelph the majority of the excursionists went out to the experimental farm, and saw the sights of the institution. They were first taken in charge by Prof. Hewitz, who showed them the experimental plots, etc. Then the Superintendent took them in hand and showed them the cattle, etc. Lunch was supplied the visitors.

Many of the Peterborough people took in the sights of Guelph, among these being Aldermen Langford, who was keeping an eye open for municipal experience and information.

The excursionists arrived home at 11.45.

Four of the Smith Council went to Hamilton on a tour of inspection having in view the purchase of a steam rock crusher. They want a portable machine.

Poisoning Dogs.

—An epidemic of dog poisoning seems to have struck the village just now, hardly a week passing but what one or more valuable dogs are poisoned. The miscreants who do such dastardly work should be speedily brought to justice and have the full measure of the law meted out to them. An effort is being made to find the guilty parties, and if found they will experience the vengeance of the owners of the dogs.—Lakefield News.

DEPUTATION EN ROUTE

To Ottawa to Ask for a Grant to Aid the Haliburton and Mattawa Railway.

Last night a considerable deputation representing the county of Victoria stepped off the G T R train and spent a couple of hours in town awaiting the arrival of the C P R train going east. The deputation comprised the Warden, Mr R Bryans, and Councillors Geo Johnston, W Channon, W C Switzer, T H McQuade, Morgan Johns, J A Ellis and Jas Graham. Mr J R McNeillie, assistant county clerk and treasurer, and Mr C D Barr, Registrar, accompanied the deputation.

The object of the trip was to lay the claims before the Government and to ask for a grant in aid of the Haliburton and Mattawa railway. The gentlemen were confident that they had a good case and that the enterprise was one that would commend itself.

They will return Saturday morning, when the County Council, which was in session at Lindsay, will resume and close up business.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female disease quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough.

THE HORSE REVIEW.

Over 150 stalls have been let at the Hartford track.

It is said that Zombro, 2:11, weighs 1,214 pounds in his stud condition.

There will be no racing in Montana this year either by thoroughbreds or harness horses.

The giant Sultan gelding Mazal, 2:09¼, who was a sensation in 1897 and in the hospital last year, is to be raced again.

John Smatheran of West Salem, O., has a green pacing mare by Star Pointer which is reported to have shown a mile in 2:16.

According to the Year Book, the sons of George Wilkes have sired precisely 2,000 performers with standard speed at the close of 1898.

The Terre Haute stallion Ray Wilkes, 2:14½, by Jersey Wilkes—Edith Hambletonian, by Revelle, 2:21¾, is tipped off as a sure 2:10 trotter.

The 4-year-old sister of Egosen, 2:06¼, by Egotist, in Charles Van Meter's string at Louisville, has been named Egosena. She is green and reported fast.

Antitoxin has been tried recently for lockjaw with wonderful success, and it bids fair to in large measure reduce the percentage of fatalities from this dread disease.

W. H. McCarthy will trot Ann Mace, by Robert McGregor, again this season. She began her turf career in 1894 and is still eligible to the 2:30 class, although she has trotted many fast heats.

Better things are expected of Vyrant, 2:17¼, this year. He has learned to get away from the wire, thus overcoming a fault which seriously handicaps a horse when the clip is better than 2:16.

The bay gelding Walter Wilkes, 2:19¼, pacing, by Ethan Wilkes, is owned by Mrs. O. T. Sartewell, Canton, O. He is said to have a very peculiar mark, consisting of a spot on his left hind quarter that always looks as if it was wet.

THE HONEY MAKERS.

The queen is the mother of all the bees in the hive. She must lay rapidly.

The first honey of any account in the spring comes from the golden willow.

Rosin should never be used to fasten in the foundations. It spoils the combs.

There is no danger of communicating foul brood to a hive by the use of comb foundation.

Syrups, sections when the propolis is brittle rather than tit, a warm room or on a warm day.

Winter dysentery or dysentery may originate from impure honey or from long confinement.

It requires only a little capital to commence in beekeeping, two or three colonies being enough.

The paralysis develops very slowly. Often bees showing symptoms in the fall do not die till spring.

As soon as deep cell foundation is given to the bees they begin to thin down the walls to natural thickness.

Put the frames and sections near enough together to prevent the bees from building bridges from one to the other.

Honey from a hive infested with foul brood should never be given to bees in a healthy hive until it has been boiled.

There are several advantages in using drawn comb. The bees will commence sooner and finish sooner and are not so prone to leave the case.—St. Louis Republic.

The Miserable Moors.

The lives lived by the Moors are without perhaps any exception the most precarious and miserable that can be imagined. The poor man is thrown into prison for sums he never possessed and can never pay, the rich to be squeezed of all he possesses, while those only can hope to escape who are members of families sufficiently powerful to arouse the fears of the local governor should he attempt extortion and not sufficiently powerful to stir up the jealousy and avarice of the sultan.

Even the governors of the provinces suffer themselves as they make others suffer, for just as they squeeze the agriculturist and the peasant so are they in turn squeezed by the sultan and his viziers, and, should they fail by constant presents to maintain a good opinion at the court, they can expect only imprisonment and often death.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Fatal Wedding

By BERTHA M. CLAY.

Author of "Dr. Her Wedding Morn," "Which Loved Him Best," Story of a Wedding Ring," "Between Two Loves," Etc.

"I never wish," she replied, gently. "We Jocelyns are brought up to respect all vows. 'Those whom God has joined together let no man put asunder.'"

And as she said the words, they came home to her with terrible meaning. Had God joined them?—who bade children obey their parents, and forbid the making of idols? She had been guilty of both sins; she had disobeyed the father whose life had been given to her—she had made an idol of the man who, seen in his true light, was false, meaner, and more sordid than any other man.

The white arms were often stained with dark bruises, the pale face swelled and livid with weeping. There were nights when she buried her head in the pillow, and wept until morning dawned—wept in an anguish of sorrow that knew no words; never when he was near. She knew it annoyed and irritated him, and she would not anger him wilfully for the world.

She learned brave lessons in those days. In after years she owned to herself the discipline had been terrible, but needed, which changed her from a light, careless, impatient child, to a patient, thoughtful woman.

People around her all treated her with a silent sympathy. They saw plainly enough, but it was not of themselves; they read a sad, strange story in her every feature.

After a time, actual want stared her in the face. Lyster, always careless where other people were concerned, often went away, leaving her with little money—not sufficient to purchase food until he returned. So Sybil began to work herself. She made pretty little articles, and sold them. She found two little pupils for music and drawing. She, who had so ill-submitted to be taught, whose capricious humors had caused the dismissal of governesses and masters without end—she in her turn was thankful to be able to teach.

But for constant work, she must have sunk under her troubles; as it was, she lived and did brave battle with them. Unkindness and cruelty did their worst; neglect and indifference, taunts and insults were added to them, and Sybil Ayrton learned the great lesson taught in such eloquent words: "To live, and live bravely; to bear, and be bold."

Letters from England, the constant kindness of Irene and Sir Rupert, her father's loving messages, were the only gleams of sunlight the poor child ever knew. But the time was coming when her troubles seemed to be ending, and the dark cloud to show its silver lining at last.

Sybil Ayrton, the spirited daughter of a spirited race, was not of the Spanish order of women—she could not love the cowardly hand that struck her; it was not in her to love anything mean or sordid. When she found out what her husband really was—when she saw the base, ungenerous nature stripped bare—all love died in her heart, and died so completely that nothing could ever bring it to life again. She did her duty; she buried his faults and her misery in the depths of her own heart—too loyal and true for aught else. Only her Maker knew what Sybil Ayrton suffered; she never told it to human ears, least of all to those who loved her so well.

One morning, when Lyster had been at home for a week—perhaps the most miserable of her wretched life—he told her that he was about joining an expedition up the country, and should not return, probably, for some months. She knew the men he was going with—James Slater and Frank Hunt, two comrades with whom, of late, he had passed most of his time. She liked to remember afterward that, as he was leaving the house, she went up to him and raised her fair, patient face to his, praying, "God bless him and bring him safely home." She liked to remember that he had kissed her as he had not done for long years, with something of the old, gay, graceful Lyster about him, so that she set about her work cheerfully; not hoping—for she had ceased to hope—but thinking that perhaps, in years to come, life might be a little more endurable than it was now.

He was gone many weeks, and she never heard of or from him; but one morning, as she sat busily at work, thinking of Glynn and the old life that lay so far behind her, James Slater, her husband's friend, came to the house and asked to see her.

She guessed his errand when she saw his face, and she was not wrong, for he had come to tell her that her husband, Lyster Ayrton, had been slain in a fight with the natives, long miles away.

The man looked shocked and sorry. He told her how it all happened. They were going peaceably enough to a place called the Golden Valley, when they were attacked. There was a sharp, short fight; Lyster Ayrton was killed, and lay under the scented bushes.

"It grieved me," the man said, "that I could not give even a heathen's burial to my old friend; but I was taken prisoner, and had to leave him lying where he was. I only made my escape two weeks ago, and I came straight to tell you. He fell dead, Mrs. Ayrton, without a word—there was not even time for a cry."

She was glad to remember, in that hour, that her last words had been a blessing and a prayer.

The next day the story of the murder of Lyster Ayrton was told in the Wild ness Gazette, then all memory of the man, save in her loyal heart, died away.

CHAPTER XXII.

"ONCE MORE IN HER FATHER'S ARMS."

Sybil Ayrton mourned for her husband as good women and true mourn for the man they love, be his death of body or soul. Had Lyster Ayrton died before their marriage, or during the one perfectly happy week that followed it, she would never have forgotten him; but the Lyster she loved, the hero she had worshiped, had been so long dead to her that the fact of her never seeing him again did not pain and grieve her.

It is a terrible thing when the death of a husband is a relief to the wife. It must have been so to Sybil Ayrton. She never owned it—she never allowed the thought to enter her mind. She wept for him, shuddering as she remembered the misery of long years. She covered her golden hair with a widow's cap; she shrouded her slender figure in heavy mourning; she tried to forget the squalid misery, the poverty, the loathing, the coarse violence, the oaths and curses of the latter time, and remember him only as the fair-haired soldier, as she had known him at Glynn. She would not admit the belief—she would not own it as such—but it was something to remember that there was no need now to dread anathemas and blows, to feel that the free, pure breath of heaven blew over her once more.

She wrote at once to the squire and told him of her husband's death. She sent the paper narrating the incident, and awaited his reply in silent suspense. There was little need to have dreaded it. What could it be but a loving summons home, where they longed to receive her, where they longed to lay her wearied head down to rest, to comfort the tired heart, to heal the deep wounds, to raise the drooping spirits?

They sent her more money than she could use, and bade her come quickly home.

It is a terrible thing when the death of one man brings happiness to another. It was so, however. Of course, the squire was sorry. He spoke pityingly of the useless, reckless life and cruel death. Yet that death freed his darling from tyranny and oppression; it rescued her from poverty, labor, cruelty, and restored her to those who loved her so well.

They spoke of him in low whispers; they deplored the fate of one who might have been better and a happier man; but they rejoiced that she was restored to them for whom their hearts yearned.

What Sir Rupert thought when he heard the news no one ever knew; but the squire saw his very youth seemed renewed.

One warm, dreamy evening, at the end of May, they expected her home. It was six years since she had left them—so sadly lured away. The squire would have gone to Liverpool to meet the vessel, but Irene, fearful for him, persuaded him to remain at home. His state of mind was something pitiable to see; three times he had wandered into her rooms, all ready for her, to see if all was as it should be.

"There was to be no difference," he said, tremblingly—"no difference at all. She must find everything just as she had left it."

Dinner was delayed for her; he would have it so. He would have had all the world do honor to his darling who was coming back to him.

Good taste, and not inclination, induced Sir Rupert to keep away. He felt instinctively that the first sight of him might be painful to her; and though he hungered and thirsted for one look at the face he loved so well, he would not go near. Irene promised to write, to send him word how she looked, what she said, and all about her. With that promise he was content.

Irene almost longed to send clocks and watches away; the squire did nothing but wander from one to another, comparing them, and declaring they were all slow.

She was to be there by seven. At six Irene persuaded him to sit down and rest, while she read something from the Times to him. He took his favorite chair by the window; it was open now, and the bright sunlight fell upon beds of sprightly flowers; sweet scents perfumed the air. Birds in the adjacent grounds and lilies quivered while pouring out rich streams of perfume from their golden breasts; the sweet mignonette filled the south wind with its odors, and the squire, while he listened, looked at the fair beauty of earth and sky.

They did not hear the sound of carriage wheels, for she bade them take her to the back of the house; they did not notice the modest ring at the great gates; they heard and saw nothing until the drawing-room door opened, and a tall, slight figure, dressed in deep mourning, entered.

It was the squire who turned round, hearing the rustle of a woman's dress. He started from his chair with a cry those who heard never forgot.

"My God, my God! is that my child?"

She was by his side in a moment, kneeling at his feet, her head bowed in shame and sorrow, begging, praying that he would pardon her, for God had punished her sin—praying that he would love her, for her heart was breaking.

He raised her in his arms, and turned her face to the summer light.

Could it be Sybil—the bright, beautiful, charming child, who had ever been a fairy to him? This woman's white face had no youth, and little beauty. The violet eyes were dim, as though burning tears had washed away the light and color; the lips were pale that had been once like a scarlet jessamine bud—pale, with lines of sorrow round them; the patient face was worn and thin, grave and hopeless; even the sheen had gone from her golden hair.

As he looked, bitter words rose to the old man's lips; he would not utter them, lest they should pain her. With gentle hands he removed the heavy bonnet and cloak, then took the slight figure in his arms, shuddering to find how light and fragile it was, and laid her down upon the sofa.

Irene knelt down and knelt by her side there, covering the pallid cheeks with loving kisses and tears.

"I can not cry," said Sybil; "it seems to me I have no tears left!"

And those were the only words she ever uttered in reference to that miserable past.

The squire bent over her.

"It is worse than I thought," he said—"worse, a thousand times, than I thought! I can not believe that this is my Sybil."

How she lived through the next few days they never knew. She had reached home just in time. She was thoroughly exhausted—heart, soul, body and mind. She had suffered until she could suffer no more.

For long days she lay with her face turned from them, never speaking—unable to eat or to drink—only just alive—sometimes they thought dead, so great was the torpor and apathy that had fallen upon her—so great was the reaction from the extreme of misery to perfect rest.

What passed in her mind while she lay in that frequent chamber none around her knew. At the end of a week she recovered. The first thing that gave them hope was one morning, when the squire sent her a large bouquet of roses all wet with dew. She raised them from the pillow and buried her face in them, and there was a smile on her lips when she laid them down.

From that hour she grew better—so slowly as to give them many fears; but the time came when what seemed the shadow of Sybil Jocelyn was carried down to the drawing-room, and lay with pale features and yearning eyes riveted on the summer flowers—a slight, fragile figure, almost lost in the heavy black dress, her luxuriant hair hidden by the widow's cap.

They lavished tender love upon her and most gentle care; she recovered under it as a bruised flower raises its drooping leaves under the warm sunshine. Slowly but surely the delicate bloom returned to her face; the grave lines of sorrow vanished one by one; light and brightness came back to the violet eyes. Once or twice the squire's heart was gladdened by the sound of a laugh that reminded him of olden days; but that was after many weeks passed.

He did for her what he would have done for no one else—gave up all his cherished habits, and left Glynn. He took her to the Scottish lakes, to fair English cities, to picturesque Welsh villages, over the sea to the Emerald Isle; he would not take her abroad; he had more faith in Old England than anywhere else.

His faith was rewarded. She gradually recovered, the dark cloud passed away, the rain of her youth and beauty shone out again; it would have been well for her had she died in those days.

At the end of three months he brought her home again, almost as bright as ever.

Then she met Sir Rupert. He never forgot the shy, timid glance that seemed to say, "Forgive me for making that great mistake." She laid her hand in his, calling him her true, dear friend, and he was amply repaid by those few words for long years of love.

They were very watchful of her; if a shadow stole over her face, they dispelled it; in her presence, every one tried to be gay and cheerful. The squire seemed to have forgotten that long interregnum of six years, and life fell back into its old, happy channel at Glynn.

(To be continued).

SAFE-CRACKER FOILED.

Heroic Work of Constable Metzger Through a Vigilant Bookkeeper.

Barrie, Ont., June 9.—An attempt was made early yesterday morning to rob the local branch of the Bank of Commerce, but it failed. Between 1 and 2 o'clock Mr. Hamilton, the ledgerkeeper, who sleeps in the room at the rear of the bank, heard a slight noise at the back door, which opens into the lane next to the Bank of Toronto building. Getting up, he went silently over to the door and heard a key slipped into the lock and turned. The burglar found that he could get no further, so the door was barred, and expressed his disappointment with an oath. Mr. Hamilton then slipped out into the office to telephone to Alf. Swainland, watchman in the Bank of Toronto. As he did so he saw peering in at a window a well-dressed young fellow, who immediately disappeared.

After telephoning, Mr. Hamilton went outside and blew his whistle. G.T.R. Detective Reid, who was in a car at the station, and Night-watchman Morris came promptly to his assistance. Running into the lane, Reid made a grab at one of the men, but, instead of getting him, was hit over the head and then kicked in the stomach, so that he fell into the cellar of an adjoining building that is being repaired.

Morris made for another man, but he was too fast, and they both got away. Reid got some ugly cuts, which bled profusely.

G.T.R. Detective Cockburn said that he had noticed some suspicious characters around town for several days, and he believed they were working up the case for the men who were to do the safe-cracking.

FIREWORKS BLOWN UP.

Two Factories Demolished and a Good Deal of Damage Done—Loss Over $50,000.

New York, June 9.—Thirty-six buildings, comprising almost the entire plant of the Nordlinger-Chastain Fireworks Company at Grantwville, Richmond Borough, were blown to bits yesterday afternoon and the entire fireworks plant practically wiped out of existence. All of the buildings were destroyed within a space of five minutes, and, although the fire which followed lasted for several hours, the work was complete within a few minutes after the first detonation. No lives were lost, only three persons were injured, only two of them seriously. The loss on the buildings will probably not amount to over $2,500, as most of the structures were small and cheaply constructed. The loss on material, new and that made up into fireworks, will amount to over $50,000.

Payne Works Blown Up.

An explosion occurred at the manufacturing plant of the Payne Fireworks Company at Greendale, L.I., yesterday and resulted in the destruction of two manufacturing sheds and a small magazine. The magazine contained all the goods ready for shipment. One man was slightly injured, although there were several hundred people about the place at the time.

A BIG SENSATION.

Rev. Father Geoghegan's Case to Be Appealed—Surprising Evidence Promised.

Hamilton, June 9.—The Geoghegan case is to be reopened, and it is said the developments will be productive of a greater sensation than anything that has come known during the hearing of the affair before the court of triers. Mr. P. H. Crerar, who is acting for Rev. Father Geoghegan, has persuaded an appeal against the verdict of the court of triers to Bishop Dumoulin.

Mr. Crerar says in the appeal that the whole accusation of immorality, set up at the recent trial, is denied and new evidence of surprising character will be offered. This evidence, he felt sure, ought to clear his client. According to Mr. Crerar, Miss Hare, who made the accusation against Father Geoghegan, has retracted the charges. He claims to have a letter which he received from Miss Hare, and in which she intimates the charges were untrue and were made by her out of spite, because Father Geoghegan had been circulating objectionable remarks about her conduct.

The time for receiving the appeal is not up till June 14.

She Had Had Experience.

"Ah," he cried, kneeling at her feet, "say you will marry me, and I will be your devoted slave for life."

"Arise, Henry," she answered, "you will not do. That was what my first husband said, and before we had got fairly out of the church he began telling me how he wanted me to wear my hair."—Chicago [illegible]

THE ODORLESS CREMATORY CLOSETS.

I have been appointed Sole Agent for the Odorless Crematory Closet manufactured by the Crematry Closet and General Heating Co., of Hamilton.

This Closet has found a place in many of the best homes in the province, and all who have used it cannot speak too highly of its merits. Medical men speak of it from a sanitary point of view, claiming that, if health is any consideration, no home should be without one. Here are some of the

TESTIMONIALS

Allenton, March 1st, 1898.

I have had one of your "Crematory Closets" in use now for several weeks and am glad to be able to say that I have found it entirely satisfactory in every respect. I have not been able to detect the slightest odor from it at any time and would not be without it. I am sure it must prove a great convenience to people in the country, and in towns where water is not obtainable.

Yours respectfully, JAMES CONWAY.

Shaddick, February 20th, 1899.

I have used it for some time and find it particularly odorless. It is a long felt want and I believe it will become very popular especially in rural districts, towns and villages where wells are so frequently contaminated by the ordinary closets. I am, yours, etc.,

REVIEWS.

The June Canadian Magazine is an attractive one, containing a splendid short story by Gilbert Parker, three French-Canadian Sketches by different writers, two instalments of continued stories, and a number of splendid articles. One of the most interesting of the latter is entitled, With Rifle and Rod in the Moose Lands of Northern Ontario. It is illustrated with numerous photographs of waterfalls, rapids, canoeing experiences and camp-fire scenes. Another very attractive article is an illustrated description of our spring garden birds, by Mr. C. W. Nash, whose recent book on birds, issued by the Ontario Government, has attracted much attention.

One of the most important features of Harper's Weekly for the coming month is a series of articles on India by Julian Ralph. Mr. Ralph's name is a guarantee that his description of Lord and Lady Curzon in their gay and splendid state will be of great interest. The articles appear under the title An American Sovereign, and are fully illustrated by Mr. Weldon. The Conspirators, by Robert W. Chambers. It is of the same character and fully as clever as the Prisoner of Zenda.

The June number of Harper's Round Table contains the story that won first prize in the recent competition. Other features of the June number are Pirate or Privateer? a sea tale by George E. Walsh; Coney, a hunting story by F. H. Spearman; and several short stories. Dan Beard contributes a profusely illustrated article on The American Boy's House-Boat, containing all the plans, specifications, and diagrams necessary to enable any handy boy to construct a fine floating residence for himself.

Harper's Magazine for June contains The Rescue of the Whalers, A Sled Journey of Sixteen Hundred Miles in the Arctic Regions, by Lieutenant Ellsworth P. Bertholf, U.S.R.C.S.; The Vagrant, a story by Richard Harding Davis, illustrated by W. T. Smedley; The Century's Progress in Scientific Medicine, by Henry Smith Williams, M. D.; The Spanish-American War, Part V., The Fall of Santiago and the Port-to-Rican Campaign, by Henry Cabot Lodge, illustrated by R. F. Zogbaum, T. de Thulstrup, Guy Rose, Harry Fenn, H. C. Christy, and T. D. Walker; The Princess Xenia, a romance, Part III., by H. B. Marriott Watson, illustrated by T. de Thulstrup; The Story of the Dry Leaves, by Frederic Remington, illustrated by the author; Korean Inventions, by Homer Bezs Hulbert, F. R. G. S., illustrated by Guy Rose; Their Silver Wedding Journey, a novel, Part VI., by W. D. Howells, illustrated by W. T. Smedley; Quivira and the Wichitas, by James Mooney; The Mothers of Honore, a story by Mary Hartwell Catherwood, illustrated by W. B. Keith; Steadfast Propositions for Safe Navigation, by John Hyslop; Mr. Perkitt's Wife, a story, by Hulbert Fuller.

Remarkable Recovo.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled in her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefitted from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. For sale by James Lynch, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, large bottles 50 cents and $1.00.

Paris, June 9.—The civil tribunal of the Seine yesterday granted a divorce to Countess Esterhazy.

Did Neff Kill Himself?

Galt, Ont., June 9.—J. W. Neff of Dovis street, who lived alone and who was found dead in bed Wednesday morning by a neighbor, is supposed to have committed suicide. A post mortem revealed an ointment poison. Nothing could be found that had contained poison, or to show that he had taken it himself. The back door was open, with the key on the outside, and his bedroom window wide open. An inquest will be held.

Who Was Jack Castle.

Toronto, June 9.—A deputation of Niagara fruit-growers waited on Hon. John Dryden and the Premier at the Parliament buildings yesterday morning, to protest against the carrying out of the provisions of the San Jose Scale Act by the destruction of the trees infected with the scale. The deputation was composed of Rev. H. Smith and Messrs. William McLelland, W. H. Lee, James Currie, Jacob Servos, Charles Ball and James Carmichael. These gentlemen pressed their views on the Ministers with earnestness, after which the Ministers promised to consider the matter.

The deputation considered the act a failure, and wished the Government to introduce the hydrocyanic method of destroying the scale, the latter to furnish the tents and apparatus for the work.

Toronto millionaires favor accepting the American syndicate's offer for their milk routes, and appointed a committee to deal with the question.

Quebec's Many Names.

Quebec is known in history under several names. The first was Andilla; then Juana, after a Spanish prince. Fernandina came third, followed by Santiago and the Isle of Ave Maria. The original Indian name, Cubanacoan, signifying "where gold is found," was finally adopted, and usage shortened it to the first two syllables.

Who Was Jack Castle.

Paris received 365 name from its principal river, the Rio Paro, upon which stands the ancient city of Pararu. The Brazilian name para, however modified, is at all events a corruption of it also.

Quebec is an Algonquin term signifying "take care of the rock."

Kipling's Tunes.

Mr. William Sharp, an artist, says that Mr. Kipling confessed that he wrote all his verses while humming tunes, which were generally Irish. "I take up, for example," he said, "the 'Wearing of the Green,' and I hum it over and over, and the spirit moves me to write words to fit it." This is an interesting confession. It is quite in note-book that this thing is mentioned, that "Mandalay" goes to the tune of "Wearing of the Green." Try it:

Take me somewhere east of Suez, where the best is like the worst,
Where there aren't no Ten Commandments and a man can raise a thirst.

All the labor that has been spent by a hundred composers in setting "Mandalay" to music seems to have been wasted, for it was already "set."—Boston Transcript.

Trees and Thunderstorms.

It is useful to know what kind of trees are most likely to be struck by lightning, because trees afford shelter in thunderstorms, though a dangerous refuge, and they often grow near buildings. According to Mr. Alexander McAdie, the eminent meteorologist, the order of liability to be struck is represented by the following figures: Oak, 54; trees collectively—that is, in a clump—40; tall pine trees, 15, and beech, 1. The oak is therefore the worst and the beech the best shelter. After rain trees are not so apt to split with the stroke as before it.

DANGER IN SODA.

Serious Results Sometimes Follow Its Excessive Use.

Common soda is all right in its place and indispensable in the kitchen and for cooking and washing purposes, but it was never intended as a medicine, and people who use it as such will some day regret it.
